Mr. David Mitchell: The maximum evacuation time of 30 minutes, which is the time within which the muster and evacuation arrangements (including the launching and deployment of lifeboats and other life-saving appliances) must enable the ship to be evacuated, came into force on 1 July 1986 and there are no plans to alter it. The research programme referred to in my answer on 23 May is concerned with facilitating movement in, and escape from, a ship at high angles of heel and not with evacuation time. I expect to receive a report on this work by spring 1989.

North Sea Surveyor (Collision)

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he has taken to hold an inquiry into the collision on 7 May between the Danish-registered Pandalus and the North Sea Surveyor which resulted in the death of two fishermen; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: The collision involved two foreign vessels—the Danish fishing vessel Pandalus and the Norwegian survey ship North Sea Surveyor. The Danish and Norwegian authorities are conducting their own inquiries and surveyors from my Department are co-operating with them. The question of a fatal accident inquiry is a matter for the procurator fiscal.

Fishing Vessels (Collisions)

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many recorded collisions there have been between fishing vessels and other ships in the North sea in each of the past five years.

Mr. David Mitchell: The following table shows the numbers of collisions in the Department's records, between fishing vessels and other ships in the North sea, since 1983.

	Number
1984	5
1985	4
1987	2

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many meetings have been held between his officials and representatives of the Scottish fishing industry in connection with accidents or near misses of fishing boats and other seafaring vessels in each of the last five years; and if he will list such incidents in the Official Report.

Mr. David Mitchell: There has been one formal meeting between my officials and representatives of the Scottish fishing industry within the last five years devoted specifically to accidents or near misses of fishing boats and other seafaring vessels. And there have been a number of meetings at which accidents involving fishing vessels have been among the topics for discussion, notably those of the fishing industry safety group on which the Scottish industry is represented. This group meets regularly, and has held 11 meetings since April 1983.

Mobility Advice and Vehicle Information Service

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many disabled people have visited the mobility advice and vehicle information service since its foundation.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Since January 1986, 493 disabled people have attended for assessments and advice on driving and car adaptations; and a further 7,702 have been given advice by telephone or letter. In addition several hundred disabled people and professionals in the disability field have visited the centre as individuals or in groups.

Tachographs (Repairs)

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he proposes to introduce regarding the approval of tachograph repairers.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We have today issued a consultation paper setting out in detail proposals for a new scheme for approving tachograph repairers, following preliminary consultation last year. Copies are available in the Library.

PRIME MINISTER

National Health Service

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on co-ordination between the Department of Health and Social Security and the Scottish Office of Government policy towards the future development of the National Health Service, with particular reference to the inquiry currently in progress and its consideration of matters of particular application to Scotland; and what representations she has received on this subject.

The Prime Minister: The circumstances of the Health Service in Scotland will be taken fully into account in our review of the National Health Service. The Scottish Office and the Department of Health and Social Security are closely in touch on these matters.

Year 2000 (Celebration Plans)

Mr. Butler: To ask the Prime Minister if she will report on progress of the Government's plans to celebrate the year 2000.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Basildon (Mr. Amess) on 23 February 1988 at column 126.

Gibraltar (Shootings)

Mr. Soley: To ask the Prime Minister whether any Government Department in the United Kingdom or its representatives abroad were consulted about the decision to delay the inquest on the three Irish Republican Army members shot in Gibraltar; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The decision to delay the inquest was the coroner's alone, although it was known for some time before his announcement that he was considering this.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Prime Minister why the decision to delay the inquest on the three Irish Republican Army members shot in Gibraltar was announced from No. 10 Downing street in advance of any formal announcement by the coroner in Gibraltar; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: A decision by the coroner to postpone the inquest had been widely forecast in the press. My press office understood that it had already been announced, as indeed it was later that same day. The decision to delay the inquest was the coroner's alone.

ENERGY

CEGB (Energy Efficiency)

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will direct the Central Electricity Generating Board to undertake investment in energy efficiency programmes, so as to reduce the need for its growing programme of pressurised water reactor nuclear power stations.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The electricity supply industry already promotes the efficient use of energy through schemes in the domestic sector such as Economy 7, Budget Warmth, Energy Wise, Medallion and Civic Shield awards; and in the industrial and commercial sectors through Energy Management in Lighting, PEP and BETA awards.

Petroleum Production Licences

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if there is a minimum agreed work obligation linked to all petroleum production licences.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Most licences in practice include a work obligation, but there is no standard programme.

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he varies or amends obligations entered into with companies to whom petroleum production licences have been granted exclusively.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer my right hon. Friend gave him on 5 May 1988 at columns 559-60, which details the circumstances in which amendments or variations are usually made.

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if Gazette notices are required inviting applications for petroleum production licences which have been surrendered.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Surrendered areas which it was proposed to offer for relicensing in a future licensing round would be included in an announcement of the round made by means of parliamentary written statement, press notice and Gazette notice. Where the licence has been replaced by another form of licence, there would not be a notice inviting applications for the area.

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy on what basis his Department decides to replace surrendered licences with different types of licences.

Mr. Peter Morrison: When considering applications for replacement of surrendered licences with different types of licences, I expect applicants to meet the requirements of the relevant regulations and to establish that it would be appropriate to award them the licence.

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what mechanisms exist, where the holder of a petroleum production licence seeks to have it extended, for other applicants to be considered for the rights conferred by that licence.

Mr. Peter Morrison: For certain forms of production licence, I have a discretion, set out in the relevant regulations, to extend the term. I would consider all the circumstances of the case before deciding whether to extend the term. If it was decided that the licence should not be extended, then the area in question would normally be made available in a future licensing round.

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if it is the practice of his Department to notify owners of land affected when an extension is sought for an existing petroleum production licence;

(2) if it is the practice of his Department to notify owners of land affected when the holder of a petroleum production licence seeks to have the licence altered materially.

Mr. Peter Morrison: No. I refer my hon. Friend to the answers given by my right hon. Friend on 5 May 1988 at column 558. A petroleum licence by itself does not confer on the licence holder any rights over the freeholder's land, and the position would not change if the licence were extended.

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy by what the Petroleum (Production) Regulations 1976 (S.I. 1976 No. 1129) were replaced when superseded; and in what ways the regulations were varied.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The regulations referred to by my hon. Friend were amended by SIs 1978/929 and 1980/721 and then replaced in their entirety so far as the grant of new licences is concerned by the Petroleum (Production) Regulations 1982. In respect of seaward areas, the 1982 regulations have been amended by SIs 1984/397 and 1986/1021. For landward areas, the 1982 regulations were in turn superseded insofar as the grant of new licences was concerned by the Petroleum (Production) (Landward Areas) Regulations 1984, which are still in force. Details of the new system introduced by the 1984 regulations were given in the 1984 report to Parliament by the then Secretary of State for Energy on the development of the oil and gas resources of the United Kingdom, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how his Department notifies freehold owners of land that it is the Department's intention to grant or issue a petroleum production licence in respect of their land.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given of 5 May 1988 by my right hon. Friend at column 558. My hon. Friend wil also wish to note that information about the area which will be covered by new licences is given when my Department publishes a press release following every petroleum licensing round, showing the geographical areas over which I intend to issue the new licences. A notice is also published in the London Gazette giving the relevant co-ordinates and/or describing the extent of the areas which will be covered by the licences.

Coal

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he expects the United Kingdom will be self-sufficient in its coal needs in 1992.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Both the demand for coal and the share of that demand supplied by United Kingdom sources will depend upon the United Kingdom industry's ability to compete with other fuels and with imported coal. The Government have every confidence that the British coal industry will take the necessary measures to enable it to become fully competitive.

Equal Opportunities

Mr Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what action he has taken to remedy past inequalities in employment practices in his Department, in compliance with the codes of the Commission for Racial Equality and the Equal Opportunities Commission, respectively.

Mr. Parkinson: The good practice set out in the codes published by the Commission for Racial Equality and the Equal Opportunities Commission underpin the employment policies that operate within my Department. For example, recruitment advertisements are now placed with selected newspapers from the ethnic minority press as well as local newspapers; opportunities are available for female staff to attend women only development courses; and flexible working arrangements encourage those with domestic responsibilities to continue in paid employment.

Energy Pricing

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will ask the European Commission to investigate unfair competition in energy pricing in member states.

Mr. Parkinson: With the support of all member states of the Community, the Commission has taken an initiative to identify obstacles to a single energy market. They include energy pricing practices.

Pit Closures

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will make it his policy to support economic development measures for north Nottinghamshire aimed at its recovery from the effects of pit closures.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Government have established a wide range of measures aimed at providing employment opportunities in areas hit by closure. These include the enterprise initiative of the Department of Trade and Industry, the programmes of the Manpower Services Commission, the activities of British Coal Enterprise Ltd., the advisory and counselling services of the small firms service, and the encouragement of local enterprise agencies.

Coal Mining Subsidence

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will delay the date of publication of his Department's consultative document "Coal Mining Subsidence—Compensation".

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Department of Energy's consultation paper "Coal Mining Subsidence Compensation: Proposals for Legislation" was issued on Friday 29 April, as referred to in column 334 on 29 April.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will meet a deputation of local authority representatives from Nottinghamshire to discuss compensation for damage caused by coal mining subsidence.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I welcome the opportunity to learn the views of the local authorities in Nottinghamshire on coal mining subsidence compensation when they respond to the consultation document on the subject issued by my Department on 29 April.

North Sea Oil Production Platforms

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he has given further consideration to the abandonment policy for North sea oil production platforms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Part I of the Petroleum Act 1987 provides a framework for regulating abandonment and the Government have also played an active part in the development of international guidelines and standards in the International Maritime Organisation. Abandonment of offshore installations on the United Kingdom continental shelf will be considered on a case-by-case basis, taking account of all relevant factors including safety of navigation, fishing patterns, the protection of the marine environment, technical complexity and cost.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Cash Limits

Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether any change has been agreed in the 1988-89 cash limits for the Overseas Development Administration.

Mr. Chris Patten: Subject to parliamentary approval of the summer supplementary estimate, the cash limit for the overseas aid vote (class II, vote 5) will be increased from £1,221,114,000 to £1,223,114,000. This increase covers the higher level of contribution to the International Monetary Fund enhanced structural adjustment facility announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 14 December 1987, at column 371. The increase will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

ENVIRONMENT

Ministerial Duties

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many meetings with United Kingdom Nirex Ltd. the Minister for Sport, the hon. Member for Lewisham, East (Mr. Moynihan) has attended in the course of his official duties in the last year; and if he will list them.

Mr. Moynihan: I met the chairman of Nirex on 22 October 1987.

Pollution

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what guidelines he follows in assessing the economic availability of the best available technology in relation to point sources discharges into the North sea;

(2) if he will list those toxic substances that are likely to accumulate in living organisms and which should be controlled by emission standards based on the best available technology.

Mr. Moynihan: The principal criterion currently governing the setting of discharge consents is the need to protect the aquatic environment and safeguard legitimate uses of water, normally by reference to particular quality objectives or standards for receiving waters.

However, I announced on 18 November that the Government intend to introduce an additional requirement for industrial processes discharging significant quantities of certain dangerous substances to use the best available technology not entailing excessive cost in order to minimise inputs of those substances. Detailed proposals, including how such a requirement might be applied, and to which substances, will be included in a forthcoming consultation paper.

Water Authorities (Finance)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the sums of free reserves available currently to each water authority over and above the estimated costs of fulfilling the recommendations of the Select Committee on Environment as stated in its report on river and estuary pollution; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: In the water authorities' accounts, the amounts shown in the balance sheet as "reserves" represent retained profit which has already been deployed to finance investment and do not therefore represent funds which are free to finance investment in later years. Details of the funding of the investment of each water authority are shown in the source and application of funds statement in their accounts which are laid before Parliament annually. My right hon. Friend expects to respond to the Select Committee's report shortly. This will take account of the financial implications of its recommendations.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each financial year for each water authority since their inception the amount owed to creditors at the end of each financial year (a) in real terms, measured against the retail price index and (b) as a cash sum; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The information is shown in the tables below. The amounts of loan outstanding at the end of each accounting period is based upon water authorities' annual accounts and may also be found in the Water Authorities Association annual publication, "Waterfacts".

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each financial year for each water authority since its inception the capital investment for each both (a) in real terms measured against the retail prices index and (b) as a cash sum; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The information requested is shown in the tables. Capital expenditure figures are drawn from water authority annual accounts. Real terms capital investment has been calculated with reference to the public works non-road index. This is an index specifically applied to water industry capital investment and as such is accepted as a more meaningful deflator of capital expenditure than the RPI.

Water Industry (Privatisation)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what his Department estimates will be the result of privatisation on the debt burdens of the current water authorities; and what effect this will have on the Government's policy towards water authorities being self financing;

(2) what information his Department currently holds on the likely dividends to shareholders resulting from water privatisation;

(3) what his Department estimates will be the gross yield per annum of dividends to shareholders, assuming the whole water industry is privatised simultaneously, exempting those aspects of it which will be the responsibility of the National Rivers Authority;

(4) what his Department estimates will be the effect on overheads and administrative costs of the water industry as a result of (a) changes in executive salaries and (b) registration and servicing of shareholders; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: It would be premature to speculate about the magnitude of the sums involved in the questions raised by the hon. Member.

Rating Reform

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the per capita redistribution proceeds of the classified business rate will be calculated only on the basis of those adults registered to pay the community charge in a local authority area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: Our present intention is that the sums available from non-domestic rates should be distributed by reference to the best estimate of the registrable population making allowance for exempt persons and students, who will pay only 20 per cent. of the community charge. We intend to consult the local authority associations about these proposals.

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what will be the percentage increase or decrease in rate payments which will be paid by businesses and proprietors of commercial and industrial premises as a result of the introduction of the uniform business rate, in the following constituencies (a) Amber Valley, (b) Mid-Worcestershire, (c) West Lancashire, (d) Staffordshire, Moorlands, (e) Hendon, South, (f) Darlington and (g) Fylde.

Mr. Howard: If a national non-domestic rate had been in operation in 1987-88 at the then average level of 224·1p, general rates in the named constituency areas would have been changed as follows:

	1987-88 Per cent.
Amber Valley	−22
Mid Worcestershire
Redditch	+11
Wychavon	+14
West Lancashire	− 1
Staffordshire Moorlands	+ 1
Hendon South	+21
Darlington	−17
Fylde	− 1

Liverpool (Visit)

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the Under-Secretary of State's visit to Liverpool.

Mr. Chope: I visited Liverpool on Monday 16 May for a meeting with the Merseyside residuary body. Discussions centred on the RB's progress towards wind up, scheduled for March 1989.

Bathing Water Survey

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Wolverhampton, North East (Mrs. Hicks) on 5 May, Official Report, columns 571-77, on what date he will place in the Library a detailed summary of the results of the bathing water survey.

Mr. Moynihan: Within a few weeks.

Barn Owls

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide estimates to show the change in numbers of barn owls in England and Wales over the last 20 years.

Mr. Moynihan: The only available figures for England and Wales are a survey in 1932 which showed a breeding population of just over 12,000 pairs and the Hawk Trust's barn owl survey, taken over the period 1982-85, which showed some 3,750 pairs.

Sporting Events (Violence)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on the implications for his initiatives to reduce violence at sporting events of the refusal of Torquay United FC to relocate its match against Swansea on 28 May.

Mr. Moynihan: A representative of Swansea City supporters club telephoned my officials on 24 May. We have made inquiries of the Football League and the police and my concerns have been made clear to them. However, it is for the Football League and the police to decide whether there is a case for relocating this match. I have been assured that the police are satisfied that they have made appropriate arrangements to deal with potential problems. They are aware of the possible problems and have prepared a contingency plan to cope with them. The situation will, however, continue to be monitored by the police and their policing arrangements will be reviewed in the light of any further information they receive.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of how many councils with waste disposal responsibility in England have terms of contract which will be affected by the recent court ruling in the case of Torfaen borough council v. ReChem plc; and what representations he has received about the implications of this judgment.

Mr. Moynihan: The judgment made on 16 September 1987 in the case Regina v. ReChem International Ltd. concerned the validity of a condition in a licence for waste disposal under part 1 of the Control of Pollution Act 1974. Under the 1974 Act, it is the responsibility of waste disposal authorities to issue such licences, and it is for each authority to satisfy itself that any conditions in the licence are valid and enforceable. Licences do not come before the Secretary of State except on appeal. I do not, therefore, have the information to assess how many licences may be affected by the ReChem case. I have received no representations about the implications of the judgment.

Residential Development

Mr. Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the proportion of planning appeals he has allowed for residential development for schemes of (a) 100 houses and under and (b) over 100 houses (i) nationally, (ii) in the south-east planning region and (iii) in Kent, over the most recent convenient 12-month period.

Mr. Waldegrave: I will write to my hon. Friend.

BWB Freight Depots (Sale)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what considerations were taken into account in deciding which bid was successful in the sale of the eight freight depots by British Waterways Board to Leggett Freightways; what conditions of sale were offered by the Leggett Freightways which enhanced the employment conditions of British Waterways Board employees over and above those provided by statute; and why the sale was spread over five accounting years.

Mr. Moynihan: In assessing bids, the British Waterways Board took into account all relevant considerations, including the financial basis of the bid, the nature of the firm's interest and the implications for BWB employees.

The bid from Leggett Freightways, as well as being the most financially advantageous for the board, provided the best prospects for the long-term future of the employees concerned. Their conditions of service on transfer will be unchanged in accordance with the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981. For pensions, which are not covered by the regulations, employees will initially remain in the BWB scheme. Leggett Freightways has undertaken to introduce within six months a scheme of its own which will provide comparable benefits at comparable levels of contribution.

The arrangements for payment of the purchase price over five years compare favourably on the basis of net present value with the terms offered in other bids.

ID Investment Development AG

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment pursuant to the answer of 20 April, Official Report, column 493, regarding the conveyance of Heveningham Hall to ID Investment Development AG, what information he has as to the identity of the main shareholders in that company.

Mr. Moynihan: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Planning

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many people are employed in planning in his Department;

(2) what is the total annual cost of the planning function at his Department;

(3) how many people are employed in regional planning in his Department;

(4) what is the total annual cost of regional planning in his Department.

Mr. Ridley: I will write to my hon. Friend.

SERPLAN

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many people are employed at Serplan;.

(2) what is the cost per annum of Serplan.

Mr. Ridley: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Tenants (Milton Keynes)

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will allow a ballot of tenants in Milton Keynes corporation on the transfer of housing management functions back to the corporation.

Mrs. Roe: I will write to the hon. Member.

Racial Equality

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to enable councils in Great Britain to refuse to contract work to companies and firms which are discovered to have poor records on racial equality in the work force.

Mr. Chope: I will write to the hon. Member.

Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the current membership and affiliations of the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee; and what criteria are used for making appointments to the Committee.

Mr. Moynihan: I will write to the hon. Member.

Cash Limits

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any changes to announce to his Department's cash limits or the running cost limit for 1988-89.

Mr. Ridley: The cash limit for Class X, Vote 5 (Department of the Environment: administration) has been reduced by £0·160 million from £123·597 million to £123·437 million. This results from the transfer of responsibility for payments to the Post Office for issuing game licences from my Department to the Home Office. The departmental running costs limit has also been reduced by £0·160 million from £155·222 million to £155·062 million.

The cash limit for Class X, Vote 6 (rate support grants, England) has been reduced by £400 million from £10,224·200 million to £9,824·200 million. The latest estimate of block grant payable in respect of 1988-89 is £8,938 million, £533 million less than provided in the settlement and hence in the original vote estimate. However, there are indications that this underclaim will reduce later in the year and in the light of this and other information I consider a reduction of £400 million to be appropriate.

The cash limit for Class X, Vote 9 (sale of shares in water services plcs etc.) has been reduced by £60,000 from £2,500,000 to £2,440,000. This is to provide for expenditure to be incurred by the Secretary of State for Wales on advice relating to the privatisation of the Welsh water authority.

London Docklands Development Corporation

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report the names of consultants appointed by the London Docklands development corporation in the last financial year, together with the nature of the contract, and indicating those cases where the auditors have found no evidence of formal competition.

Mr. Trippier [pursuant to his reply, 2 November 1987, column 598.]: The LDDC let contracts to 140 consultants in the 1986-87 financial year, at a total cost of £10·9 million. The external auditors, Messrs Ernst and Whinney, have not found any cases during their audit which fail to meet the guidelines on competition. The consultants appointed during 1986-87 are identified in a list which has been placed in the Library by the type of expertise they provided.

The LDDC also let contracts to 145 consultants in the financial year 1985-86, at a total cost of £7·9 million. The external auditors, Messrs Robson Rhodes, reported 40 cases where the full documentary evidence of the competitive process that had been carried out was not always available to those ratifying appointments. The LDDC has made it clear, however, that such evidence was always kept on file, and was available for inspection if requested. A list of these contracts has been placed in the Library.

Housing Defects

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Government have completed their consultations on the proposed new expenditure limits for grant eligible reinstatement works under the housing defects legislation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his answer, 5 May 1988, column 567.]: The order made on 3 May (1988 No. 820), introducing the new grant-eligible expenditure limits for repairs under the housing defects legislation, contained certain errors. My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Wales have therefore made a second order (1988 No. 923) which ensures that the correct limits come into force, as intended, on Tuesday 31 May 1988. My officials are dealing with this in their letter to local authorities, home owners' groups and repairers.

Sporting Events

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sports events the Minister with responsibility for Sport, the hon. Member for Lewisham, East (Mr. Moynihan), has attended in the course of his official duties in the last year; and if he will list them.

Americium-241

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he possesses further to that included in the 1987 annual report, to April 1987, of the radiochemical inspectorate, concerning the whereabouts of a consignment of Americium-241 which disappeared en route from the United States of America to Amersham International; what investigations have been undertaken by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 23 May 1988]: A full investigation was carried out by inspectors of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, who interviewed employees of the agencies concerned and arranged for an extensive physical search of the agencies' premises to be carried out. Despite those efforts, the radioactive source was not located. The freight handling agencies have been instructed to notify HMIP immediately if the package is found. Steps have been taken to ensure that the carriers concerned are fully aware of the requirements of the Storage in Transit Exemption Order 1962, and I am considering whether any amendments to that Order are required.

SCOTLAND

Post-operative Deaths

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to announce funding for a confidential inquiry into post-operative deaths along the lines of the one recently carried out in England and Wales.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This matter is currently receiving consideration.

Wage Rates

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average hourly wage for (a) full-time female employees, (b) part-time female employees, (c) full-time male employees, and (d) part-time male employees, in Scotland since 1985, in cash and real terms.

Mr. Lang: The following information has been derived from the new earnings survey, which is conducted by the Department of Employment in April each year, and covers a 1 per cent. sample of employees who are members of PAYE schemes.

Bathing Water

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the reply on bathing water in Scotland on 5 May Official Report, column 536, on what date he now expects to publish a full report for the 1986 and 1987 seasons.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Development Department expects to publish the report in June.

Rating Reform

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many inquiries his Department has received about the poll tax; and how long it is taking on average to answer each inquiry.

Mr. Lang: Since May last year, when the Abolition of Domestic Rates Etc. (Scotland) Bill was enacted, my right hon. and learned Friend has received about 2,200 inquiries about the community charge, over half since the publication of the booklet "You and the Community Charge". The length of time taken to deal with each inquiry depends on its nature.

Technical, Vocational and Educational Initiative

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland to what extent the technical, vocational and educational initiative programme has been implemented in each education authority in Scotland; and whether it is optional or compulsory for pupils in each area to participate.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The following table shows the position as it will be from autumn 1988:

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library copies of any minutes of all meetings which took place in 1981, 1982, and 1987, between the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State responsible for health and the Scottish Trades Union Congress.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No.

Pre-court Diversion Schemes

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he is yet in a position to publish the findings of his Department's research into pre-court diversion schemes.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to her on 9 February 1988. The second report to which I referred has not yet been received.

Mr. Lang: The number of unemployed claimants under the age of 18 in the Renfrew, West and Inverclyde parliamentary constituency on 14 April 1988 (the latest date for which information is available) was 149. Details of those unemployed claimants who have not benefited from a Government training or employment scheme are not collected.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Discontinued Cases

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the number of cases discontinued, by area, by the Crown Prosecution Service; and if he will break them down by type of offence, for the last 12 months.

The Attorney-General: During the 12-month period ending 31 March 1988, a total of 109,580 defendants had the cases against them wholly discontinued by the Crown Prosecution Service, either under the formal provisions of section 23 of the Prosecution of Offences Act, 1985, (under which section proceedings may be discontinued at an early stage by written notice to the magistrates court and to the defendant, without any further court hearing) or by no evidence being offered at court. The table shows the figures for each area. Records of the figures broken down by type of offence are not maintained, and the information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

During the same 12-month period, a total of 57,760 cases were referred by the police to the Crown Prosecution Service for advice prior to any charges being made. In a significant proportion of these cases, the Crown Prosecution Service advised that no proceedings should be instituted.

Torfaen Borough Council (Court Case)

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Attorney-General on what date he received a letter from Torfaen borough council about the recent court decision in the case involving the council and ReChem plc; on what date an acknowledgement was sent; when he hopes to be able to send a substantive reply; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The initial correspondence from the office of the solicitor to the borough of Torfaen was received on 26 January 1988 and was formally acknowledged on that day. The points of law raised by the ruling to which the hon. Member refers have since been considered by officials and are under consideration by me. I expect to reach my decision shortly, whereupon it will be communicated to the borough solicitor.

"Spycatcher"

Mr. Roger King: To ask the Attorney-General what action he is taking against bookshops found to be selling "Spycatcher".

The Attorney-General: The organised sale or distribution of "Spycatcher" is at risk of being a contempt of court. In my capacity as a law enforcement officer, I shall continue to direct the sending of letters warning bookshops found to be selling the book of the risk and requiring them to withdraw the book from sale and to undertake not to resume sale of the book unless or until permitted by law to do so. This week I have directed the sending of five such letters.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Car Park (Passes)

Mr. Higgins: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will state the number of current passes for the House of Commons car park which have been issued to each category of person entitled to such parking passes; and whether particular places are for the use only of hon. Members.

Mr. Wakeham: The information requested is as follows:

Category	Permit holders	Current permits
1.	Right hon. and hon. Members (Levels 1, 2 and 3)	606
2.	Officers of the House (Level 5)	112
3.	Members' Secretaries with over 15 years service (Marked bays on Level 3)	25
4.	Late night staff (Levels 4 and 5)	298
5.	Staff of the House with over 15 years service (Levels 4 and 5)	44
6.	Palace of Westminster photographic pass holders on Fridays and non-sitting days only (Levels 4 and 5)	474

The top three levels of the underground car park are reserved for the use of hon. Members; however the Services Committee has long recognised the convenience to hon. Members of being able to transfer their car parking permit to any Palace of Westminster photographic pass holder acting on their behalf.

Televising (Lighting)

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Lord President of the Council what plans he has for the holding of a lighting demonstration in the Chamber in connection with the proposed experiment in the televising of proceedings of the House.

Mr. Wakeham: Arrangements have been made for the BBC and ITN to hold a lighting demonstration in the Chamber at 10.30 am on Tuesday 14 June. All right hon. and hon. Members are invited to attend.

Further details are given in a letter from the chief political adviser, BBC, to the Clerk of the Select Committee on the Televising of Proceedings of the House. A copy has been placed in the Library. The text of the letter is as follows:

"This will confirm our discussions about the lighting demonstration for the televising of the Commons. We have agreed that this should take place on Tuesday, 14th June at 10.30 am.

The broadcasters (BBC and ITN) will arrange for a demonstration of the different types of lighting which would provide adequate pictures for television companies. We will also have in the Chamber a camera, a remote control mechanism and a possible "hide" for these.

As you will understand, it is not possible for such a demonstration to be mounted in anything other than a workmanlike way. The lighting will be mounted on scaffolding poles. Because we shall be demonstrating more than one lighting type, there will be more lights than would be needed for the final version. There will be no opportunity to make any concession to æsthetics. We can only give an indication of what options could be available. The final installation would be very different.

I am worried that, if these limitations are not understood, it might be thought that the broadcasters were contemplating some insensitive installation. This is not so and I wanted to emphasise this to the Committee at this point.

We will be in touch with the Serjeant-at-Arms and we will ask the PSA about the practical details for the work. The PSA will put in the scaffolding over the weekend and we will test out the lighting systems. The scaffolding will be left in on the Monday, and we shall put in the lights overnight Monday/Tuesday in preparation for the demonstration. We will then remove the lights for Tuesday's sitting. The PSA will be requested to remove the scaffolding on Tuesday night, so that by Wednesday, 15th, there should be no trace of us."

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

European Directives

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report a list of the proposed European directives that he has vetoed in the Council of Ministers since 1979.

Mrs. Chalker: The Council secretariat does not keep records of votes on a national basis. The information requested is therefore not readily available and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Foreign Honours and Medals

Mr. Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether British nationals are permitted to receive and wear official foreign honours awarded later than five years after the end of the last war.

Mr. Mellor: The Foreign and Commonwealth Orders ('B') Regulations which govern the acceptance and wearing by persons not in the service of the Crown of orders, decorations and medals conferred by Heads or Governments of foreign states and by members of the Commonwealth overseas of which the Queen is not the Head of State stipulate inter alia that "Permission will be not given in respect of Orders relating to services wholly rendered more than five years before the question of eligibility for permission is raised."

Similar rules apply to persons in the service of the Crown.

Mr. Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether British nationals are permitted to receive and wear foreign commemorative medals under military regulations A, "Awards of Medals".

Mr. Mellor: I shall write to my right hon. Friend as soon as possible, and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Disarmament

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards each of the recommendations of the United Nations Association for the forthcoming United Nations special session on disarmament, a copy of which has been forwarded to him.

Mr. Mellor: I assume that the recommendations referred to are those in the paper submitted by the United Nations Association to the chairman of the UNSSD III preparatory committee on 14 January. We share the UNA's belief that disarmament and security are indivisible. The United Kingdom is committed to the search for increased security at lower levels of armaments. We look to the United Nations special session for a balanced and constructive discussion of all aspects of arms control and disarmament. We support the United Nations as the leading forum for worldwide international co-operation. We seek to make the maximum use of the United Nations to promote the settlement of disputes, to preserve peace and to spread the rule of law. We have always supported the United Nation's peace-keeping efforts, and have supported the increased use of the secretary-general's "good offices".

Militarily significant, verifiable and politically binding confidence-building measures can contribute to breaking down barriers of mistrust and to reducing the risk of miscalculation, and as such are an essential pre-requisite for meaningful arms control. However, we see no value in purely declaratory measures.

We have warmly and publicly endorsed the central message of the Brundtland report that the way forward lies in sustainable development based on economic growth.

We are committed to the search for balanced, equitable and verifiable measures of arms control. Without such agreements, however, the Government do not believe that a case has been made for conversion which would require any Government action at present.

We played a full part at the conference on disarmament and development; we are committed to both disarmament and development each for its own sake. However there is no simple, automatic link between the two goals. In particular we do not believe that progress in one should depend on progress on the other. Our reservations about the final document were expressed in our closing statement at the conference.

On a United Nations verification agency I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes) on 23 May.

Under chapter VII of the United Nations charter the Security Council is empowered to take measures (for example, arms embargoes) to maintan or restore international peace and security. The imposition of such measures is, of course, subject to agreement in the Security Council.

We believe that an arms sales register complied under the auspices of the United Nations could in principle establish a means of monitoring, in a universal and non-discriminatory manner, measures taken to restrain the accumulation of conventional arms. But to be effective such a register must be universal and not simply based on the production, import and export of arms of the western countries alone. We do not believe that the imposition of timetables on arms control negotiations is a useful of effective way of conducting them.

The Government are fully committed to implementation of article VI of the non-proliferation treaty. We have consistently urged and worked for constructive arms control negotiations. But we firmly believe that the first step towards nuclear disarmament must be effective bilateral negotiations between the superpowers, who possess 95 per cent. of the world's nuclear weapons. We therefore strongly support the United States—USSR arms control negotiations at Geneva whose objectives are wholly consistent with the obligations assumed under article VI.

Our policy towards a comprehensive test ban treaty was outlined in the reply of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to two questions by the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) on 30 November 1987.

An effective verifiable global ban on chemical weapons is a United Kingdom priority, and we are working hard at the Geneva negotiations to achieve this.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Research and Development

Mr. Blair: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what was the level of his Department's support for research and development by region, for each financial year from 1979-80 to 1987-88 (a) as a percentage of the total budget and (b) in cash terms;

(2) what was the level of his Department's support for research and development for each of the counties of Cleveland, Cumbria, Durham, Northumberland, Tyne and Wear and East Sussex for each year from 1979-80 to 1987-88 in cash terms.

Mr. Butcher: This information is not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what action he has taken to remedy past inequalities in employment practices in his Department, in compliance with the codes of the Commission for Racial Equality and the Equal Opportunities Commission, respectively.

Mr. Butcher: The DTI agreed the adoption of policies on race relations and equality of opportunity for women with its departmental trade unions in 1984. These policies take account of the codes of practice issued under the Race Relations Act 1976 and the Equal Opportunity Act 1975. Policy statements were circulated to all staff in 1984. Copies of these have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. All DTI staff have been made aware of their personal responsibility to ensure quality of opportunity. Guidance is given, in particular, to those who report on others performance; those who select for recruitment, training, promotion and allocation to duties; and to managers, about the need to guard against unfair discrimination. Some examples of action taken are:

Appointment of an equal opportunity officer in 1984.
An ethnic monitoring survey of all staff has been undertaken with a view to providing a database against which progress of various groups can be monitored.
Staff who face changes in domestic responsibilities may be helped to remain in, or return to, employment by special leave arrangements, part-time working and so on.
The Department provides a one-week women-only management course.
Grievance procedures are clearly laid down.

Carbadox and Olaquindox

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what information and at what level of disaggregation his Department holds of the volume of the compounds (a) Carbadox and (b) Olaquindox which is (i) produced and (ii) sold in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Atkins: This information is not available.

Regional Development Grant

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster at what level of hourly remuneration the threshold for jobs is to be regarded as being created for the purposes of regional development grant.

Mr. Atkins: In determining the number of jobs to be provided by a project for the purposes of regional development grant, the Secretary of State takes account of all the circumstances of the case, including whether the published criteria of the scheme are met; whether remuneration is by commission or salary/wages, or both; and the rates of pay. There is no particular threshold in relation to the rates of pay.

Pen Tops (Safety)

Mr. Janner: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects the British Standards Institute to develop a new safety standard for pen tops; at what stage is its investigation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: The British Standards Institution has set up a committee to develop a new standard. It held its first meeting in April and a further one will take place in June at which it is hoped to finalise a draft. This will then be circulated for public comment before an expected publication date in December. The standard will be considered for approval for the purpose of the general safety requirement provisions of the Consumer Protection Act 1987.

Airbus

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what rate of exchange between the pound sterling and the United States dollar was assumed in deciding the launch aid provided by his Department towards the Airbus A330 and A340 projects.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Information on the rate of exchange assumed between sterling and the United States dollar, and indeed other aspects of the discussions with the Government on British Aerospace's application for launch aid for the A330/A340 programme, is commercially confidential.

Regional Enterprise Grant

Mr. Page: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what arrangements are being made for expenditure provision for regional enterprise grants for innovation in Scotland and Wales and for estimated receipts from the European regional development fund; and what consequential changes to his Department's cash limits for 1988-89 will be made.

Mr. Atkins: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised and supplementary estimates, the cash limit, for Class V, Vote 2 will be reduced by £4,460,000 from £574,715,000 to £570,255,000 to cover transfers to the Welsh Office's Class XVII, Vote 2 and the Industry Department for Scotland's Class XVI, Vote 3 of provision for expenditure on regional enterprise grants for innovation projects, and to take account of latest estimates for receipts from the European regional development fund.

As a result, the cash limit for Class XVII Vote 2 will increase by £600,000 from £76,100,000 to £76,700,000 and the cash limit for Class XVI, Vote 3 will increase by £1,100,000 from £135,854,000 to £136,954,000.

No net increase to public expenditure results from these changes.

Departmental Cash Limit

Mr. Page: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether any changes will be made to his Department's cash limit for 1988-89 for Class V, Vote 8.

Mr. Maude: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised estimates, the cash limit for Class V, Vote 8 (expenses related to the privatisation of the British Steel Corporation) will be reduced by £1,199,000 leaving a token provision of £1,000.

NATIONAL FINANCE

VAT

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the outcome of the negotiations with the European Commission on the value added tax threshold.

Mr. Lilley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Cambridgeshire, South-West (Sir A. Grant) at column 874 on 22 January.

Customs and Excise

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the financial and manpower savings in Her Majesty's Customs and Excise as a result of the implementation of the Customs 88 project.

Mr. Lilley: The Customs 88 changes were introduced throughout the European Community on 1 January 1988 with the aim of simplifying and facilitating European trade. They were not designed to achieve financial and manpower savings in customs administration and did not have that effect.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Government's commitment to trade facilitation as an objective of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise service.

Mr. Lilley: The Government are fully committed to trade facilitation as an objective of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise and are satisfied that it is given due weight in the management of the Department's activities.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion as a percentage of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise financial and manpower resources is devoted to the fast clearance of international traffic, to preventive checks and to collection of dues and duties.

Mr. Lilley: The latest completed figures are for the year ended 31 March 1987 as published in the last report of the Commissioners of Customs and Excise. The figures are:

	Percentage cost of administration	Percentage of manpower
Customs duties including freight clearance and revenue collection work	16	14
CAP work	1½	1½
Preventive work	18	14

It is not expected that the figures for 1987-88 or for the current year 1988-89 will show significant variations from this, although the proportion of preventive work will reflect the increased manpower introduced last year and planned for this year. Fast clearance is not identified separately within the allocations set out in the table.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement as to the working priorities of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, indicating the role of trade facilitation as part of its ongoing activities.

Mr. Lilley: The working priorities of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise are clearly set out in the board's management plan for 1988-89, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Trade facilitation is a major consideration in determining the Department's activities, so long as it is consistent with the maintenance of effective customs controls and the necessary protection of revenues.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has made to use the resources saved in Her Majesty's Customs and Excise by ports and airports linking into the DTI system to help to speed up the clearance of goods through a port.

Mr. Lilley: Resource savings stemming from the introduction of direct trader input (DTI) facilities have been utilised to improve the effectiveness of existing controls and to accommodate increases in the volume of international trade.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of savings in Her Majesty's Customs and Excise budget as a result of major international ports and airports linking into DTI systems.

Mr. Lilley: In 1988-89, running costs savings in Customs and Excise arising from utilisation of direct trader input systems are estimated to be £5 million.

Overseas Investment

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the breakdown of the United Kingdom's net overseas investment since 1979 between the following geographical areas (a) The United States of America, (b) Japan, (c) Canada, (d) Australasia, (e) South America, (f) south-east Asia, (g) other EEC countries, (h) other European countries and (i) the rest of the world.

Mr. Major: Comprehensive information on the geographical distribution of overseas assets is not available. Data on direct investment relating to the end of 1984 may be found in British Business of 22 May 1987. Estimates of direct investment flows overseas to end of 1986 were published in British Business of 11 March 1988. The latest issue of the Bank of England Quarterly Bulletin contains information on the United Kingdom monetary sector's assets overseas as at the end of 1987.

National Savings

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to privatise the management of national savings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: The Government have no such plans.

Income Tax

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many taxpayers there are in each of the income tax bands in each of the English regions, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland; and in each case what proportion of the total number of income tax payers in each region they represent.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The latest information available by region relates to 1985-86. In the table, married couples are counted as one unit, members of Her Majesty's forces and the Merchant Navy are excluded, and tax liability is measured before allowing for mortgage interest relief given at source. Estimates of the numbers with a marginal rate of 40 per cent. or higher, whilst shown to the nearest thousand, are in many cases based on small samples; where this means that the actual number may be more than about one third higher or lower than shown in the table, the numbers are shown in brackets. The corresponding percentages should also be treated with particular caution.

Hearing Aids

Mr. Madden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to seek to exempt all hearing aids from value added tax.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 16 May 1988]: Hearing aids supplied by a person on the register of dispensers of hearing aids or the register of persons employing such dispensers are at present exempt from value added tax. However, my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary recently tabled a new clause to the Finance Bill which, if approved by the House, will apply VAT at the standard rate to these supplies from 1 September 1988. This is to comply with a judgment of the European Court, published on 23 February, which ruled that the United Kingdom, in exempting from VAT certain goods supplied with medical care (including hearing aids), was in breach of its obligations under the EC sixth directive on VAT adopted in 1977. Hearing aids supplied free by the National Health Service will remain outside the scope of the tax.

Public Expenditure

Miss Lestor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total of public expenditure in 1987.

Mr. Major [holding answer 24 May 1988]: Information on public expenditure is generally recorded on a financial year basis and the latest estimate of outturn for the public expenditure planning total for 1987-88 is £146 billion, as published in table 5·1 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1988-89.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report an analysis of the extent of charges by main public expenditure programme for the years 1979-80 to 1990-91, in a form consistent with the written answer of 30 March 1982, Official Report, columns 97-98, and with table 2.1 of Cm. 288-I.

Mr. Major [holding answer 25 May 1988]: The table shows for the years 1982-83 to 1990-91 for each of the Departments defined in table 2.1 of volume I of the 1988 public expenditure White Paper the income from charges which excludes receipts from council house sales, privatisation proceeds and other capital receipts. Figures on the same definition for the years 1979-80 to 1981-82 are not readily available.

BP Shares

Mr. Knox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the partly paid BP shares purchased by the Bank of England.

Mr. Lawson: Under the terms of the BP share support scheme, which were announced on 29 October and which closed on 6 January, 38,576,002 partly paid BP shares were repurchased by the Bank of England. These shares could not be sold by the Bank, unless at a price in excess of 120p per share, before 30 April 1988. Now that this date has passed, I propose, subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised estimate, that the Treasury should purchase these shares from the issue department of the Bank, at the prevailing market price. Her Majesty's Government have no immediate plans to resell these shares though it is their intention to do so at some time in the future. A revised estimate will be presented shortly, and will provide for the costs of purchase and of paying the second instalment on the purchased shares.

THE ARTS

Liverpool

Mr. Parry: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Liverpool.

Mr. Luce: I visited Liverpool on 24 May to attend the official opening of the Tate gallery of the north. This splendid gallery and other developments in the Albert dock area demonstrate the contribution that the arts can make to urban regeneration.

Tate Gallery of the North

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister for the Arts (1) what information he has on the cost of fully staffing (a) the reading room and (b) the community education van at the Tate gallery of the north on Merseyside;

(2) what information he has on the levels of staffing on 24 May at the Tate gallery of the north on Merseyside (a) in the gallery's reading room and (b) in the community education van;

(3) what information he has on the levels of staffing at the Tate gallery of the north on Merseyside (a) as originally proposed and (b) on 24 May.

Mr. Luce: There are 48 staff at the Tate gallery, Liverpool including 19 warders. The detailed deployment of staff at the gallery is for the curator to determine under the guidance of the director and trustees of the Tate gallery.

Libraries

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he will list (a) the library authorities and (b) the services which have been contracted out.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 26 May 1988]: Published statistics do not contain this information and there are no centrally held records. At present many library authorities contract out some support services such as cataloguing, jacketing and binding of books.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he will publish a list of existing library co-operatives.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 26 May 1988]: No. There are many library co-operatives from the large regional library bureaux and the automation co-operatives to the small locally based schemes, and no complete and up-to-date list is readily available.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister for the Arts which public library authorities are reluctant to use their existing powers either in full or in part, to charge for services, as referred to in paragraph 2.4 of the public libraries Green Paper; and whether he will list those services (a) not charged for and (b) not provided.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 26 May 1988]: No central records are kept and it is not possible to deduce from published statistics the full extent to which authorities use existing charging powers. However, advice which I have received and early indications from comments made on the Green Paper indicate that many authorities make only nominal use of these powers.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Manpower (Staffordshire)

Mr. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to be able to respond to the request made in 1987 from the chief constable of Staffordshire for 50 additional police officers.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend informed the House on 18 May at columns 466-67 that he had approved 10 additional police posts for Staffordshire police. The police authority has been informed that the posts outstanding from its application for 50 posts will be considered when he next takes decisions on the allocations of police manpower.

Brownies Health Club

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to how many police officers were involved in a raid on Brownies health club in Streatham, London, SW16 on 5-6 May; what degree of force was used during the raid; whether policemen involved wore rubber gloves; and what was the cost of the operation.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that 41 police officers and five supporting civilian staff were involved in the operation, which was largely completed during a normal police shift. The cost of overtime, the only additional cost, amounted to about £100.

As to the use of force, the Commissioner tells me that no injuries were sustained during the operation either by his officers or by members of the public and that the only physical damage was to a lock at the entrance of the club. One of the civilian staff and four of the police officers are known to have worn protective gloves. The other officers were issued with disposable gloves for use if necessary, but no records were kept of actual use.

Prison Population

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of the prison population is of the West Indian ethnic group.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: According to the records held centrally, on 31 December 1987, about 10 per cent. of the population of prison department establishments in England and Wales were from the West Indian, Guyanese or African ethnic groups. The information is not reliable enough for a more detailed analysis.

Boundary Proposals (Welwyn Hatfield)

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has as to when the Local Government Boundary Commission for England is likely to complete its consideration of the draft scheme submitted by Welwyn Hatfield district council in September 1987 and to formulate its draft proposals.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The time of the work of the Local Government Boundary Commission for England is a matter for the commission. I understand, however, that the Commission hopes to publish its draft proposals for Welwyn Hatfield in the summer.

Immigration

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimates exist within his Department of the numbers of immigrants likely to be admitted for settlement in the current and coming years; and if he will publish these estimates.

Mr. Renton: Projections of acceptances for settlement in the current and following year only are prepared within the Home Office, but are not published, because the uncertainties surrounding the timing of individual applications for, and grants of, settlement inevitably makes them highly speculative.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Thames Valley as to whether the firearms certificate of the late Michael Ryan was in the possession of the Thames Valley police for the purposes of a variation to the certificate at the time of his death; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to his question on 31 March 1988 at column 688.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Thames Valley as to between what dates the firearms certificate of the late Michael Ryan was in the possession of the Thames Valley police for the purposes of a variation to the certificate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the chief constable that the dates in question in respect of the variation applications made by Michael Ryan are as follows: Between 24 March 1987 and 30 April 1987, sometime after 15 June 1987 (only the date when the certificate was called for is known) and 6 July 1987; and between 17 July and 3 August 1987.

Alcohol (Prosecutions)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many shopkeepers were prosecuted in 1987 in the Greater Manchester area for selling alcohol to people aged less than 18 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The available information, which may be incomplete, shows that in 1986 there were 20 prosecutions in Greater Manchester under section 169(1) of the Licensing Act 1964. It is not possible to identify how many of those prosecuted were shopkeepers. 1987 data are not yet available.

Cash Limits

Mr. Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he intends to make any changes to the cash limits within his responsibility and to the Department's running cost limit for 1988-89.

Mr. Hurd: The cash limit on the Vote for Home Office administration, miscellaneous and community services and civil defence, England and Wales (Class XI, Vote 3) has been reduced by £2,740,000 from £412,908,000 to £410,168,000. This is because £2·9 million of expenditure expected to fall in 1988-89 was met from Supply Estimates provision in 1987-88. This reduction is partially offset by an increase of £160,000 arising from the transfer from the Department of the Environment of responsibility for the payments to the Post Office for issue of game licences. As a consequence of these changes, the Home Office running cost limit has also been reduced, by £240,000 from £808,039,000 to £807,799,000.

Untried Persons (Custody)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many untried prisoners were held in custody on the most recent convenient date; and how many of these had been on remand in custody for more than three months, more than six months and more than 12 months, respectively.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 19 May 1988]: On 31 March 1988, a total of 8,390 untried prisoners were held in prison department establishments in England and Wales. A further 1,310 prisoners were held in police cells, most of whom would have been on remand. The latest information on the length of time since initial remand in custody, relates to 30 June 1987 and is given in the table.

Estimated population[1] of untried prisoners in Prison Department establishments in England and Wales on 30 June 1987: by length of time since first remand into Prison Department establishment[2]

Length of time since first remand into Prison Department establishment[2]	Estimated number of persons[3] [4]
Up to three months	6,300
Over three up to six months	2,000
Over six up to 12 months	750
Over 12 months	100
All untried prisoners	[5]9,140

[1] Based on records held centrally which are approximate, detailed checking of individual cases, would involve disproportionate cost.

[2] Excludes any time spent in police cells, before being received on remand into a Prison Department establishment; includes any subsequent time which may have been spent on bail.

[3] Rounded estimates; the components do not add to the total, because they have been rounded independently.

[4] Provisional figures.

[5] Excludes 580 prisoners held in police cells, most of whom would have been on remand.

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police for the Metropolis as to how many firearms have been seized by the Metropolitan police in the past five years; and how many firearms were stolen in the same area over the same time.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 20 May 1988]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police for the Metropolis that separate information is not available on the numbers of weapons seized. The total numbers of firearms and shotguns surrendered or confiscated are published in the Commissioner's annual reports (page 140 of the issue for 1986), copies of which are in the Library. Over the five years 1982 to 1986 the total was 6,503. Over the same period the Metropolitan police recorded 941 offences of theft, burglary or handling stolen goods in which firearms or shotguns were misappropriated. The number of weapons involved will be higher since some offences involved more than one weapon.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Lough Neagh/Lough Beg

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he intends to designate Lough Neagh/Lough Beg as a special protection area under European Community directive 79/409 on the conservation of wild birds.

Mr. Needham: The Department may only declare sites to be special protection areas under European Community Directive 79/409 after they have been given protection as areas of special scientific interest under the Nature Conservation and Amenity Lands (Northern Ireland) Order 1985. Lough Beg was declared an ASSI on 20 August 1987. As survey work to enable the drawing of boundaries for the proposed Lough Neagh ASSI will not commence until the summer of 1988, it is not possible, as yet, to state when the two loughs jointly will be declared as a special protection area.

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he will take to ensure that no deleterious effects, as a result of drainage operations, occur within the Lough Neagh/Lough Beg area designated under the convention of wetlands of international importance especially as a waterfowl habitat; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: Each proposal for new or improvement drainage works within the Lough Neagh/Lough Beg area is the subject of detailed consultation between the Departments of Agriculture and Environment for Northern Ireland. The primary objective of these consultations is the retention and protection of the important wetlands.

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the areas of special scientific interest so far declared within the Lough Neagh/Lough Beg Ramsar site, giving the area and dates of declaration and confirmation in each case.

Mr. Needham: One area of special scientific interest has so far been declared within the Lough Neagh/Lough Beg Ramsar site. The area, which is known as the Lough Beg area of special scientific interest was declared on 20 August 1987. It was confirmed with slight modifications on 11 March 1988 and the confirmed area is 1,125 hectares.

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all applications to the Department of Agriculture (NI) for drainage grant within, or likely to affect, areas of special scientific interest declared within the Lough Neagh-Lough Beg Ramsar site since the respective areas of special scientific interest declarations were made.

Mr. Needham: None.

Drainage (SSSIs)

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on co-ordination between the Department of Agriculture (NI) and the countryside and wildlife branch of the Department of the Environment (NI) in relation to the consideration of applications for grant aid for drainage work which may affect areas of special scientific interest.

Mr. Needham: Before submitting details of proposals for grant-aid on drainage works in areas of special scientific interest to the Department of Agriculture (NI) the landowner is required to consult with and obtain the consent of the countryside and wildlife branch of the Department of the Environment (NI). The Department of Agriculture (NI) will not accept proposals for grant-aid which have not obtained the consent of the Department of the Environment (NI).

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list, with dates, all notifications made to the Department of the Environment (NI) under article 25 of the Nature Conservation and Amenity Lands Order 1985, of proposals to carry out drainage in areas of special scientific interest, indicating the response of the Department in each case.

Mr. Needham: Under article 25 of the Nature Conservation and Amenity Lands (Northern Ireland) Order 1985 the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland has received the following notifications to carry out drainage in areas of special scientific interest. In each case the notifications relate to a specified portion of the area and not to the entire site:

Name of ASSI	Date notification received	Nature of operation	Department's response
Black Bog	6 May 1987	Drainage	Consent refused
Garry Bog	16 July 1987	Cleaning drains	Consent refused
Black Bog	22 July 1987	Maintenance of existing minor drains	Consent given
Black Bog	3 August 1987	Maintenance of existing minor drains	Consent given
Lough Beg	21 December 1987	Cleaning existing water outlets	Consent refused
Inner Belfast Lough	16 March 1988	Modification of the structure of water courses and construction and maintenance of ditches	Consent given
Black Bog	13 April 1988	Clearing streams and drains	Under consideration
Monawilkin	29 April 1988	Drainage	Under consideration

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action he has taken to remedy past inequalities in employment practices in his Department, in compliance with the codes of the Commission for Racial Equality and the Equal Opportunities Commission, respectively.

Mr. Stanley: The Government are fully committed to providing equality of employment opportunities for all sections of the community in the Northern Ireland Civil Service. They have established an equal opportunities unit which has to date published two reports, copies of which are in the Library. The reports give details of the measures taken or to be pursued in developing the monitoring system, implementing a programme of action and carrying out related research.

As for the home Civil Service element of the Northern Ireland Office, the Civil Service policy statements on equal opportunities have been circulated to staff, and equal opportunities policies continue to be rigorously implemented. Thirteen per cent. of staff in London come from the ethnic minority groups, and 56 per cent. are women.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons in Northern Ireland now qualify for invalid care allowance; and what was the number as at 1 April 1987, 1 April 1986 and 1 April 1985.

Mr. Needham: At 1 April 1988, the latest date for which information is available, 4,901 persons were in receipt of invalid care allowance. The corresponding figures for 1 April 1987, 1 April 1986 and 1 April 1985 were 2,137, 686 and 701 respectively.

NHS (Expenditure)

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give, for each year since 1974-75 (i) total National Health Service expenditure, (ii) current expenditure on hospital and community health services, (iii) capital expenditure on hospital and community health services, (iv) expenditure on family practitioner services, (v) expenditure on centrally funded National Health Service services and (vi) expenditure on personal social services; if he will give each (a) in cash terms, (b) adjusted using the relevant pay and prices indicator and (c) adjusted using the gross domestic product deflator; and if he will place in the Library details of the methods used to make the adjustments.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 18 February 1988]: Factors for inflation relevant to the health and personal social services are not maintained separately for Northern Ireland. Data collated by DHSS in London and their methodology will be used but are not yet available. I hope to be able to write to the hon. Member shortly.

Royal Ulster Constabulary (Inquiry)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the inquiry by the Northern Ireland Police Authority arising out of the Stalker-Sampson reports will be completed.

Mr. Tom King [holding answer 25 May 1988]: It is not possible to give an exact date but I understand that the Police Authority is giving the matter urgent consideration and will reach a decision as soon as possible.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) on what date Mr. Charles Kelly submitted his initial report on the Royal Ulster Constabulary on matters relating to the Stalker-Sampson inquiry;

(2) on what grounds Mr. Charles Kelly has been asked to reconsider details of his initial report on the Royal Ulster Constabulary relating to the Stalker-Sampson report;

(3) what disciplinary charges will be brought as a result of the initial report on the Royal Ulster Constabulary by Mr. Charles Kelly relating to the Stalker-Sampson inquiry;

(4) what further matters Mr. Charles Kelly was asked to investigate following the completion of his initial report on the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Mr. Tom King [holding answer 25 May 1988]: Mr. Kelly has not yet submitted his report.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects the inquiry by Mr. Charles Kelly into the Royal Ulster Constabulary and the Stalker-Sampson inquiry to be completed.

Mr. Tom King [holding answer 25 May 1988]: Mr. Kelly is expected to complete his work within the next month.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farm Woodland Scheme

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what he estimates will be the minimum broadleaf component under the proposed farm woodland scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: We are not proposing to lay down a minimum broadleaf component under this scheme since we believe it is better to encourage a reasonable proportion of broadleaf planting by incentives and advice.

The incentives are of two kinds. First, there will be longer annual payment periods for predominantly broadleaf woodland. Second, we have much enhanced the planting grants for both pure broadleaf planting and the broadleaf component of mixed woodland under the scheme as part of the forestry tax and grant changes announced in March.

Set-aside Scheme

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give the total acreage of farmland which it is hoped will be taken out of production under the set-aside scheme and whether he proposes to take reserve powers to make the scheme compulsory; to be activated in the event that insufficient reductions are made by voluntary means.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much land he expects to be taken out of agriculture through the voluntary set-aside scheme in each of the English regions, Wales and Scotland; and what proportion of land at present in use each figure represents.

Mr. MacGregor: I will not be in a position to estimate the area likely to be taken out of production until I have assessed the initial uptake of the United Kingdom scheme, details of which I shall announce as soon as our consideration of the recently decided Community regulations is completed. The relevant Community legislation provides that set-aside should be voluntary for individual farmers. The United Kingdom in common with all other EC Governments and the Commission is opposed to compulsory set-aside.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what sum he expects farmers to be paid per hectare of land which they take out of production under the voluntary European Community set-aside scheme.

Mr. MacGregor: I shall be making an announcement on this and other aspects of the United Kingdom set-aside scheme as soon as our consideration of the recently decided Community regulations is complete.

Feed Additives

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he made any attempt to prevent the adoption of the European Community Directive which reintroduced the compound Carbadox as an animal feed additive in the United Kindom.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Very strong representations were made, both to the European Commission and to other member states, on grounds of safety. Although other member states were not convinced by the Government's arguments, the text of the directive finally adopted allows the serious anxieties of the Government to be given due weight.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the National Farmers' Union on the use of Carbadox and Olaquindox in animal foodstuffs.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have received no such representations.

CAP (Reform)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about current proposals to reform the common agricultural policy.

Mr. MacGregor: Negotiations are continuing on the Commission's proposals for farm prices and related measures in 1988-89. The Government are seeking to ensure that the approach adopted on CAP reform at the recent European Council is carried forward in the price-fixing. We favour adjustments to support arrangements which will bring supply and demand into better balance and restore intervention to its original role as a safety net rather than an alternative market outlet.

New Zealand Butter

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy towards the import of New Zealand butter into the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The EC Commission has not yet made a proposal on the arrangements for the import of New Zealand butter from 1 January 1989, and so I have nothing to add to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Romsey and Waterside (Mr. Colvin) on 3 March at column 679.

Upland Soils (Radioactivity)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether, in the light of the effects of the Chernobyl disaster, he will initiate within his Department research into the behaviour of radioactive isotopes in upland soils.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department has already initiated a full programme of research into the behaviour of radioactive isotopes deriving from the Chernobyl accident in upland soils of the United Kingdom. An updated list of current research projects is being placed in the Library of the House.

European Directives

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish in the Official Report a list of the proposed European directives which he has vetoed in the Council of Ministers since 1979.

Mr. MacGregor: The Council secretariat does not keep records of votes on a national basis. The information requested is not, therefore, readily available and can only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Hill Livestock Support Payments

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will consider changing his policy in order to pay the full hill livestock support payments in areas considered marginal under European Community rules as well as in hill areas.

Mr. Gummer: The rates of hill livestock compensatory allowances payable in both the "severely disadvantaged" and marginal "disadvantaged" areas of the United Kingdom are set taking account of the severity of the permanent natural handicap. They will be examined later this year as part of the regular autumn review of the economic conditions in the hills and uplands.

Agricultural Land

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of agricultural land in each of the European Community member states is in state or local authority ownership.

Mr. Gummer: In the United Kingdom an estimated 6 per cent. of agricultural land is owned by the public sector (the Crown, Government Departments, local authorities, statutory agencies and nationalised industries). I regret that comparable information for the other member states of the European Economic Community is not readily available.

Farming Incomes

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the percentage change in farming incomes in the United Kingdom after taking inflation into account in each year since 1979.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The percentage changes in United Kingdom farming incomes for the period 1979 to 1987, after removing the effect of inflation, are set out in the table.

	Per cent.
1979-80	−23
1980-81	16
1981-82	18
1982-83	−23
1983-84	39
1984-85	−51
1985-86	27
1986-87[1]	−6

[1] Forecast

Agricultural Holdings

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the change in the average size of agricultural holdings in the United Kingdom, England, and each of the English regions since 1978, 1968, and 1958.

Mr. Gummer: The average sizes of agricultural holdings in terms of area of crops and grass per holding derived from the annual agricultural census for the years 1958, 1968, 1978, and 1987 are given in the table. The crops and grass area, which excludes rough grazings and woodland, is the only area measure available for all four years. Some of the apparent increase in average size is due to changes to the census threshold which have excluded an increasing number of smaller holdings from the census.

Average area of crops and grass (hectares per holding)

	1958	1968	1978	1987
United Kingdom	25·0	33·2	42·6	47·3
England	28·7	40·6	50·7	53·6

The average size for each of the English regions in 1978 and 1987 is given in the table. Because of changes in definition, data for comparable regions are not available for 1958 or 1968.

Average area of crops and grass (hectares per holding)

DEFENCE

Women Officers (Pregnancy Leave)

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what leave is granted to women army officers during pregnancy.

Mr. Freeman: All women serving in the Army are compulsorily retired on pregnancy normally during the fourth month and are entitled to terminal leave on full pay of up to a maximum of four weeks.

Self-propelled Howitzer

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he now intends to place an order for new 155 mm self-propelled howitzers for the Army.

Mr. Freeman: We hope to make an announcement about the 155 mm self-propelled howitzer competition shortly.

Challenger Tank

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to place an order for more Challenger tanks for the Army.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence Procurement to my hon. Friend the Member for Bridlington (Mr. Townend) on 12 January 1988 at col. 200.

Marchwood Military Port

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the British registered merchant vessels that were employed to transport Army ordnance between Marchwood military port and overseas destinations in 1987.

Mr. Freeman: The RFAs Sir Lancelot, Sir Geraint, Sir Percivale, Sir Bedivere, Sir Tristram and Sir Caradoc and the Earl Granville and Tor Caledonia were employed in transporting Army ordnance between Marchwood military port and overseas destinations in 1987.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many foreign vessels visited the Marchwood military port in 1987.

Mr. Freeman: Thirteen.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the names and number of foreign-registered vessels that were employed to transport military ordnance between Marchwood military port and (a) United Kingdom and (b) overseas destinations in 1987, showing in each case which company the ship belonged to and in which country the ship was registered.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is as follows:

(a) foreign registered vessels employed to transport military ordnance from Marchwood to United Kingdom destinations
Saint Magnus, owned by Mamoet Shipping, West German flag.
Condock 1, owned by Kustenshiffahrt Bauer and Hauschildr KG, West German flag.
Hamburg, owned by DFDS, Bahamian flag.
Mercandian Diplomat, owned by Mercandian line, Danish flag.
Gabriella Wehr, owned by Oscar Wehr, West German flag.

(b) foreign registered vessels employed to transport military ordnance from Marchwood to overseas destinations
Dancia Black, owned by Shipcraft AS, Danish flag.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the British-registered merchant vessels that were employed to transport ordnance between Marchwood military port and other United Kingdom destinations in 1987.

Mr. Freeman: The RFAs Sir Lancelot, Sir Geraint, Sir Percivale, Sir Bedivere, Sir Tristram, Sir Caradoc and Sir Galahad were employed to transport ordnance between Marchwood military port and other United Kingdom destinations in 1987.

BAOR (Mercedes-Benz Trucks)

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent by his Department in each of the last five years hiring Mercedes-Benz trucks for British Army of the Rhine work.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is not available in respect of the occasional hire of trucks since central records of expenditure on vehicle hire do not distinguish between types of vehicle. A contract was placed in October 1987 involving the long-term lease of Mercedes tractors for transporting light armoured fighting vehicles in BAOR. Expenditure against this contract in the financial year 1987-88 was about £9,500.

Army Trucks

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to place an order for new 4-tonne trucks for the British Army.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence Procurement on 22 February 1988 at column 103. There has been no change in our position on the competition to choose a new 4-tonne vehicle design. The contract to provide some 2,000 of the existing 4-tonne model for the services over the next two years was placed with AWD Ltd. on 22 March.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he has taken to remedy past inequalities in employment practices in his Department, in compliance with the codes of the Commission for Racial Equality and the Equal Opportunities Commission, respectively.

Mr. Freeman: The MOD is committed to providing equality of opportunity for all its employees and potential recruits. Examples of the initiatives which have been taken include positive action to encourage more applicants from the ethnic minorities; "women only" management training courses; and efforts to increase the number of part-time posts.

Northern Ireland Charities

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those charities in Northern Ireland that have received help and funds from the armed forces.

Mr. Freeman: The armed forces in Northern Ireland, as elsewhere, make an enormous contribution to both local and national charities. Their contribution takes the form of donations raised by a wide variety of voluntary efforts, as well as actual help. Much of this work is done at a local unit level. No central record is kept and the information requested could not be obtained without disproportionate effort. However, as an illustration, I am advised that the nine battalions of the UDR raised over £130,000 in 1987 for a variety of service and civilian charities, both in the United Kingdom mainland and Northern Ireland. No donations to charities in Norther Ireland are made from official MOD funds.

Disabled Service Personnel

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how often, and under what circumstances, money is deducted from pensions of wounded and discharged service personnel to pay for cars or other forms of transport provided to help them to overcome their disabilities.

Mr. Freeman: The Ministry of Defence does not provide cars on invaliding. No deductions are therefore necessary.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how often and under what circumstances, letters to wounded service, or ex-service personnel are addressed "Dear Sir/Madam"; and who is responsible for the drafting of such letters.

Mr. Freeman: Personal letters to wounded service, or ex-service, personnel are not addressed "Dear Sir/Madam" but in the case of standard routine correspondence conducted using pre-printed stationery this form of address may be used.

Pensions

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will review the rate of pensions and the method of awarding them to wounded members of the armed forces who are invalided out.

Mr. Freeman: Such pensions and the methods of award are kept under regular review.

Injured Service Personnel

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel have been invalided out because of injuries in the last 10 years; and how often their welfare is followed up by the armed forces.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is as follows:

	Number
1977	280
1978	276
1979	200
1980	168
1981	144
1982	123
1983	166
1984	231
1985	343
1986	297

Note: Figures for 1987 are not yet available.

In all cases of discharge caused by injury the armed forces automatically sets in train procedures laid down in the "After Care Guide" which has been designed as the result of long experience to follow up on the welfare of all ex-service personnel and the widows of those who die in service. I am sending a copy to the right hon. Member.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many complaints have been received in the last 10 years from wounded service personnel, or ex-service personnel about their treatment.

Mr. Freeman: I regret that the information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in the last 10 years wounded service personnel have been ordered to wear civilian clothes on ceremonial or public occasions.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in the last 10 years wounded service personnel, or ex-service wounded personnel have been excluded from ceremonial occasions because of their disabilities.

Mr. Freeman: We are not aware of any such occasions and there is no MOD policy to exclude disabled or wounded service or ex-service personnel from such occasions. In respect of ex-service personnel every encouragement is given to them to attend especially through ex-service men's clubs and associations and the Royal British Legion.

Tornado Aircraft

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the estimated annual cost of storage and maintenance for Royal Air Force Tornado aircraft currently stored at RAF St. Athan.

Mr. Freeman: Extra costs of some £60,000 per year are incurred for heating and lighting of the hangarage used.

Military Helicopters

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the minimum authorised separation distance between military helicopters and civilian vehicles travelling on public roads; and what are the legislative provisions governing the proximity of military aircraft to civilian road traffic.

Mr. Freeman: Low-flying military helicopters are instructed to maintain a minimum height of 50 ft from the ground or 32·8 ft (10m) minimum separation distance from any upstanding object when flying. They may however be authorised to hover at levels down to a minumum separation distance of 9·8 ft (3m). There are no legislative provisions governing the proximity of military aircraft to civilian road traffic.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the military helicopter units which were exercising in the Dalmally-Tyndrum area of Argyll on 5 May.

Mr. Freeman: According to available records the only military helicopter authorised to fly at low level in Scotland on 5 May was a naval Lynx operating from HMS Minerva.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the incident involving a military helicopter and a civilian car on the A85 road between Dalmally and Tyndrum on 5 May.

Mr. Freeman: Following notification of the incident by Strathclyde civil police on 7 May, a full investigation was commissioned to establish whether a military helicopter was involved and if so, what the circumstances were.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will list each occasion that the swimming pool by Deal barracks has been made available to cross-Channel operators; to which operators it has been made available, in the last 12 months; and how much was charged for the pool's hire on each occasion.

Mr. Freeman: The P and O company is the only cross-Channel operator to have used the swimming pool belonging to the Royal Marines School of Music in the last 12 months. Details of charges were given in my reply to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 26 May 1988.

EMPLOYMENT

Mines and Quarries Act 1954

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what consultations there have been with the National Association of Colliery Overmen, Deputies and Shotfirers over the replacement of the Mines and Quarries Act 1954.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Commission and Executive has consulted the National Association of Colliery Overmen, Deputies and Shotfirers on the renewal of mines and quarries legislation. This forms part of the extensive consultation programme which involves all interested parties within the mining and quarrying industries. In particular a series of meetings has been held with all the coal mining unions about the most advanced of the mining legislative packages, the proposed Mines (Safety of Exit) Regulations and approved code of practice.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what consultations there have been with the National Union of Mineworkers on the replacement of the Mines and Quarries Act 1954.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Commission and Executive has consulted the National Union of Mineworkers on the renewal of mines and quarries legislation. This forms part of the extensive consultation programme which involves all interested parties within the mining and quarrying industries. In particular a series of meetings has been held with all the coal mining unions about the most advanced of the mining legislative packages, the proposed Mines (Safety of Exit) Regulations and approved code of practice.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he intends to bring legislation before Parliament to replace the Mines and Quarries Act 1954.

Mr. Nicholls: The intention is to replace the Mines and Quarries Act 1954 with some 15 sets of regulations accompanied by codes of practice. The Health and Safety Commission is considering the first such set on safety of mines exits, and will shortly have before it proposals on quarries (explosives), with a view to submission to the Secretary of State for laying before Parliament. Further sets of regulations will follow. It is expected that the programme will be completed in the early 1990s.

Adult Training Scheme

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what arrangements he intends to make to ensure that participants on the adult training scheme who are paid up to £250 by their employer on leaving the scheme will not be subject to tax liability or benefit loss; and what would be the effect of an employer making a payment of more than £250.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State recently announced that a training bonus will be payable to trainees who complete an action plan of over three months duration with an additional bonus for those who attain a vocational qualification or a credit towards one. Bonuses will be funded jointly by the Manpower Services Commission, training managers and employers until March 1991, and thereafter by contributions from employers and training managers. The maximum total payable under this scheme will be £200, and the bonus will be disregarded for the purpose of assessing entitlement to income support. As a payment relating exclusively to training undertaken it will not be liable to income tax.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what arrangements he intends to make to ensure that participants on the adult training scheme are not subject to any benefit loss or tax liability as a result of receiving £10 to £12 per week additional to their benefit.

Mr. Nicholls: Participants in employment training will receive a training premium of £10 to £12 a week over and above their previous benefit entitlement. These payments will be disregarded for benefit purposes and will not be liable to income tax.

Job Release Scheme

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what provision is to be made for handicapped people working in sheltered workshops affected by the abolition of the job release scheme.

Mr. Lee: While we appreciate the particular problems of people with disabilities who are approaching retirement age it is for those organisations which provide employment in sheltered workshops to determine arrangements under which employees may retire from employment.

Parental Leave

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to the reply of 15 February, Official Report, column 471, if he will list those member states of the EEC which have some form of statutory provision relating to parental leave, and which do not.

Mr. Nicholls: My current information is that all member states have some form of statutory provision with the exception of Ireland, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to the reply of 15 February, Official Report, column 471, what information he has on the fundamental variations in the range and scope of provisions for parental leave in those member states of the European Community with statutory provision.

Mr. Nicholls: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

TVEI (Orkneys)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what conditions, in terms of number of participant pupils, have been required of Orkney islands council in order to qualify for Manpower Services Commission funding for the technical, vocational and educational initiative programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: The Government intend that all young people aged 14 to 18 in maintained schools and colleges should be given access to the wider and richer curriculum developed by the technical and vocational education initiative. I am pleased that Orkney education authority has indicated its wish to participate in the initiative from this autumn, and proposes that all students aged 14 will take part from the first year. I am informed that negotiations between the Training Commission (formerly the Manpower Services Commission) and the education authority are proceeding satisfactorily on this basis.

Sex Discrimination

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will list the representations he has received in response to the consultation document "Restrictions on Employment of Young People and the Removal of Sex Discrimination in Legislation"; and if he will make them available in the Library.

Mr. Nicholls: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Barnsley, Central (Mr. Illsley) on Friday 20 May 1988, Official Report, column 613.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action he is taking to implement the proposals contained in the consultation document "Restrictions on Employment of Young People and the Removal of Sex Discrimination in Legislation"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: I announced the Government's decision to denouce ILO convention No. 45 in my reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Bosworth (Mr. Tredinnick) on Thursday 26 May.

I am still considering with my colleagues the responses we have received on other matters covered by the consultation document. The Northern Ireland Office is currently consulting publicly on the equivalent Northern Ireland legislation and the closing date for responses to its consultation document is 3 June 1988.

Redundancy Payments (Equality)

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action he is taking to provide for statutory redundancy payments to be payable to both women and men up to the age of 65 years, or to normal retiring age for the job where that is below 65 years, and on a non-discriminatory basis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: On 29 October 1987 my hon. Friend the Minister of State announced his intention to increase the age limit up to which women can receive a statutory redundancy payment from 60 to 65 years as soon as legislative time was available.

Disabled People

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will provide statistics on the number of registered disabled persons employed (a) with Remploy and (b) in local authority sheltered provision for each of the standard regions in 1985, 1986 and 1987.

Mr. Lee [holding answer 17 May 1988]: Information is not available in the form requested. Information on the number of approved severely disabled workers employed in each Manpower Services Commission (MSC) region in the 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88 financial years is set out in the tables.

Scotch Derrick Cranes

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether all scotch derrick cranes in use have been checked following the fatal accidents at Nantergantick quarry by people who are competent and who either can check, or have caused a check on cast iron components; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 26 May 1988]: Following the accident the mines and quarries inspectorate carried out a comprehensive review of all scotch derrick cranes in use at quarries. The review included advice to owners on proper procedures to establish whether or not critical components were made of cast iron.

Mines and Quarries Inspectorate

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if individual inspectors in the mines and quarries inspectorate have the necessary legal knowledge and skills to enable them to institute and conduct prosecutions under the Health and Safety at Work Act etc. 1974.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 26 May 1988]: Inspectors of the mines and quarries inspectorate receive the appropriate training to institute, but not conduct, prosecutions under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974. The prosecutions are conducted by the solicitors branch of the Health and Safety Executive.

Underpaid Employees

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were the main reasons for not prosecuting the 4,443 establishments which underpaid employees in 1987.

Mr. Nicholls: Four of the establishments were prosecuted for underpaying workers and four for failing to produce adequate records. Prosecution action was not considered appropriate in the other cases mainly because it is not the practice of the wages inspectorate to prosecute employers unless the offence is deliberate or repeated and the evidence considered adequate. The willingness of workers to give evidence in court if required is also a factor in deciding whether or not prosecution action is appropriate. In most cases underpayment is immediately put right and the inspectorate will take this into account when considering whether prosecution will serve any useful purpose.

Women's Pension Schemes

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what percentage of female part-time waged workers is included in pension schemes in (a) nationalised industries and (b) local government;

(2) what percentage of female full-time waged workers is included in pension schemes in (a) nationalised industries and (b) local government.

Mr. Portillo: I have been asked to reply.

According to estimates produced from data collected for the 1987 survey of occupational pension schemes by the Government Actuary (as yet unpublished) the percentage of female part-time and full-time employees of nationalised industries and local government who were members of occupational pension schemes at the time are as follows:

	Part-time	Full-time
Nationalised industries	20	over 95
Local government	10	over 95

Note:

These figures take no account of changes since 1987 resulting from the Government's recent pensions reforms.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he has taken to remedy past inequalities in employment practices in his Department, in compliance with the codes of the Commission for Racial Equality and the Equal Opportunities Commission, respectively.

Mr. Peter Walker: My Department continues to be an equal opportunity employer. With regard to the code of the Commission for Racial Equality, it is carrying out ethnic monitoring and has approached organisations representing ethnic minority groups and schools with high ethnic populations in the Cardiff area in order to offer career talks and work experience placements and to inform them of local recruitment exercises so as to encourage applications from ethnic minority communities. As for the Equal Opportunities Commission's code, the Welsh Office has an annual review of progress in the field of equal opportunity; a flexi-time agreement; a job-sharing agreement; part-time working; advice to staff on sexual harassment; and detailed guidance about the options and benefits that are available to officers coping with changes in domestic commitments.

AIDS

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report for each health authority in Wales the number of persons suffering from AIDS; and if he will disaggregate the statistics by age and sex.

Mr. Grist: At the end of April 1988, 21 cases of AIDS in Wales had been reported to the communicable disease surveillance centre, of whom 15 had died.

Information on the number of AIDS cases is disaggregated by sex on a United Kingdom basis only. For reasons of medical confidentiality, the figures for Wales are not disaggregated by health authority, age of sex.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his Department's latest estimate of the number of people in Wales that are currently HIV positive.

Mr. Grist: At 31 March 1988, the number of known HIV antibody positive people in Wales was 102.

There are a number of unknown factors here and at present it is not possible to make an estimate of the number of people who are HIV antibody positive. However, a group of experts under the chairmanship of Sir David Cox is now considering forecasts for the numbers of people infected with HIV and with AIDS over a two-to-five-year period.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many babies born in Wales were HIV positive at birth.

Mr. Grist: To the end of March 1988, the communicable disease surveillance centre had received no reports of HIV positive babies born in Wales.

Mr. Grist: This information is not known since pregnant women and babies are not routinely tested for HIV antibodies.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many terminations of pregnancy in Wales have been carried out because the mother is HIV positive.

Mr. Grist: None of the notifications of termination of pregnancy carried out in Wales for the period 1 January 1983 to 30 September 1987 included a mention of either HIV positive condition or AIDS (ICD code 279.1). The information in respect of 1987 is provisional.

Note: Jobcentre and ward-based aggregates are not strictly comparable. The former are based on an amalgamation of Jobcentre areas which may not be coterminous with the county boundary and, unlike the ward-based aggregate, they include no allowance fo non response and duplication in census returns.

These figures do not include the self-employed, who constitute 20 per cent. of those employed in construction according to the 1981 census of population.

Sheepmeat

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures are being taken by his Department to ensure that Wales retains its present share of the sheepmeat sector in Europe on the implementation of the review of the common agriculture policy sheepmeat regime.

Mr. Peter Walker: During the review of the sheepmeat regime we will continue to resist changes which would discriminate against United Kingdom and Welsh interests and will seek to secure arrangements which would allow free but fair competition.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he has taken to inform the European Commission of the views of the Welsh farming community concerning the imposition of a separate budgetary stabiliser for sheepmeat produced in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Walker: Our opposition to a separate sheepmeat stabiliser for Great Britain was made clear to the Commission during the negotiations which produced the agreement at the European Council on 11-12 February 1988. In accepting the final terms of the agreement as a whole, a judgment had to be made on the overall benefits which could be achieved.

Green Pound

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has made to the European Commission concerning the views of the Welsh farming community on the devaluation of the green pound; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: My right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food—with whom I work in close collaboration on all matters of importance to agriculture—has made it clear to the Agriculture Council that some devaluation is justified in the current price fixing. He is therefore pressing the Commission to make satisfactory proposals.

Agricultural Research

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in Wales are employed in agricultural research in (a) the private sector and (b) the public sector.

Mr. Peter Walker: Comprehensive information on the number of people employed in Wales in agricultural research in the private sector and in the universities is not kept centrally.

At 1 May 1988, the Agricultural and Food Research Council's Welsh plant breeding station employed 224 people. Approximately 127 ADAS officers and support staff in Wales are also involved in agricultural research and development work as part of their duties.

Silage Pollution

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures his Department is taking to increase the awareness of farmers of the dangers of silage pollution; and what assistance his Department makes available to the industry to help the prevention of such pollution.

Mr. Peter Walker: My Department, with the help of ADAS, is continually bringing the dangers of pollution to the attention of farmers during individual farm visits, through articles in ADAS publications, and by exhibits at various demonstrations.

Farm capital grants under the agriculture improvement scheme are available for the handling, storage and treatment of agricultural effluents and waste.

Ewe Premium

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the total loss to Welsh sheep producers of the decision of the EEC sheepmeat management committee to set the 1987 ewe premium at £6·24 per ewe rather than the proposed £6·44.

Mr. Peter Walker: Some 4·7 million ewe are expected to qualify for 1987 sheep annual premium and the loss to Welsh producers as a consequence of the rate of premium being 20p less than originally anticipated will therefore be about £940,000.

Farming Income

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the percentage change in the value of farming incomes in Wales after taking inflation into account in each year since 1979.

Mr. Peter Walker: After taking account of inflation, as measured by the retail price index, the percentage change in the value of farming incomes in each year since 1979 is as follows:—

Year	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	[1] 1987
Index of farming incomes (deflated by the RPI (1979 = 100))	100	92	115	139	68	94	46	69	81
Percentage change	—	−8	25	21	−51	38	−51	50	17

[1] Figures for 1987 are subject to revision.

Chernobyl Disaster (Compensation)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning farmers in Wales affected by the Chernobyl disaster who fell ouside the compensation system; and what measures are being undertaken to compensate them.

Mr. Peter Walker: On 11 January 1988, the National Farmers Union in Wales presented to my Department 56 cases it considered to have been inadequately compensated by the direct losses scheme under the Chernobyl compensation arrangements. The evidence submitted by the union did not reveal any special problems or anomalies not already covered by the existing compensation arrangements. The union also confirmed that no new principles of compensation had been identified. I wrote to the chairman of the NFU in Wales on 23 March 1988 rejecting the 56 cases. I have no plans to extend the existing compensation arrangements, which I firmly believe are a fair and balanced response to producers' needs.

Rating Reform

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning the affects of the proposed community charge on farming families in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The few representations I have received relate to ability to pay the community charge and the effect of a change in the use of buildings and land from agriculture which may make them subject to business rates. Farmers and other adults in their families, unless they are exempt, will like other adults be liable for the community charge and may be eligible for community charge benefits. If agricultural buildings and land are used for any other non-domestic purpose they will become liable for business rates under the new system, as they would under the present one. As with all non-domestic hereditaments, there will be transitional arrangements for occupiers who would otherwise face large rate increases.

Agricultural Holdings

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the change in the average size of agricultural holdings in Wales since 1978, 1968, and 1958.

Mr. Peter Walker: The average area of main holdings in Wales for the years requested is as follows:

Hectares

	Average area per holding
1958	29·3
1968	38·1
1978	47·3
1987	50·0

Dairy Processing Industry

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people are employed in the dairy processing industry in Wales; and what are the corresponding figures for 1978, 1968, and 1958.

Mr. Peter Walker: Available information is as follows:

Employees in employment (£ thousands)

	(SIC 1968) Minimum List Heading 215		(SIC 1980) Activities 4130 and 4213
	1978	1981	1981	1984
Preparation of milk and milk products including ice-cream[1]	3·7	3·3	3·3	4·0

Source: Censuses of Employment.

[1] Under Standard Industrial Classification 1968, totals of employees in employment within the ice-cream industry were included in preparation of milk and milk products.

Due to inconsistencies in the industrial classification, comparable data for 1958 and 1968 are not available.

Mortality Rates

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the mortality rate in Wales based on social classes 1 to 5 for the last 10 years for which figures are available.

Mr. Grist: Information in the form requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Nurses (Pay)

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if his Department will provide the finance to health authorities to cover the recent pay increase for nurses and for new nurses recruited to meet shortages on establishment.

Mr. Grist: The estimated additional cost of the review bodies' recommendations, which the Government have agreed to fund in full, relates to staff in post. It is a matter for local determination whether, within these and other discretionary resources available to health authorities, the numbers and grading of staff in post should be changed.

Engagements

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list his official engagements since 1 May.

Mr. Peter Walker: In addition to Cabinet, Cabinet Committee and other ministerial meetings I have, amongst others, met: the Italian ambassador, the Japanese ambassador and the governor of the Prefecture of Oita, and also met representatives of the following organisaticns:

National Rivers Authority

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those groups or organisations which responded to the Government's consultation paper, proposing a national rivers authority, suggesting a separate authority for Wales.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is as follows:
Council for Wales of the National Farmers' Union;
Dee and Clwyd Local Consumer Advisory Committee;
Farmers Union of Wales;
Gwynedd Local Consumer Advisory Committee;
Usk Local Land Drainage Committee;
Welsh Consumer Council;
Welsh Office of the Association of District Councils;
Welsh Salmon and Trout Angling Association.

One individual who responded also suggested a separate authority for Wales.

Housing

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many houses in Wales, excluding the area covered in the valleys initiative, were built before 1919.

Mr. Grist [holding answer 20 May 1988]: In 1986 there were 324,000 dwellings built before 1919 in Wales, excluding the area covered by the valleys initiative.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Medical Accidents (Awards)

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many awards in excess of £100,000 for medical accidents caused through negligence were notified to his Department in 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985, 1986 and 1987; and if he will list the awards together with the health authority involved.

Mrs. Currie: The Department does not keep detailed statistics on such cases. However, health authorities are expected to keep the Department informed during negotiations for settlement or during the course of litigation. The Department's approval is required to write off (in health authorities' accounts) compensation payments in excess of £100,000 made under legal obligation although it may be several years between an initial notification and actual write-off. The following awards/settlements in excess of £100,000 for medical accidents caused through negligence were actually notified to the Department for write off purposes by health authorities in each of the financial years 1982-83 to 1987-88:

Year and Health Authority	Amount of award/ settlement (£)
1982-83
1983-84
Croydon	250,000
Swindon	534,000
1984-85
Hounslow and Spelthorne	220,760
Islington	235,000
1985-86
Bassetlaw	385,000
Grimsby	270,000
Solihull	250,000
Swindon	275,000
1986-87
Bath	175,000
Cambridge	151,222
Central Birmingham	175,000
Central Manchester	207,000
East Berkshire	550,000
North Lincolnshire	130,000
Nottingham	115,000
Nottingham	375,000
Walsall	260,000
Wandsworth	600,000
West Surrey and North East Hampshire	150,498
1987-88
Bloomsbury	430,000
Crewe	375,000
Torbay	350,000

Note: The figures shown represent the total amount of the award/settlement, excluding costs. They do not take account of the fact that the health authority's liability may have been reduced by a contribution from a medical defence organisation.

Electro-convulsive Therapy

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what regulations or guidelines are currently in force regarding the use of electro-convulsive therapy.

Mrs. Currie: In general electro-convulsive therapy (ECT) stands in the same position as any other treatment which may be offered or recommended in the clinical setting. Ethical and clinical standards are enforced by the professional organisations of practitioners such as the General Medical Council. For patients detained under section 58 of the Mental Health Act, however, regulation 16 specifies ECT as one of the treatments requiring consent or a second opinion. Administration of ECT for a detained patient under that section requires either the patient's informed consent or a second opinion from a doctor appointed by the Mental Health Act Commission that the treatment should be given.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what comparisons his Department has made of the frequency of use of electro-convulsive therapy in Britain and in other countries.

Mrs. Currie: We have no information on the frequency of use of electro-convulsive therapy in other countries which would enable us to make comparisons with treatment in this country. The Department is, however, aware of two major studies of psychiatrists' attitudes and practice with regard to electro-convulsive therapy, one in the United Kingdom, one in the United States of America, references to which are contained in "Essentials of Postgraduate Psychiatry" by Hill, Murray and Thorley (Second Edition).

Hospital Beds (Waltham Forest)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services, further to the answer of 5 May, Official Report, columns 547-49, if he has the figures available for 1987 of the average number of available beds for (a) acute and (b) geriatric specialties in Waltham Forest district health authority.

Mrs. Currie: This information is not available in the form requested. The number of available bed days during the 1987-88 financial year, classified by ward type rather than consultant specialty, will be available later this year.

Blandford Fly

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what respresentations he has received on the hazards to health caused by the Blandford fly; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: No representations have been received about the unpleasant toxic bite of this fly, which I understand can cause painful swelling of the joints.

AIDS

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the number of recorded instances of persons infected with the AIDS virus within the Leicestershire health district.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide the current figures per district health authority for England and Wales of patients registered as being infected by the AIDS virus.

Mr. Newton: I regret that this information is not held centrally. Figures on the latest number of reported cases of AIDS, by regional health authority are published monthly. Similar statistics on reported HIV antibody positive persons are published quarterly. Copies are available in the Library. The reports required under the AIDS (Control) Act 1987, the first of which will be submitted later this year, will contain figures on the number of positive results obtained from blood samples taken for the purposes of HIV antibody tests by facilities and services provided by district health authorities.

Departmental Efficiency (Blackpool)

Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps are being taken to improve efficiency in his Department's headquarters in Blackpool.

Mr. Portillo: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to him on 8 March 1988 at column 163.

Nursing Homes

Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many additional nursing homes in the private sector have been opened in the past five years; and how many beds this represents.

Mrs. Currie: The number of private hospital homes and clinics registered in England has risen by 1,052 from 1,214 in 1982 to 2,266 in 1986, the latest date for which information is held centrally. Over the same period, the total available bed stock rose from 34,786 to 62,112, an increase of 27,326.

Tobacco (Health Warnings)

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has received the response of the tobacco industry to the 1986 voluntary agreement on tobacco products' advertising and promotion, and health warnings; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: The agreement commenced on 1 April 1986 and is due to run until 31 October 1989. There is no reason for the industry to respond to the agreement over and above their compliance with the terms. The working of the agreement is overseen by the committee for monitoring agreements on tobacco advertising and sponsorship whose first report was published on 23 March. Copies are available in the Library. The Government have indicated their intention to seek the renegotiation of the agreement to reflect current needs.

Children (Malignancy)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the latest figures for the proportion of children newly diagnosed with malignancy who are expected to survive.

Mrs. Currie: The latest available information is shown in the table. It shows the percentage of children of each age groups which are expected to survive for five years after the date of diagnosis, based on cases newly diagnosed in 1981. It should be noted that survival is likely to vary considerably depending on the type and site of the cancer.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the figures in real and cash terms for expenditure on housing benefit in the last three financial years of the old scheme and the estimated expenditure for the current financial year.

Mr. Portillo: Expenditure on housing benefit in the last three financial years of the old scheme and estimated expenditure for the current financial year in real and cash terms is set out in the tables. Real expenditure is shown in 1988/89 prices. Estimated expenditure for the current financial year includes the changes announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to the House on 27 April 1988.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in Renfrew district council and Inverclyde district council are in receipt of less money due to the changes in housing benefits; and if he will show their previous and current entitlement.

Mr. Portillo: I regret that information relating to individual local authorities is not available.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will visit the constituencies of Renfrew, West and Inverclyde in 1988 to meet those who have had their housing benefit cut due to the recent changes in benefits.

Mr. Portillo: We have no immediate plans to do so.

Mentally Ill Patients

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many mentally ill and mentally handicapped patients have moved from hospital care into residential care that is funded in full by supplementary benefit payments.

Mr. Portillo: I regret that the information requested is not available centrally.

Family Income Statistics

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many children in Scotland were living in families below supplementary benefit level, on supplementary benefit and with incomes up to 140 per cent. of supplementary benefit level, classified by employment status; whether they were in one or two-parent families in 1985 on the latest basis and on a basis comparable with 1979 and 1981; and what proportion these children made up of the total number of children;

(2) how many people in Scotland in 1985 were (a) below, (b) at and (c) up to 140 per cent. of the supplementary benefit level on the latest basis and on a basis comparable with 1979 and 1981; what percentage of the total population they represent in each case; what is his estimate of the number of childen living in such households in each case: and what percentage of total children they represent in each case.

Mr. Portillo: Separate analyses for Scotland, Wales and particular regions cannot be prepared on a reliable basis. Figures based on the methods of "Households Below Average Income: 1981-85" and "Low Income Families —1985" are available only for Great Britain as a whole. More detailed discussion of the reasons leading to this conclusion may be found in chapter 1, paragraph 14 and chapter 3, paragraph 11 of "Low Income Statistics—Report of a Technical Review: March 1988", copies of which are in the Library. The principal difficulty is that the family expenditure survey does not allow reliable estimates of those with low incomes to be made below the national level.

Carbadox and Olaquindox

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what evidence his Department holds about the role of Carbadox as a carcinogen in humans.

Mrs. Currie: The Department holds information from animal test data provided by the manufacturers, Pfizer Ltd.; also the following published scientific reports:

1. Bentin L, Preller E, and Kowalsi B. Antimicrob. Agents Chemotherap. 20. 336-343, 1981.

The Department holds sufficient evidence to establish that this compound is a mutagen and a carcinogen, both in laboratory tests and in living animals.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what evidence his Department has that the compounds of Carbadox and Olaquindox are mutagens.

Mrs. Currie: The Department holds information from animal test data provided by the manufacturers, Pfizer and Bayer respectively, and the following published scientific reports:

1. Bentin L., Prellar E. and Kowalski B. (1981): Mutagenicity of quindoxin, its matabolites and two substituted Quinoxaline-di-N-oxides. Antimicrob. Agents and Chemother. 20 (3): 336-343.

The Department holds sufficient evidence to establish that these compounds are mutagens, both in laboratory tests and in living animals.

Glaucoma

Mr. Tom Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what arrangements he intends to make for identifying and advising close relatives of sufferers of glaucoma.

Mrs. Currie: Appropriate arrangements have still to be decided. We shall need to consult the medical profession and others before any scheme is finalised.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will set out a table showing the 1988 electorate for each ward in the districts of (a) Stevenage, (b) Watford, (c) Welwyn Hatfield and (d) Hertsmere.

Hospices

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) whether he has any information concerning the numbers of nursing staff currently employed by hospices;

(2) whether he has any information concerning the total size and percentage of total spending represented by nursing costs to hospices.

Mr. Newton: Most hospices are independent voluntary bodies and such information is therefore not collected centrally.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) whether he has any plans to take steps to assist hospices in meeting the cost of the new pay levels for nursing personnel;

(2) whether he gives any guidance to regional health authorities about assistance given to hospices to meet nursing costs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms. Harman) on 10 May at column 140.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received concerning the problems faced by hospices in meeting the new pay levels for nursing personnel.

Mr. Newton: We have had representations from "Help the Hospices" and from a number of individual hospices through their local Members of Parliament.

Research Grants

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the current level of funding by his Department for research project grants targeted to the elderly and care in the community.

Mrs. Currie: In 1987-88 £2·3 million of the Department's research budget was spent on community care projects. £1 million of this was spent on research focusing particularly on the elderly, whilst the remaining sum supported research into community care affecting all age groups. Expenditure in 1988-89 is likely to be at a similar level.

Invalidity Pensions

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people living in the area of (a) Renfrew district council and (b) Inverclyde district council are receiving invalidity pensions.

Mr. Portillo: I regret that information is not available in the precise form requested. The Department's local offices at Johnstone, Paisley and Port Glasgow serve the area covered by Renfrew district council and the local offices at Greenock and Port Glasgow serve the area covered by Inverclyde district council, but their boundaries are not conterminous.

The numbers of people claiming sickness benefit or invalidity pension at these local offices as at 30 April 1988, the latest date for which information is available, is as follows:

	Number
Johnstone ILO	3,050
Paisley ILO	7,022
Port Glasgow ILO	1,868
Greenock ILO	4,152

I regret that separate records are not kept of the numbers of claimants in receipt of sickness benefit and invalidity pension.

The source of the above information is a 100 per cent. count of cases in action.

Pneumoconiosis

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the basis for estimation of pneumoconiosis damage for payment of miners' industrial injury benefit.

Mr. Scott: Where a claim is made for industrial injuries disablement benefit for the prescribed disease pneumoconiosis the extent of the disablement is assessed by a special medical board. The board takes into account the nature and extent of the symptoms as explained by the claimant to the board doctors, the physical signs found on clinical examination, the extent of the radiological changes of pneumoconiosis, the results of lung function tests, and any other medical evidence. The results of the tests are compared with the results expected of a normal healthy person of the same age, sex and height.

Other conditions which are present, particularly pulmonary tuberculosis, chronic bronchitis or emphysema may also be taken into account in assessing the overall disablement.

War Pensions

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people living in (a) Renfrew, West and (b) Inverclyde are receiving war pensions.

Mr. Portillo: This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Invalid Care and Mobility Allowance

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many people in the Renfrew, West and Inverclyde constituency are receiving invalid care allowance; and if he will also give the figures for Renfrew district council and Inverclyde district council areas;

(2) how many people in Renfrew district council and Inverclyde district council areas are receiving mobility allowance.

Mr. Portillo: I regret that this information is not available.

Southampton Office

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what are his plans for his Department's local office in Southampton over the next five years.

Mr. Portillo: At the present time the Department has no plans to change the location or boundaries of its office in Southampton.

Essex Hospitals

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many individual representations he has received in opposition to West Essex health authority plans for Princess Alexandra hospital, Harlow, and the corresponding downgrading of St. Margaret's hospital, Epping, and the Hertfordshire and Essex hospital, Bishop's Stortford.

Mrs. Currie: We have received five letters which have been referred by hon. Members together with several thousand letters direct from members of the public and a number of petitions about changes to services at St. Margaret's and the Herts and Essex hospitals proposed by West Essex health authority.

Abortions

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the range of fees charged by private clinics operating with a Department of Health and Social Security licence for terminations of pregnancy together with the range of gestational ages to which they apply.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 17 November 1987 at columns 524-5. He may wish to approach individual approved places direct about the levels of their fees.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list the number of private clinics licensed by his Department to conduct terminations of pregnancy from 1968 to the latest date for which figures are available;

(2) if he will list the private clinics licensed to conduct terminations of pregnancy which have had their licences revoked since 1968 together with the grounds for that withdrawal of the licence.

Mr. Newton: Our records show that in the period since 1968, 110 places have been approved under the Abortion Act 1967. Of these, 38 are no longer approved for the following reasons:

	Places
Approval ceased at proprietor's request or because of change of ownership	17
Approval withdrawn by DHSS because of a breach of the Assurances or mismanagement by the proprietors	21

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the number of applications by private clinics to conduct terminations of pregnancy which have been refused by his Department since 1968 together with the grounds for refusal.

Mr. Newton: Our records show six cases in which an application reached its final stages but was refused. In each case this was because the proprietor was considered unsuitable.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the number of related prosecutions that have been brought following the revocation of a licence to terminate pregnancy against the proprietors of private clinics since 1968.

Mr. Newton: The information available indicates that of the prosecutions brought under the Abortion Act none has been directly related to the withdrawal of an approval.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the total level of supplementary benefits payments that have been made in respect of residential care for elderly people in each of the last three years.

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Member to the reply to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 29 April at column 336.

Regional Health Authorities (Budgets)

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will list the total budgets for each regional health authority in the United Kingdom for the last 10 years.

Mr. Newton: For information on the total revenue and capital expenditure incurred by health authorities in England, including analyses by region (and for recent years to individual regional and district health authorities), I refer the hon. Member to the Department's annual booklet "Health Authorities' Annual Accounts—National Summary (England)"—copies of which are held in the Library.

Questions concerning health authorities in the other countries within the United Kingdom are matters for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and Northern Ireland.

Population Statistics

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will list the current population of each regional health authority in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Currie: Estimates of resident populations in mid-1986 are listed in the table. Figures relating to mid-1987 will be available shortly.

Mr. Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what projections of population growth his Department are using for planning purposes over the next five years in the South East Thames region, and for each of the Kent health authorities.

Mrs. Currie: It is for the South East Thames regional health authority to plan services for that region making use of available population projections such as those published by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys.

Office of Population Censuses and Surveys

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether there is to be any change in the running cost limit of the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys.

Mrs. Currie: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the gross running cost limit for OPCS Class XX Vote 16 will be increased by £50,000 from £38,002,000 to £38,052,000 reflecting increased expenditure by OPCS on services provided to the Ministry of Defence. The MoD gross running cost limit for Class I Vote I will be correspondingly reduced by £50,000. There is no overall increase in gross running costs as a result of these changes.

Benefit Changes (Coventry)

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish tables using the assumptions in his answer to the then hon. Member for Kensington (Sir B. Rhys Williams) of 4 February, Official Report, column 737, but using expenditure and benefit figures appropriate for families in Coventry for which he has sufficient data, and with an additional column showing the extent of the differences that will result from the changes in benefits in April.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 3 May 1988]: The information requested is set out in the tables. It should be noted that the results are essentially hypothetical. They compare the post-reform position in April 1988 not with the actual pre-reform cash situation but with a hypothetical position which they might have been in, had the previous structure continued and been uprated on the assumptions in "Impact of the Reformed Structure of Income Related Benefits" (October 1987). Second, the comparisons are based on average local authority housing charges in Coventry but do not reflect the wide variety of rents and domestic rates that people actually pay. Finally the comparisons do not take account of the transitional cash protection arrangements announced on the 27 April.

More importantly the claimants in the examples are in the groups that may qualify for transitional protection under the arrangement announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 27 April. The cash differences will, therefore, in those cases be significantly lower (£2·50).

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Brush Ltd.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if Brush Ltd. of Loughborough has filed its accounts or completed an annual return at Companies house for the last financial year.

Mr. Maude: The Registrar of Companies informs me that there is no company registered in England and Wales with the name Brush Ltd. However, there are five companies with the prefix Brush which have their registered office in Loughborough. None of these is currently in default of filing annual returns or accounts. Copies of documents are available from the search rooms at Companies house, London and Cardiff.

Competition Policy

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what submissions he has made to the European Community review of competition policy.

Mr. Maude: The Government are participating fully in working party discussions of the European Commission proposal for a merger control regulation. Discussion has so far largely concentrated on clarification of the text of the proposed regulation.

Rural Development Areas

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether in other parts of the EEC there are assisted areas comparable in nature to the rural development areas in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Atkins: The information available to me relates to systems of national regional aids which attract European Community financial support. These all include some rural areas, as do the assisted areas in Great Britain. I have no readily available information about additional rural areas which may attract some measure of national assistance. This could not be obtained without disproportionate expense and probably some difficulty of exact comparison with British rural development areas.

Local Manufacturing Investment

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what measures currently exist to stimulate local manufacturing investment through the restraining of imports from Japan and Taiwan.

Mr. Alan Clark: There are no such restraint measures on imports from Japan or Taiwan, except for some quantitative restrictions on certain textile and clothing imports from Taiwan. These restrictions form part of the Community arrangements for textiles and clothing to allow European industry to adjust to new competition from low-cost suppliers. There are, however, some informal, inter-industry voluntary arrangements with Japanese producers, details of which were given in the written answer of 30 March, Official Report columns 478-79, to a question raised by my hon. Friend the Member for Darlington (Mr. Fallon).

Fab Fashions

Mr. Giles Radice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what report he has received from the Official Receiver investigating the affairs of Fab Fashions; and what action he intends to take against Mr. Godfrey Barnard for auditing the accounts of a company of which he was a director.

Mr. Maude: Inquiries into these matters are continuing. It would therefore be inappropriate for me to comment further or speculate on the outcome of those inquiries at this time.

House of Fraser plc

Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the estimated cost to public funds so far of the current inquiry into House of Fraser plc.

Mr. Maude: The cost of the investigation up to and including 30 April 1988 totalled £1,032,747.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when inspectors were appointed to carry out the current inquiry into House of Fraser plc; and what is the earliest date on which he expects to receive their report.

Mr. Maude: Mr. Phillip Linnell Heslop QC and Mr. Hugh Graham Cazalet Aldous FCA were appointed on 9 April 1987 under the provisions of section 432(2) of the Companies Act 1985 to act as inspectors to investigate the affairs of House of Fraser Holdings plc. Mr. Heslop resigned his appointment on 13 May 1987 and was replaced by Mr. Henry Brooke QC on 15 May 1987. The inspectors are continuing their investigations but I am unable to say when a report will be received.

Cemetery Assets United Kingdom

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster who was the receiver in the case of Cemetery Assets United Kingdom.

Mr. Maude: The Registrar of Companies has no record of the appointment of a receiver to this company.

Mr. John Wyebrow

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on what occasions Mr. John Wyebrow has been employed by Her Majesty's Government in the capacity of receiver.

Mr. Maude: Records in a form which would enable any such appointments to be readily identified are not maintained by my Department.

Voluntary Restraint Arrangements

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the nature of Her Majesty's Government's support for those voluntary restraint arrangements which remain in effect.

Mr. Alan Clark: In the case of those voluntary restraint arrangements which are continuing, the Government have told the industries concerned that for the present they are prepared to accept that the arrangements are justified. The negotiation of the arrangements is a matter for those industries.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on what date each of the voluntary restraint arrangements listed as remaining in effect in his answer of 30 March to the hon. Member for Darlington, Official Report, column 478, is known to have started.

Mr. Alan Clark: The inter-industry voluntary restraint arrangements covering footwear from Korea, special steels from Spain and cars and light commercial vehicles from Japan began in 1979. The arrangements for fork-lift trucks, machining centres and numerically controlled lathes with Japan began in 1983.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what assessment he has made of the net cost to the economy of the voluntary restraint arrangement on numerically controlled lathes as against any benefit to United Kingdom industry of its continuation;

(2) what assessment he has made of the balance between the net cost to the economy of the voluntary restraint arrangement on cars from Japan and the benefits to the United Kingdom motor industry of its continuation;

(3) what assessment he has made of whether the net cost to the economy of the voluntary restraint arrangement on commercial vehicles from Japan outweighs the benefit to United Kingdom industry of its continuation;

(4) what assessment he has made of whether the net cost to the economy of the voluntary restraint arrangement on fork-lift trucks from Japan outweighs the benefit to United Kingdom industry of its continuation;

(5) what assessment he has made of whether the net cost to the economy of the voluntary restraint arrangement on machining centres from Japan outweighs any benefit to United Kingdom industry of its continuation.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer my hon. Friend to my written answer of 26 April, Official Report, column 92-93, to a similar question by my hon. Friend the Member for Tatton (Mr. Hamilton). The Government have no plans to carry out such assessments for vehicles VRAs with Japan.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he will list those orderly marketing arrangements of which his Department is aware.

Mr. Alan Clark: I am not aware of any orderly marketing or similar arrangements between United Kingdom industries and third country suppliers affecting imports into the United Kingdom, other than those arrangements set out in the written answer to my hon. Friend on 30 March, Official Report, columns 478-479.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he will place in the Library a copy of the document in which Her Majesty's Government set out their support for the voluntary restraint arrangement between the United Kingdom footwear industry and the Republic of Korea.

Mr. Alan Clark: No, I do not propose to make available correspondence about voluntary restraint arrangements which are continuing.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which of the voluntary restraint arrangements listed in his answer to the hon. Member for Darlington of 26 April, Official Report, columns 91-92, December 1987 have ended, and which remain in effect.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Government have told the industries concerned that the arrangements should end on 31 December 1987. This information has of course been made public.

European Single Market

Sir David Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what changes will be necessary in United Kingdom company legislation in order to satisfy the harmonisation requirements of the European Community for the achievement of the single market in 1992.

Mr. Maude: The European Community has been working for many years on a series of proposals from the Commission for harmonising company law. The first, second, third, fourth and sixth company law directives have been agreed by the Council of Ministers and implemented in United Kingdom legislation. Agreement has also been reached by the Council of Ministers on the seventh directive on consolidated accounts, the eight directive on qualification of auditors and the regulation for a European economic interest grouping; proposals for relevant changes in United Kingdom company legislation necessary to implement these will be brought forward at the earliest opportunity. A further seven proposals on company legislation were included in the Commission's 1985 White Paper "Completing the Internal Market" but the Government do not consider them all to be necessary for achievement of the single market by 1992. Negotiations have not been completed on any of these—indeed the Commission has not yet published all of its proposals. It is therefore not possible to say at this stage what legislative changes might be necessary if any of these was adopted.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what research has been undertaken by his Department into the effects of the completion of the single European market in 1992 on the economies of the regions of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 27 May 1988]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Dr. Thomas) on 13 April at column 159.

Companies Registration Office

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement about the current costs of running the Companies Registration Office and the charges made for services.

Mr. Maude: Provisional figures for 1987-88 shows that expenditure on a memorandum trading account basis at the companies registration offices amounted to £21 million. Fees and charges to cover these costs, together with a contribution towards the costs of running a system of registered companies, amounted to £28 million in the same period.

New Businesses

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many new businesses were started up in the latest year for which figures are available (a) nationally and (b) in Ealing borough; in what broad areas of commerce; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: During 1986, 193,000 new businesses first registered for VAT in the United Kingdom, and 1,130 in the London borough of Ealing.

The table gives the analysis of broad trade categories:

	United Kingdom	Ealing
Agriculture	5,500	—
Production	19,600	105
Construction	28,200	174
Transport	8,600	55
Wholesaling	15,100	131
Retail	34,900	161
Finance and professional	16,800	100
Catering	19,400	65
Motor trades	8,800	45
Other services	36,000	294

Airbus

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what sterling-dollar exchange was assumed in assessing the likely rate of return on the £450 million launch aid to British Aerospace for the A330/340 projects; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have nothing to add to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Ruislip-Northwood (Mr. Wilkinson) on 27 May at column 371.

Research Establishments

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when the departmental review of all the research establishments of his Department announced in the White Paper "DTI—the department for Enterprise" (Cm 278) of January will be completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to the answer, 12 May 1988]: In the White Paper, "DTI—the department for Enterprise", my right hon. and noble Friend and I announced our intention to review DTI's four research establishments (the national physical laboratory, the national engineering laboratory, the laboratory of the Government chemist and Warren Spring laboratory). The review has now been completed.

We have decided that in future the REs should concentrate on research that is required by Government, whether for statutory, regulatory or policy reasons. We wish to encourage technology transfer and non-research activities arising from this work so that the widest possible benefit can be drawn from it. Consistent with the focus on work for Government as customer, industrially relevant R&D and repayment work for industrial customers will each be limited in future to approximately 10 per cent. of the full cost of each RE. Additionally, each RE will be able, as at present, to spend on strategic research up to 10 per cent. of the full economic cost of such work carried out for DTI. Programmes of industrially relevant R&D will, in general, receive up to 50 per cent. support and will be carried out for groups of companies which have agreed to collaborate to share the benefits and the remaining cost of the work. These criteria are consistent with those announced in the White Paper for the support of extramural R&D.

WSL will in future concentrate more heavily on environmental engineering, largely for public sector customers, with a reduction in industrially relevant R&D.

To give greater flexibility and responsibility to the laboratories, we plan to consider establishing NPL, LGC and WSL as separate agencies, within the public sector, in line with the policy described in "Improving Management in Government: The Next Steps". This seems an appropriate structure for laboratories whose main task is to undertake research for public sector customers.

NPL, LGC and WSL would thus retain their identities, but the benefits of common services would be fully exploited within the new structure. Work will now be put in hand to develop the agency framework for these laboratories together with that for a fourth agency for the national weights and measures laboratory, and we hope that it will be possible to have them operational by April 1989.

Roughly three quarters of the work at NEL currently falls into the category of industrially relevant R&D. The principal beneficiary is industry, not Government, and strong signals from industry are needed in guiding the development and direction of the work. This "market pull" is more easily provided and understood when the R&D is carried out in an organisation whose progress depends directly on its success in providing services to industry.

We have therefore decided in the first instance to invite organisations which have experience of carrying out R&D to make proposals to DTI by 22 July to develop NEL within the private sector. In addition we would be happy to receive proposals from NEL staff.

We would wish to make suitable arrangements with any new owner for the continuation of the work that NEL does for Government on flow measurement, or to retain that work within DTI, as part of an agency. There will also need to be proper arrangements for the ownership of the assets of NEL. Finally, DTI would be prepared to continue to support industrially relevant R&D carried out at NEL by any new owner, subject to the normal criteria applied to extramural R&D.

We have taken steps to inform the staff of the REs and their trade union representatives in parallel with my announcement. There will be full consultations with the trade union side on the implications for staff.

WALES

Chernobyl

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the total staff and administration cost to his Department of the Chernobyl accident.

Mr. Peter Walker: The main staff costs have been borne by my Agriculture Department and whilst precise figures are not available their associated staff costs (to the end of May 1988) are estimated to be around £1 million. It is not possible to quantify separately the staff and administration costs incurred on Chernobyl work by other divisions of the Welsh Office.

Some £385,000 has also been spent on purchasing sheep and other produce for testing, in meeting the costs of laboratory analysis to establish their levels of radioactivity, purchasing live monitoring equipment and for paint used in connection with the mark and release scheme.

Compensation to affected north Wales producers amounts to some £3·3 million.

Health Projects (Joint Funding)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table of the total of funds allocated to joint funding health projects in Wales showing how much came directly from his Department and how much from local authorities and area health authorities, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Grist [holding answer 26 May 1988]: The information is available in the form requested only at cash prices for the year in which a project was approved, in respect of commitment rather than expenditure and for projects approved from 1981-82 to date. The year-on-year commitments in each year for newly approved projects and continuing commitments on projects approved since 1981-82 are set out in the following table:

	Welsh Office £	Health Authorities £	Local Authorities £
1981-82	490,788	22,070	26,593
1982-83	806,058	248,696	175,381
1983-84	1,019,520	642,431	917,765
1984-85	1,304,154	889,007	894,609
1985-86	1,414,240	1,089,919	1,139,697
1986-87	1,957,441	1,379,747	1,854,967
1987-88	1,862,279	1,473,319	2,130,813
1988-89	2,303,767	1,816,921	2,813,395

Farm Woodland

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he is taking to ensure Welsh farmers are fully aware of the opportunities involved in developing and managing farm woodland.

Mr. Peter Walker [holding answer 27 May 1988]: My Agricultural Development and Advisory Service staff and the Forestry Commission together offer an expert advisory service on farm woodlands. Advice is also available from the Countryside Commission, Nature Conservancy Council and the Agricultural Training Board through the "Coed Cymru—Welsh Wildwoods" initiative.

A series of joint ADAS/Forestry Commission displays and exhibitions have been provided at various sites and exhibitions over the past year. Further advice will be available in the publicity material and technical literature which we shall be issuing in the course of the next few months in connection with the new farm woodland scheme which will become operative in the autumn.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Language Assistants

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many language assistants went to which countries under the auspices of the exchange of language assistants scheme in the last year for which figures are available; and how many came from which countries in exchange.

Mrs. Rumbold: The language assistants scheme administered on behalf of my Department by the Central Bureau for Educational Visits and Exchanges does not operate on the basis of exchanges but of individual appointments arranged with reciprocating countries. In 1987-88, the central bureau arranged for the following English appointments:—

Countries	Outgoing	Incoming

Advisory Council on Science and Technology

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the membership and affiliations of the Advisory Council on Science and Technology; and what criteria are used for making appointments to the council.

Mr. Jackson: Appointments to the Advisory Council on Science and Technology are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister. I understand that the initial members of ACOST from July 1987 are as follows. Those whose membership of the predecessor body, the Advisory Council on Applied Research and Development was transferred over are asterisked.

Mr. Hammond has since resigned because of pressure of work. Mr. Gill and Professor Smith have completed their present term of appointment. New members will be announced shortly.

There are three ex-officio members: the chairmen of the Department of Trade and Industry's technology requirement board, of the Advisory Board for the Research Councils and of the University Grants Committee. All other members are appointed in their personal capacity and are chosen for their eminence and experience in science, technology and industry.

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will make it his policy to make public at the earliest possible stage the possible reopening as a city technology college of a school for which his permission for closure has been sought; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make it his policy not to seek to establish a city technology college based on a school subject to closure proposals before him for determination; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Any plans to convert existing schools into CTCs require the publication of statutory proposals which will be decided on their merits. Should potential sponsors wish to approach local authorities to school governors with a view to seeking to establish city technology colleges, they are free to do so. It is for sponsors to make public at a time appropriate to them their plans to establish a CTC.

Under-fives

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what arrangements have been made by his Department for funding groups for the under-fives, currently funded by the community programme, after September 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The community programme is funded by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment. I understand that the under-fives groups currently assisted by it operate in the field of child care rather than education and are therefore unlikely to be eligible for grant from my Department.

A-levels

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he intends to publish the Higginson report on GCE A-levels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Wales, and I are publishing today the report of the committee chaired by Dr. Higginson on GCE advanced levels. We are grateful to Dr. Higginson and his colleagues for the considerable time and energies that they have devoted to its preparation. We broadly welcome the general principles for A-levels set out by the committee in chapter 2 of its report and, in particular, its endorsement of A-levels as demanding, single-subject examinations for able candidates of all kinds and all backgrounds. We have reservations, however, on the committee's detailed proposals for streamlining syllabuses by reducing their factual content. The report indicates widespread support for increased breadth of study for 16 to 18-year-olds undertaking A-level courses in full-time education. It recommends that such students should, if possible, study five subjects, some at A-level and some at GCE advanced supplementary level and, to allow for study of more subjects, that A-level syllabuses should be streamlined, and students should devote more of their timetables to examination studies.

The Government endorse the general aim of broadening A-level students' programmes of study but do not accept the committee's proposals for achieving that objective through a five-subject programme incorporating leaner A-level syllabuses. The education service already has a substantial agenda for reform: we want the new School Examinations and Assessment Council in particular to concentrate on the tasks of introducing assessment and testing arrangements for the national curriculum and of the establishment, monitoring and review of GCSE.

We see AS-levels as the key to achieving greater breadth, and hence we welcome the committee's backing for a continuing role for these new examinations, both in securing breadth of study and in supplementing main areas of study. Following the introduction of AS-levels last year, A-level students, by choosing a mix of A and AS-level syllabuses, are already able to put together broader and more balanced programmes of study. The Government will continue to monitor closely the introduction and take-up of AS-levels and will consider, in the light of progress, whether further steps are needed to secure the necessary broadening of post-16 education.

Assessment and Testing

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he is now able to publish the supplementary advice from the task group on assessment and testing and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: When my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I published in January the report of the task group on assessment and testing, I asked the group to give further advice on the administrative and other arrangements needed to support its recommendations, on the application of the framework it proposed to the full range of national curriculum core and other foundation subjects, and on any modifications it might suggest in the light of comment on its report. It has submitted that advice, and we are publishing it today.

The recommendations of the group have been well received. The Government have therefore decided, in the light of the responses to TGAT's recommendations, and to the interim reports of the mathematics and science working groups, and to consultations on the national curriculum, to adopt the following main principles as the basis for a national system of assessment and testing related to the national curriculum attainment targets:

(a) attainment targets will be set which establish what children should normally be expected to know, understand and be able to do at the ages of seven, 11, 14 and 16; these will enable the progress of each child to be measured against national standards.

(b) pupils' performance in relation to attainment targets should be assessed and reported on at ages seven, 11, 14, and 16. Attainment targets should be grouped for this purpose to make the assessment and reporting manageable.

(c) different levels of attainment and overall pupil progress demonstrated by tests and assessment should be registered on a 10-point scale covering all the years of compulsory schooling.

(d) assessment should be by a combination of national external tests and assessment by teachers. At age 16 the GCSE will be the main form of assessment, especially in the core subjects of English, mathematics and science.

(e) the results of tests and other assessments should be used both formatively to help better teaching and to inform decisions about next steps for a pupil, and summatively at ages seven, 11, 14 and 16 to inform parents about their child's progress.

(f) detailed results of assessments of individual pupils should be given in full to parents, and the Government attaches great importance to the principle that these reports should be simple and clear. Individuals' results should not be published, but aggregated results at the ages of 11, 14 and 16 should be so that the wider public can make informed judgments about attainment in a school or LEA. There should be no legal requirement for schools to publish such results for seven-year-olds, though it is strongly recommended that schools should do so.

(g) in order to safeguard standards, assessments made by teachers should be compared with the results of the national tests and with the judgments of other teachers.

We expect these principles to inform the consultations which will take place later this year on the recommendations of the national curriculum mathematics and science working groups, and likewise to inform the thinking of the working groups on English and on design and technology which we announced last month.

There is a considerable amount of work to be done on the detail of cost-effective arrangements needed to support such a system. The suggestions made by the task group on assessment and testing in its third supplementary report on the moderation system appear complicated and costly; whilst the Government recognise that the issues involved are complex, the support arrangements adopted must be sufficiently simple to enable good progress to be made in introducing the national assessment system. We shall be discussing the issues with the School Examinations and Assessment Council and the National Curriculum Council and also with the local education authorities, the examining groups and other appropriate organisations. We shall also set in hand work on the development of in-service training for teachers, and on the development and piloting of national tests, starting with an examination of available tests to see whether they can appropriately be used.

As I have already informed the House, our intention is that the first cohort of pupils in primary schools should begin work in autumn 1989 on national curriculum attainment targets and programmes of study for the three core subjects of mathematics, science and English and if possible on technology which is closely linked with science in the primary phase. We also expect first-year pupils in secondary school—11 to 12-year-olds—to start work on attainment targets and programmes of study for mathematics and science in autumn 1989. These subjects will be introduced in Wales on a similar timetable. In addition, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales expects to introduce Welsh for the early years of both primary and secondary schools in autumn 1990. We shall give priority to developing assessment and testing arrangements for these subjects and age groups with first results expected for seven-year-olds in 1991 and 14-year-olds in 1992. However, the arrangements will be tried out in schools before there is any formal public reporting of results. We therefore expect that the first results of assessment and testing for seven-year-olds will be available to parents and for publication in the summer of 1992, and for 14-year-olds in the summer of 1993. Assessment in other subjects and for other age groups will be brought in progressively thereafter.

Cash Limits

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give details of any revised cash limits for his Department's votes.

Mr. Kenneth Baker [pursuant to his reply, 27 May, column 341]: Part of the answer was omitted from the Official Report; the full text is as follows:

Subject to parliamentary approval to the necessary Supplementary Estimate, cash limits for the following votes will be revised as follows:

Vote	Current cash limit £	Increase/ decrease £	Revised cash limit £
Class XII, Vote 1	463,655,000	16,366,000	480,021,000
Class XII, Vote 3	[1]1,843,563,000	−53,000	1,843,510,000

[1] As announced on 22 April (Official Report, column 577) the cash limit for class XII, vote 3 was increased by £3,100,000.

Of these changes, £1,900,000 will be charged to the Reserve and £14,436,000 is contained within the planned provision for programmes. There will therefore be no increase in the planned total of expenditure.

Additional provision is sought for class XII, vote 1 as follows:

£53,000 to enable the Cranfield Institute of Technology to participate in the programme for manufacturing systems engineering courses. This increase to be offset by a matching reduction in provision on class XII, vote 3.

£11,413,000 for costs associated with the establishment, subject to the passage of the Education Reform Bill, of the National Curriculum Council; the Schools Examination and Assessment Council; the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council and the Education Assets Board.

£1,900,000 for my Department's donation to public services charities to offset the effects of the understatement of the retail price index for centrally administered public service pensions, as foreshadowed by my right hon. friend the Paymaster General's announcement to the House of Commons on 3 May 1988 (Official Report, 4 May, column 400). This increase will be charged to the Reserve, so will not add to the public expenditure planning total.

£3,000,000 for grants to Inner London boroughs, subject to the passage of the Education Reform Bill, to assist with transitional costs of taking on local education authority responsibilities.

[1] Ethnic minority business initiative only.

In the first two years, grants were restricted to projects under the Home Office ethnic minority business initiative: since 1987 grants have also been made to voluntary organisations which work to relieve racial disadvantage and which fall within the normal grants criteria of the voluntary services unit and to other organisations, national or local, for strategic work in relation to racial disadvantage. Many proposals and projects take some time to develop to the point where grant can be given, and the portfolio of grants given under the subhead is building up slower than had originally been hoped.

The criteria for VSU grants are publicised through a leaflet which is made available to enquirers and are further described in handbooks on the availability of government grants. The ethnic minority business initiative, under which grants are also available, have been widely publicised. The availability of some grants for other strategic purposes has not been given general publicity but relevant Home Office contacts in other Government Departments (including city action teams and task forces), the Commission for Racial Equality, voluntary organisations and charitable trusts know of it and encourage relevant organisations known to them to apply.

Grants are given on formal conditions which include the timely provision of audited accounts and annual reports, and of copies of any publications, and which reserve the right of the Home Office and National Audit Office to examine books and records and of the Comptroller Auditor General to examine the economy, efficiency and effectiveness of the use of the grant. According to circumstances, indicators of performance are also sought and monitored.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken to remedy past inequalities in employment practices in his Department, in compliance with the codes of the Commission for Racial Equality and the Equal Opportunities Commission, respectively.

Mr. Hurd: We use data collected on the ethnic origins and sex of staff to help identify disparities in recruitment and promotion. Steps taken to promote greater equality include the use of part-time work, job sharing, flexible working hours, and arrangements for special leave to make it easier for those with domestic responsibilities to continue to work; attendance by a number of female staff at women's management development courses run by the civil service college; contacts with ethnic minority communities; and the placing of advertisements in the ethnic and local press.

All our management training courses, and those for members of recruitment and promotion boards, address equal opportunities and we are currently exploring, with OMCS, what further contribution training might make to progress in this area.

Westminster Bridge (Parking)

Mr. Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to why the Metropolitan police are not enforcing parking restrictions on Westminster bridge.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I am advised by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the parking restrictions imposed on Westminster bridge by the highway authority allow vehicles to stop to set down or pick up passengers, and that the Metropolitan police take suitable enforcement action if parking offences come to light.

Petrol Stations (Alcohol)

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many petrol stations are licensed to sell alcohol in (a) Dyfed, (b) Wales and (c) the United Kingdom.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Macclesfield (Mr. Winterton) on 27 April columns 158-162. The available figures relate to England and Wales only.

Police

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 19 May, Official Report, column 541, when he next intends to take a decision on the allocation of police manpower.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is too soon to say.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many uniformed police posts were civilianised in the financial years 1980-81 to 1987-88 (a) nationally and (b) in the area of the Northumbria police authority.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information available does not cover the period requested. It is estimated that some 3,300 police officers, both uniform and plain clothes, have been redeployed in England and Wales as a result of civilianisation in the period 1983-84 until the end of December 1987. I understand that in Northumbria, between 1982-83 and 1987-88, 115 police officers were released in this way.

England v Scotland Football Match

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of those arrested at the England v Scotland football match on Saturday 21 May at Wembley stadium, were arrested (a) in the immediate vicinity of the ground before the kick-off, (b) within the ground before, during and after the match and (c) in the immediate vicinity of the ground after the match; what was the nature of the charges brought in respect of the persons arrested in categories (a), (b) and (c) above; and how many persons were charged in respect of each category.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: In category (a) 48 were arrested, of whom 21 were charged; in category (b) 27 were arrested, of whom 11 were charged; and in category (c) 37 were arrested, of whom 26 were charged. The charges related mainly to a variety of public order offences.

Political Asylum

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, for each week from 10 January to the nearest available date, he will indicate (a) how many people arrived in the United Kingdom and claimed political asylum and (b) of which countries they were nationals; and how many of them were (i) refused leave to enter and removed from the United Kingdom, (ii) refused leave to enter and detained, (iii) refused leave to enter and granted temporary admission and (iv) granted temporary admission pending a decision.

Mr. Renton: For the period commencing week ending 16 January 1988 and finishing week ending 28 May 1988, the numbers of persons seeking asylum on arrival in the United Kingdom each week, are listed, by nationality, in the table. The available statistics refer only to the London airports and the Dover seaports.

There is no central record separating asylum seekers refused leave to enter, detained, granted temporary admission and removal from other passengers in these categories and the rest of the information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Advanced College of Business and Cultural Studies

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers and immigration officers were involved in the operation on 8 May in connection with the Advanced College of Business and Cultural Studies; how many people and of what nationalities were both interviewed and detained in the operation, for how long and where; what was the immigration status of those who were arrested but not charged and for how long they were under arrest; and with regard to what breaches of immigration control people were interviewed or charged as a result of the operation.

Mr. Renton: Sixty-six immigration officers and 104 police officers were involved in the operation on 8 May concerning the Advanced College of Business and Cultural Studies.

Sixty-three persons were arrested of whom sixty-one were identified as being apparently in breach of immigration control. Two persons, both Ghanaian, were found not to be offenders and were released after being detained for less than six hours. The remainder have been identified as follows:

Twenty-nine illegal entrants (twenty-six Ghanaians, two Nigerians, one Sierra Leonean)
Twenty-two served with notices of intention to deport (nineteen Ghanaians, two Nigerians and one Ivory Coast National)
One subject of a current deportation order (Nigerian)
One charged with overstaying (Ghanaian).
Two charged with working in breach of their conditions (Ghanaians)
Two found to be offenders but not charged (Ghanaians).

Inquiries into the immigration status of the remaining four persons (Ghanaians) are continuing. Nineteen of the twenty-nine illegal entrants detected have been removed, and four persons served with a notice of intention to deport have left the United Kingdom.

Periods spent detained following arrest were as follows:

	Number
Six hours or less	17
6 to 15 hours	9
15 to 20 hours	12
1 day	1
More than one day	24

Of the 13 offenders still detained, three are illegal entrants (two Ghanaians, one Nigerian), nine have been served with a notice of intention to deport (all Ghanaians) and one is subject of a current deportation order (Nigerian).

Colleges (Immigration Rules)

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many operations have been mounted over the last year by his Department on colleges whose bona fides under the immigration rules were suspect; at which colleges and on which dates such operations took place; how many (a) staff and proprietors and (b) students at such colleges were detained in connection with suspected or alleged immigration offences; and how many were charged with such offences.

Mr. Renton: Two operations related to educational establishments have taken place during the last year. The first involved the London School of International Business and took place on 12 February 1988. The proprietor and one other person were arrested and subsequently charged with various offences. No students or alleged students were detained during the operation. The second involved the Advanced College of Business and Cultural Studies and took place on 4 May. Three persons, believed to be the proprietor and two members of staff, were arrested and subsequently released on police bail. No students or alleged students were detained on that day, but on 8 May 63 persons who claimed to be students at the college were arrested. Of these, three have been charged with various immigration offences. Of the remainder, 29 were found to be illegal entrants, 22 were issued with notices of intention to deport, one was found to be the subject of a deportation order, two were found to be offenders but not charged, two were found not to be offenders and four are the subject of further inquiries.

Clapham Way (Police Raid)

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of those arrested on 14 April in the raid on a house in Clapham way were (a) interviewed in connection with immigration offences and (b) detained in connection with such offences; and with regard to what suspected or alleged breaches of immigration control these people were interviewed or charged.

Mr. Renton: Nine persons were interviewed by immigration officers in respect of their immigration status. Five of these persons were found to be lawfully in the United Kingdom and the police were informed accordingly. The remaining four persons were found to be illegal entrants and were detained under the Immigration Act prior to their removal.

Students (Immigration Rules)

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes he is contemplating in the immigration rules governing those seeking entry to the United Kingdom as students or seeking variations of leave in order to remain in the United Kingdom as students; what is the aim of such changes; and with which organisations he has discussed the case for them.

Mr. Renton: Consideration is being given to possible changes in the immigration rules so as to ensure that only those pursuing genuine educational courses are treated as students. We are in regular communication with the United Kingdom Council for Overseas Student Affairs on immigration issues affecting overseas students generally, and we have received representations from that body expressing concern about bogus educational establishments. There have been no discussions yet on the specific question of possible changes.

Mr. Charles Ferrier

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report on the escape of Mr. Charles Ferrier from Verne prison, Weymouth, on Monday 23 May; and if he will make a statement on the circumstances in which it took place.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Detailed inquiries are being made into the circumstances of the escape of this prisoner, who was recaptured in Weymouth on 25 May. I will write to the hon. Member when the results are available.

Armley Prison

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what representations he has received concerning overcrowding at Her Majesty's prison, Armley, in Leeds; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what plans he has to relieve the overcrowding at Armley prison, Leeds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave to a question from the hon. Member for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) on 22 April 1988 at columns 592-93. My right hon. Friend has received no recent representations concerning overcrowding at the prison.

Litter-related Offences

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Government have any plans to seek to increase the penalties for litter-related offences; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Under the Litter Act 1983 a person convicted of leaving litter in an open place may be fined up to £400. We have no plans to increase this. The Government have, however, given their full support to the Tidy Britain Group, which has initiated a programme of experimental projects designed to examine ways of dealing with the problem of litter.

Leicestershire Constabulary

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the reasons for his decision not to allocate any further police manpower to the Leicestershire constabulary, following the official request from the chief constable; and whether he will now reconsider his decision.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Increases for provincial forces are granted under a phased programme for which total demand far exceeds the number of additional posts available. My right hon. Friend after careful review of the requests received was unable to meet the request from Leicestershire.

I appreciate the disappointment which was caused to Leicestershire and to other authorities whose applications were not met. The police authority has been informed that its application will be considered again, together with the applications of other forces, when my right hon. Friend next takes decisions on the allocations of posts to be approved under the programme.

Guildford and Woolwich Pub Bombings

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the outcome of the inquiry he authorised into the case of the four persons convicted of the Guildford and Woolwich pub bombings; and what is the reason for the delay.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend will announce his decision on whether to intervene in this case as soon as he has considered fully the police report on the new statements that have been put forward, together with the other material which has been brought to his attention. He hopes to complete this in the not too distant future.

Downing Street (Hon. Members' Access)

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to remove all restrictions on the number of hon. Members who can go into Downing street at any one time; if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to when the present instructions were given to the police on duty there on this matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I regret that restrictions placed on the number of right hon. and hon. Members who wished to enter Downing street on 26 May to present a petition were the result of a misunderstanding by the police officers on duty there. Fresh instructions have been issued by the police to make it clear that, as hitherto, no restrictions should be placed on the number of hon. Members who need to enter Downing street in the course of their parliamentary duties.

Dogs (Spiked Collars)

Miss Fookes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will seek to ban the use of spiked collars for dogs.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have no plans to do so. Where the use of such a collar caused an animal unnecessary suffering, a prosecution could be brought under the Protection of Animals Act 1911.

Government Data Network

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will introduce legislation to provide that the Government data network is not used routinely for the purpose of collecting the personal data relating to individuals who are of interest to the security services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: We see no need to do so. The Government data network is a means of transmitting, not of collecting, data.

Computer Network

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will establish a committee to inquire into the implications of the advent of the Government data network, the enhanced police national computer network and the community charge for the Data Protection Act; whether he will call for a special report from the Data Protection Registrar concerning these issues; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: No.

Prisons and Prisoners (Definitions)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 29 April, Official Report, column 286, regarding the definitions of prisons and prisoners in different Council of Europe countries, what information he has as to which institutions in Council of Europe countries are comparable to prisons run by the prison department in the United Kingdom but which are not classified as prisons in the Council of Europe's prison statistics.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information available in the comparability of the statistics published by the Council of Europe was given in a recent article in the Home Office research bulletin, "International Comparisons of Prison Populations" by Patrick Collier and Roger Tarling, (issue number 23, 1987, pages 48-54).

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Attorney-General what action the Lord Chancellor has taken to remedy past inequalities in employment practices in his Department, in compliance with the codes of the Commission for Racial Equality and the Equal Opportunities Commission, respectively.

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor's Department has agreed policies on race relations and equality of opportunities for women which comply with the appropriate code of practice. The policy statements were circulated to all staff in 1984. The Department has recently sent a copy of the first of a series of leaflets on equal opportunities to each member of staff. A second leaflet on sexual harassment will be issued. Specific guidance on equal opportunities is given at relevant training courses and there is compulsory training on equal opportunities for all managers.

Other examples of action taken are: the provision of women-only training and a career break scheme; advertising part-time working and job-share opportunities for staff; a survey of the ethnic origin of all staff; participation in feature articles to publicise career opportunities in the Department; participation in the schools liaison scheme and the use of inner city job centres to fill vacancies.

NHS (Lottery)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Attorney-General what discussions have taken place between the Crown Prosecution Service and the organisers of the proposed lottery for the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The National Health Lottery scheme was first referred to the Director of Public Prosecutions by the Gaming Board of Great Britain on 16 May on the basis that the proposed scheme appeared to contravene the Lotteries and Amusements Act 1976. The Director obtained counsel's opinion and formed the view that the operation of the scheme would result in the commission of offences under the 1976 Act. Letters were written on 23 and 24 May to the company responsible for running the lottery, the latter indicating that the Director would request police inquiries if the lottery draw took place, and on 26 May to the company's solicitors stating which provisions of the 1976 Act the Director considered would be contravened. There has been no meeting between the Director's staff and the company, or its solicitors, to discuss the proposed lottery.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Attorney-General what steps he intends to take in the light of the divisional court ruling of 23 May, to ensure that each case is screened by a legally qualified person employed by the Crown Prosecution Service.

The Attorney-General: The divisional court ruling of 23 May is currently the subject of an appeal. Meanwhile the Director of Public Prosecutions has issued a circular to all chief Crown prosecutors advising them of the terms of the court's declaration and stating that those terms must be complied with.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to the answer of 21 April, Official Report, columns 507-8, as to the number of legally qualified persons employed by the Crown Prosecution Service in its Crown court sections, what steps he intends to take to ensure that in those cases where additional or new evidence comes to light after committal proceedings the case will be reviewed by a legally qualified person.

The Attorney-General: Where additional or new evidence or information comes to light after committal, particularly where doubt is cast on the initial decision to proceed, it is the normal practice for the material to be considered by the Crown prosecutor, and, if necessary, for the advice of counsel to be sought. In any event, the material will be included as an additional enclosure in the brief to counsel.

Paragraph 10 of the code for Crown prosecutors stresses that even when proceedings are under way the Crown prosecutor should continue to exercise a reviewing function. The function is a continuing one, as it is important that cases should be kept under continuous review, not least because the emergence of new evidence or information may sometimes cast doubt on the propriety of the initial decision to proceed.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Attorney-General whether in the light of the divisional court ruling of 23 May, he will state the duties and responsibilities of counsel instructed by the Crown Prosecution Service to appear on behalf of the Crown in a criminal matter in the Crown court.

The Attorney-General: The divisional court ruling of 23 May is currently the subject of an appeal. Meanwhile the Director of Public Prosecutions has issued a circular to all chief Crown prosecutors advising them of the terms of the court's declaration and stating that those terms must be complied with. The duties and responsibilities of counsel conducting a case in the Crown court remain as before the decision and are conveniently set out in the report of the committee chaired by the hon. Mr. Justice Farquharson.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Attorney-General whether he intends to take any further steps to encourage legally qualified staff to remain within the Crown Prosecution Service where they have reached the grade of a senior Crown prosecutor.

The Attorney-General: The retention of experienced staff within the Crown Prosecution Service is of the greatest importance. With the Director of Public Prosecutions I shall encourage senior Crown prosecutors to take advantage of the new pay offer which includes substantial salary increases at the senior Crown prosecutor grade with additional special salary awards for consistently high performance. These will make career prospects in the service more attractive. In the development of the service careful heed will be taken of the 1987 study of internal communications, as well as of the views of senior Crown prosecutors themselves as to how the attraction of the role of an experienced lawyer in the service may be enhanced.

Daniel Morgan

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Attorney-General if the Director of Public Prosecutions has completed his deliberations following the verdict of unlawful killing at the inquest into the death of Daniel Morgan in March 1987 at Southwark coroner's court in April 1988; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: At the conclusion of the inquest into the death of Daniel Morgan at Southwark coroner's court on 21 April 1988 the Crown Prosecution Service requested a full transcript of the shorthand note of the proceedings. This transcript has not yet been received and consequently a final decision has not been reached by the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Juries

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Attorney-General what steps are taken to ensure that all those called for jury service can understand the language in which evidence will be given in court.

The Attorney-General: The Juries Act 1974 requires jurors to be summoned from amongst all those on the electoral register who are not disqualified by age. However, the jury summons form both explains to the summoned person that excusal may be sought on the grounds of insufficient understanding of English and warns that they may be discharged from duty if there is doubt as to their competence. Though the summons and the accompanying leaflet are printed in English, material is available in Welsh and five major Asian languages. In those comparatively rare cases in which evidence is given in a language other than English, interpreters are used.

Discontinuance of Cases

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Attorney-General whether he will authorise suitably qualified barristers or solicitor agents in appropriate cases in the magistrates' courts to authorise discontinuance or the offering of no evidence where appropriate or to accept pleas to lesser charges; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The provisions of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 do not allow the Director to delegate powers to discontinue proceedings to barristers or solicitors in private practice instructed on behalf of the Crown Prosecution Service.

The withdrawal of cases, or the offering of no evidence where appropriate, or the acceptance of pleas to lesser charges than those originally preferred, are matters upon which barrister and solicitors instructed on behalf of the service are instructed to consult with a CPS officer unless there are compelling and urgent reasons for not doing so.

The policy, practice and procedures of the CPS are kept under a constant review with a view to improving fairness, efficiency and effectiveness. At present there are no plans for the alteration of instructions given to barristers or solicitors instructed on behalf of the service.

Civil Justice Review

Mr. Ashby: To ask the Attorney-General when it is expected that the report of the civil justice review will be published.

The Attorney-General: The report of the review body on civil justice has been laid before Parliament today. It contains wide-ranging recommendations, put forward by an independent advisory committee working with a team of officials. A further announcement will be made when the Government have considered all the proposals.

TRANSPORT

Bexley Bus Service

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on the Bexley bus service since Easter.

Mr. David Mitchell: I have received one letter from the London Regional Passengers' Committee. The operation of the Bexley bus service is a matter for the management of London Regional Transport.

Casualty Rates

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the casualty rate per mile travelled, or nearest appropriate indicator, for (a) private vehicle drivers, (b) private vehicle passengers aged over 18 years, (c) private vehicle passengers aged under 18 years but over five years, (d) private vehicle passengers aged five years and under, (e) motor cyclists, (f) motor cycle pillion passengers aged over 18 years, (g) motor cycle pillion passengers aged under 18 years, (h) cyclists aged over 18 years, (i) cyclists under 18 years but over 11 years, (j) cyclists aged 11 years and under, and (k) commercial lorry drivers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The casualty rates for drivers and riders of pedal cycles, motor cycles, private vehicles and goods vehicles are given in the table:

Total driver-rider casualty rates: Great Britain 1986
Rate per 100 million vehicle kilometres

	Rate
Pedal cyclists	618
Motor cycle riders	888
Private vehicle drivers	37·3
Goods vehicle drivers	18·0

Age-specific driver and rider casualty rates cannot be calculated because total annual mileage is only available by type of vehicle and cannot be subdivided by the age of the driver or rider. The total number of casualties for each of the requested road user types is as follows:

Total casualties: by age and road user type: Great Britain 1986

Type of road user	Age of casualty 0-5	6-17	18 or more	[1]Total
Private vehicle driver	—	2,361	88,115	91,156
Private vehicle passengers	3,839	13,575	49,579	68,022
Motor cycle riders[2]	—	11,147	36,257	47,922
Motor cycle passengers[2]	3	1,022	3,282	4,358
Goods vehicle drivers[3]	—	115	8,284	8,480

Type of road user	Age of casualty 0-11	12-17	18 or more	Total
Pedal cyclists	3,043	8,345	14,388	26,129

[1] Includes age not known and age unreported.
[2] Includes mopeds, scooters and motor cycle combinations.
[3] Includes light goods vehicles and heavy goods vehicles.

Miss Lynda Lee-Potter

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will appoint Miss Lynda Lee-Potter as a member of the British Railways Board.

Mr. David Mitchell: No, there are currently no suitable vacancies.

Carlisle-Settle Railway

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what bus services will be available for the present passengers on the Carlisle-Settle line when the service is withdrawn.

Mr. David Mitchell: I will want to consider that issue in the the light of the further report on hardship which I have asked the TUCCs to submit.

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make available the details of British Rail's current and estimated revenue and operating costs on the Carlisle to Settle line.

Mr. David Mitchell: British Rail estimates that the gross cost of running the line in 1987-88 will have been £2·7 million and revenue about £1 million. Its estimates of costs and revenues in the future if the line stayed open were set out in its financial case for closure, a copy of which was placed in the Library of the House on 25 February 1987. I have now asked BR to update those figures.

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport why the capital and revenue contributions of the joint local authorities to the running of the Carlisle-Settle railway were not included in the list of public and private bodies in the Official Report of 16 May, columns 683-84.

Mr. David Mitchell: The local authority contributions had already received wide publicity. But I did refer to them in my reply to the hon. Member for Bradford, South (Mr. Cryer) and my hon. Friend the Member for Skipton and Ripon (Mr. Curry) on 16 May, Official Report, column 677.

Dual Carriageways

Mr. Warren: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the average annual daily traffic flows required by his Department to justify dual carriageways on trunk roads; and if he will list the dates and numbers by which this figure has been increased during the last 40 years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The justification for trunk road schemes is based on a comprehensive appraisal of costs and benefits, not simply on traffic flows. The Department produces guidelines on carriageway standards in relation to traffic flows only for the purpose of establishing which options should be appraised. Dual carriageway standard will be considered for a rural trunk road if the forecast average annual daily traffic flow in the design year, 15 years after the road opens, is in the range 11,000-46,000 vehicles.

The guidelines reflect the costs and benefits of the different carriageway widths during both normal operating conditions and maintenance. They also take account of the performance of modern vehicles and road design. Earlier figures were not produced in the same way and are not properly comparable.

Rail Passengers

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to the proportion of British Rail's passengers on (a) the provincial sector lines in central Wales, (b) the Fort William to Mallaig lines and (c) the Carlisle to Settle line who travel for leisure purposes.

Mr. David Mitchell: So far as (a) and (b) are concerned, no information, because these lines have not been proposed for closure. So far as the Settle-Carlisle line is concerned, a Cumbria county council survey showed that over 60 per cent. of passengers travelled simply for the pleasure of the line, and that 80 per cent. were travelling for leisure purposes generally.

Private Railways

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the average length of time taken for a private concern to be granted statutory authorisation to operate a railway after receipt of the application.

Mr. David Mitchell: There is no meaningful "average" time. That depends on the procedure adopted, the complexity of the case, the objections received, and the speed with which the applicants themselves respond to correspondence.

A33

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents have taken place in each of the last three years on the A33 road between the Chilworth roundabout and the start of the M3 at Bar End; and how many have been fatal.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information is available as follows:

Year	Personal injury accidents	Accidents involving fatalities
July 1984 to June 1985	67	2
July 1985 to June 1986	74	3
July 1986 to June 1987	73	1
July 1987 to March 1988	47	1

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will authorise the necessary work to commence on the upgrading of the Chandler's Ford bypass in the borough of Eastleigh (A33) to motorway standards.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I hope to let a contract for the Compton-Bassett section of the M3 motorway at about the end of the year.

M1 and M6 (Roadworks)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects (a) the M1 and (b) the M6 will be free from major road works; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Not soon.

This year's major maintenance work on the M1 and M6 is due to be completed by the end of November. The volume of traffic on these motorways is high. A continuous programme of maintenance is necessary to keep the roads in good condition. Most major works take place between April and November. We plan and phase work to minimise disruption to road users.

It may be helpful to explain the arithmetic of motorway renewal. As on average 5 per cent. (about 20 route miles) of M1, M6 are renewed each year, the hon. Member may experience major road works for some time.

Motorways (Overtaking)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what further steps he proposes to take in order to inform motorists that the middle and fast lanes on the motorways are for overtaking purposes only; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: One and a half million leaflets about motorway driving and safety are currently being distributed to motorists. Like all other driver guidance, these emphasise the importance of good lane discipline.

Dartford Tunnel

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next proposes to meet the general manager of the Dartford tunnel joint committee; and if on that occasion he will discuss the case for escorting tankers through the tunnel in view of the delay this occasions to other traffic.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State expects to meet the general manager next on 2 August. Officials have already discussed this subject with him.

The Dartford tunnel joint committee decided on 3 June to increase from four to six the maximum number of vehicles carrying hazardous goods in escorted convoys in order to cut the number of convoys and the consequent delays to other traffic. The change will come into effect on 1 July. Other improvements have been made recently, including the construction of a new marshalling area for these vehicles on the Essex side.

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the tunnels in the United Kingdom where tankers are escorted other than the Dartford tunnel.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The authorities responsible for the Mersey tunnels and the Tyne tunnel operate procedures similar to those which apply at Dartford.

Dartford-Thurrock Bridge

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current state of progress on the proposed Dartford to Thurrock bridge.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Dartford River Crossing Limited plans to begin construction of the bridge on 1 August if the Dartford-Thurrock Crossing Bill receives Royal Assent by 30 June. The bridge is expected to be complete by early 1991.

Rolling Stock and Locomotives

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the answer of 25 April, Official Report, column 71, what allowance as regards the maximum height and size of a passengers seated comfortably, was made by BR in the specifications for Sprinters submitted to his Department; whether there has been any variations in these figures for the super Sprinters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: This is entirely a matter for British Rail's judgment.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the answer of 25 April, Official Report. column 71, what data or measurements of interior noise levels were included by BR in the specifications for class 155 units submitted to his Department; and what change these figures represented in comparison with current Inter-City rolling stock.

Mr. David Mitchell: None. These are entirely matters for British Rail.

Perivale Underpass

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to improve the drainage arrangements for the Perivale underpass; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The severe storms in West London flooded the underpass on Sunday 8 May 1988. Our agents, the London borough of Ealing, is investigating whether any improvements to the drainage system are required.

ENERGY

Electricity Industry

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on progress in the privatisation of the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Discussions with the industry are continuing satisfactorily and our aim is to introduce legislation at the earliest opportunity.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Industry Matters Scheme

Sir John Biggs-Davison: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the Industry Matters scheme.

Mr. Viggers: The work of encouraging a better understanding of the importance of industry, begun during Industry Year 1986, is being carried forward in Northern Ireland by an independent company limited by guarantee, Industry Matters (NI) Ltd. The company is involved in a wide range of projects designed to create and develop links between industry and education at all levels, and has also launched an initiative to promote the concept of total quality throughout Northern Ireland industry. Industry Matters' costs are met by contributions from the private sector matched by the Department of Economic Development on a pound-for-pound basis up to a limit of £50,000 in any one financial year.

Fair Employment

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many (a) Protestants and (b) Roman Catholics are employed at present by the Housing Executive in the grades or salary bands (i) PO2 and above, (ii) PO1 and (iii) P/T and 1-4, in each of the six housing areas or regions and in Belfast functional departments;

(2) how many (a) Protestants and (b) Roman Catholics are employed at present by the Housing Executive in the grades of director and assistant director within the central directorates of development; planning; finance; housing; and personnel and management services;

(3) how many (a) Protestants and (b) Roman Catholics are employed at present by the Housing Executive in the grades or salary bands PO2 and above in the department of the chief executive and in the departments of information and corporate planning.

Mr. Needham: These are matters for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, but I understand that the information requested is not currently available.

A report conducted by the Fair Employment Agency in October 1985 into the religious composition of the non-manual staff of the NIHE concluded that equality of opportunity was being provided. Following a recommendation of the FEA, the Northern Ireland Housing Executive is currently undertaking a survey of its staff which is intended to provide a profile of its religious composition. It is anticipated that the report of this survey will be available by the end of the year.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) Protestants and (b) Roman Catholics employed by the Housing Executive in October 1985 have been transferred to different duties, or have resigned their employment, or have been dismissed in the grades or salary bands (i) PO2 and above, (ii) PO1 and (iii) P/T, 1-4, and what were the respective affiliations of their replacements in post in each case.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive but I understand from the chief executive that the information requested is not available.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Catholic managers at grade or salary bands SOI and above have instituted grievance proceedings, or complaints to the Fair Employment Agency, or the Commissioner for Complaints, or have concluded or are pursuing legal proceedings against the House Executive in consequence of their failure to obtain promotion, or the loss or downgrading of their posts since the Fair Employment Agency report was published in October 1985; and what has been the total cost to the Housing Executive of defending such actions and making compensatory or out-of-court settlements.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive but I understand from the chief executive that the information cannot be provided in the form requested. Details of cases raised by existing members of staff since October 1985 are as follows:

Case and means of raising case	Costs £
A—One individual
In-house grievance procedure relating to failure to obtain promotion.	130
Finding:—No grievance to answer
B—One individual
Complaint to the Fair Employment Agency relating to failure to obtain promotion.	Not yet determined
Case continuing.
C—Two individuals
Legal proceedings relating to contract of employment case.	6,000 compensation, 9,433 legal costs
Settled out of court.
Legal proceedings relating to contract of employment.	2,918 to date
Case continuing.

These figures do not include in-house administration expenses relating to the investigations. These costs are not readily available and could only be determined at disproportionate cost.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the full list of organisations of which membership by its employees is proscribed by the Housing Executive on grounds of conflict of interest in any duties involving the planning or maintenance of housing, the planning or apportionment of financial expenditure, the management of tenant-occupied housing, or the recruitment, selection, management and training of employees.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, but I understand from the chief executive that the Executive does not maintain a list of organisations of which employees may not hold membership.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Roman Catholic personnel or training staff have instituted actions against the Housing Executive since May 1983, through industrial tribunals or the civil courts on grounds of wrongful dismissal or breach of contract; in how many cases compensatory payments were made in preference to reinstatement; and what were the total legal costs involved in defending these actions on behalf of the Housing Executive and in paying compensation.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, but I understand from the chief executive that four officers in the personnel/training section have initiated action against the Executive since May 1983 through a tribunal or civil court.

The Executive is unable to comment on the religious affiliation of the individuals concerned.

The Executive made a compensatory payment in lieu of re-engagement in one of these cases, as directed by the industrial tribunal.

The total costs involved including the compensatory payment amount to £51,644·75 to date.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many complaints by year under the Fair Employment Act (Northern Ireland) Act 1976 have been discontinued by virtue of section 42 of the Act listing the employing body in each case.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 20 May 1988]: It is not the practice to release the names of parties in individual complaints. The following table shows by year the number of requests for the issue of a certificate under section 42 of the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1976.

Year	Number
1978-79	1

Two of these cases are now the subject of judicial review.

Orange Parades

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Orangemen's parades take place in Northern Ireland each year; and what is the cost of policing them.

Mr. Stanley: The information is not available in the form requested and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

However, in his annual report for 1987, the Chief Constable reported that 1,863 Loyalist parades and 249 Republican parades had taken place during the year and involved a substantial monetary cost.

Local Enterprise Development Unit

Sir John Biggs-Davison: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will state the number of new jobs produced by the work of the Local Enterprise Development Unit.

Mr. Viggers: In the year ended March 1988, the Local Enterprise Development Unit entered into contracts with companies to assist 4,570 jobs. Of this total, 523 related to the development of existing jobs and 4,047 to proposals for the creation of new employment. These results bring the overall total of jobs assisted since the unit's inception in 1971 to 35,271.

Language Assistants

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many language assistants went to which countries under the auspices of the exchange of languages assistants scheme in the last year for which figures are available; and how many come from which countries in each exchange.

Dr. Mawhinney: The figures for the current academic year are as follows:

Countries	From Northern Ireland	To Northern Ireland
France	61	65
Morocco	—	2
Canada	1	2
Ivory Coast	—	1
Switzerland	1	—
Federal Republic of Germany	8	15
German Democratic Republic	1	—
Austria	1	3
Spain	11	16
Mexico	1	1
Italy	4	3

Further Education (Staff)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimated cost of the investigations by (a) the Fair Employment Agency and (b) the Northern Ireland Commissioner for complaints into the 40 cases of complaints about selection and promotion of staff in further education colleges during the past five years.

Mr. Viggers: The Fair Employment Agency estimates the total cost of its 12 completed investigations at £24,000. Two further cases are pending and are expected to cost some £4,000.

The office of the Northern Ireland Commissioner for Complaints does not hold information in a form which would enable it to provide a meaningful estimate of the cost of investigation of individual complaints.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 12 April, Official Report, column 51, whether he has revised the guidelines to the five education and library boards during the past five years about the criteria for the selection and promotion of staff in further education colleges; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The selection and promotion of lecturing staff in further education colleges are matters for the management committees of the colleges and education and library boards operating within schemes approved by the Department of Education. There has been no recent revision of these schemes.

Primary Schools

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland at what stage are the proposed schemes for new primary schools at (a) Ballyharry and (b) Ballyhalbert; and what are the anticipated dates for the acceptance of the first pupils at these schools.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:

(a) Ballyharry: the scheme is now 40 per cent. complete.

(b) Ballyhalbert: the scheme commenced on 23 May 1988.

Both schools are expected to accept pupils in September 1989.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the names of all primary schools which have been closed during the past five years; what was the number of pupils at each school at the date of the final decision to close the school; and whether each school listed is controlled or maintained.

Dr. Mawhinney: Details of the primary school closures since 1983 are as follows:

Crumlin Road Prison

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any plans to improve the sanitary arrangements for prisoners in Her Majesty's prison, Crumlin road, Belfast; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: There are currently no firm plans to improve the sanitary arrangements at HM prison, Crumlin road, but a survey is being carried out with a view to drawing up a plan to upgrade certain aspects of the building, which may include the sanitation.

Prisoners

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are currently serving prison sentences in Northern Ireland; what percentage of these are serving sentences for terrorist and related offences; and what percentage of the terrorist offences category are (i) republican and (ii) loyalist.

Mr. Stanley: On 15 May there were 1,442 persons serving prison sentences in Northern Ireland. Of these 72·1 per cent. were serving sentences for scheduled offences as defined in the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978. An unknown number of these offences would however have been treated as non-scheduled at court after being certified out by the Attorney-General. Of the persons serving sentences for scheduled offences, based on their believed paramilitary affiliations, 44·7 per cent. are classified as Republican and 33·3 per cent. as Loyalist. These figures do not reflect those prisoners currently held on remand or awaiting trial, nor those persons ordered to be detained in a young offenders centre.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many female prisoners are currently serving sentences in Northern Ireland; and what percentage are serving sentences for terrorist offences.

Mr. Stanley: On 15 May there were 19 women serving prison sentences in Northern Ireland. Of these 14 (73·7 per cent.) were serving sentences for scheduled offences as defined in the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978. Some of these offences might however have been treated as non-scheduled at court after being certified out by the Attorney-General. These figures do not reflect those prisoners currently held on remand or awaiting trial, nor those persons ordered to be detained in a young offenders centre.

De Lorean Motor Cars Ltd

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money owing to public funds as a result of the collapse of De Lorean Motor Cars Ltd has so far been recovered; how much is still outstanding or unaccounted for; and what has been the cost to public funds to date in fees and other related administrative expenses.

Mr. Viggers: Of the £77 million public funds invested in De Lorean Motor Cars Ltd, the total amount recovered to date by the joint receivers, Sir Kenneth Cork and Mr. Christopher Hughes of Cork Gully, is £12·6 million. That amount included an award in specie of £1·8 million in respect of property at Dunmurry and a total of £3·54 million paid to Government Departments as preferential creditors. £53·7 million of the Government's claim against the company, which excludes share capital of £17·8 million but includes interest and royalties due, remains outstanding. At 29 February 1988 the fees, expenses and costs incurred so far in the receivership and various legal actions amounted to £3·9 million.

Belfast-Dublin Road, Newry (Parking)

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State Northern Ireland how many prosecutions have been brought during the period 1 June 1987 to 1 June 1988 in respect of illegal parking on the Belfast-Dublin road, Newry, in the vicinity of the customs station.

Mr. Stanley: Records of parking offences are not maintained on a road by road basis and this information could not therefore be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Newtown Hamilton (Security System)

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans there are to change the security barrier system currently in operation at Newtown Hamilton, County Armagh.

Mr. Stanley: I understand from the RUC that there are no plans to remove the security barriers at present, although the situation is under review.

Milk Quota

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many farmers in Northern Ireland exceeded their allocated milk quota during the year 1 May 1987 to 31 April 1988.

Mr. Viggers: It is not possible at this stage to state precisely how many milk producers in Northern Ireland exceeded their quota during the year 1 April 1987 to 31 March 1988. A number of quota adjustments still require to be made but it is estimated that approximately 4,000 producers may have exceeded their quota. As a result of temporary reallocation of unused quota, the number who have to pay levy could be significantly lower.

Prison Service

Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress he is making in improving the cost-effectiveness of the Northern Ireland prison service.

Mr. Tom King: The Government are continually seeking to improve the cost-effectiveness of the Northern Ireland prison service, as is the case with the provision of other public services. Progress has already been made but a particular source of concern for some time has been the increasing cost of housing special category prisoners in three compounds in the old part of Maze prison, even though their numbers have fallen. Accordingly, on Sunday 5 June the remaining 90 special category prisoners were transferred from three compounds in the old part of Maze to two cell blocks in the prison. The prisoners will continue to be held separately from other inmates, and to be treated as special category. Arrangements have been made to reproduce the previous regime to the extent that this is practicable in the different accommodation.

The closure of the remaining compounds will result in more cost-effective use of prison accommodation. The transfer will also result in more contact between staff and these prisoners than was possible in the compounds; most of the men are serving indeterminate sentences, and the new situation should enable a better assessment to be made of their suitability for release into the community on licence.

I have therefore agreed that the case of each special category prisoner serving a sentence of life imprisonment or detention at the Secretary of State's pleasure should be reviewed by the Life Sentence Review Board within about six months. The board will review the cases in accordance with the normal criteria which it applies to all prisoners serving indeterminate sentences. The prisoners concerned are being informed of this review, and will have the normal opportunity to make their own written representations to the board.

Artificial Insemination Service

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether firms or individuals proposing to operate an artificial insemination service for animals require his approval.

Mr. Viggers: No. A licence is required from the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Strangford of 11 May, whether the licensing of the artificial insemination services to AI Services (NI) Society Ltd. gives this firm a monopoly for artificial insemination services in Northern Ireland;

(2) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Strangford of 11 May, whether other private persons or firms can undertake an artificial insemination service in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 27 May 1988]: AI Services (Northern Ireland) Society Ltd. will be the only organisation authorised to undertake the artificial insemination of cattle on farms in Northern Ireland through a technician service.

Other private persons or firms can be licensed by the Department of Agriculture to sell semen to cattle producers who will continue to be free to buy semen from other sources other than AI Services and to perform artificial insemination on their own cows under licence from the Department of Agriculture.

European Charter on Local Self-Government

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has had from individuals and organisations in Northern Ireland concerning ratification of the European charter on local self-government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 18 April 1988]: I have received two representations concerning the ratification of the European charter of local self-government; these came from the hon. Member for South Down (Mr. McGrady) and the Association of Local Authorities of Northern Ireland.

North Eastern Library and Education Board

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will place in the Library a copy of the Fair Employment Agency's report on the North Eastern Library and Education Board.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 24 May 1988]: When the report is published by the Fair Employment Agency, a copy will be placed in the Library in the normal way.

Milk Quotas

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many milk producers were contracted into the Community non-marketing premium schemes during the base year for the calculation of milk quotas.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 25 May 1988]: In Northern Ireland, 801 producers were contracted out of production under the EC non-marketing of milk and dairy herd conversion premium schemes during at least part of 1983, the base year used for the calculation of primary milk quotas.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Southern Africa

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how he decides which political leaders in southern Africa to consult about developments in southern Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: Our policy is to maintain contact with a wide range of political opinion in southern Africa.

Iran (Arms Sales)

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from the United States Government concerning the alleged sale of arms to Iran; and what response he has sent.

Mr. Mellor: We have received no representations from the United States Government on this matter, and we have no reason to think that they hold the views attributed to them in a recent press article.

Gulf War

Sir Russell Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government are taking all steps open to them to prevent the direct or indirect supply of weapons from the United Kingdom to either of the protagonists in the Gulf War.

Mr. Mellor: Yes. Exports of defence-related equipment to Iran or Iraq continue to be subject to the guidelines announced in the House on 29 October 1985. These are strictly applied.

Kampuchea

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many United Kingdom citizens are working for relief agencies inside Kampuchea; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We have no firm information. The British working in the refugee camps along the Thai-Cambodian border appear to outnumber the few who are working in Cambodia.

Transylvania (Hungarian Minority)

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has made any representations to the Romanian Government on the subject of the alleged persecution of the Hungarian minority in Transylvania; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The Romanian authorities are aware of the concern in the United Kingdom about human rights in Romania. We have raised these issues in ministerial contacts. In a speech at the CSCE follow-up meeting in Vienna on 15 April, I drew attention in particular to religious rights and those of national minorities in Romania. We hope that the Vienna meeting will result in improved respect for the rights of national minorities, in Romania as elsewhere.

Southern Africa (Defence Capability)

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy on supporting the defence capability of Southern African Development Co-ordination Conference states; and if there are any plans to increase the level of support.

Mrs. Chalker: We wish to encourage stability in the region and, to that end, give civil aid, military training assistance and limited non-lethal defence equipment to SADCC states to encourage their independent development. We will continue to do so.

Amritsar (Representations)

Mr. Bidwell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what requests he has received from Indians resident in the United Kingdom asking him to make representations to the Indian Government on recent events in Amritsar.

Mr. Eggar: We have received 24 identical written requests from the International Sikh Youth Federation and a number of Sikh temples. In addition the federation sent a telemessage. We have also received similar requests from four of the temples under cover of letters from hon. Members. We have had no other requests.

Entry Clearance Fees

Mr. Lord: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether any changes are proposed to entry clearance fees.

Mr. Eggar: Revised fees have been introduced along with a new category of entry clearance (double entry), with effect from 1 June 1988. the charges were approved by the Privy Council on 25 May. The principal fees will be as follows:

Single entry clearance	20	(no change)
Double entry clearance	30	(new category)
Multi entry clearance	44	(40)
Settlement and other long term entry clearances	60	(50)

The last fee has been non-refundable since 1 January 1986. All entry clearance fees will be non-refundable from 1 June 1988. From the same date fees will be charged on a per capita, not per passport, basis.

Mrs. Susan Donnelly

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will instruct Her Majesty's consul in Johannesburg to stay in regular contact with British passport holder Mrs. Susan Donnelly (nèe Wescott); if he will press the South African authorities for an explanation of the circumstances of her arrest and what charges are to be laid against her and how soon; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: As my hon. and learned Friend the Minister of State told the hon. Member on 23 May 1988, consular access has already been obtained to Mrs. Donnelly. Consular officials are also in regular touch with the local police authorities, who are holding Mrs. Donnelly under the provisions of South Africa's Internal Security Act. Our officials will continue to monitor her case and do all that they properly can to assist her.

Gibraltar (Shooting)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what precise information was available to his Department in the period prior to the shooting of three Irish Republican Army members in Gibraltar on 6 March regarding the nature and scope of any alleged terrorist attack which they were suspected of preparing; what were the sources and timing of that information and what action was taken as a result; whether any civilian employees of Her Majesty's Government were involved at any stage in the operation to locate and apprehend the terrorists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The hon. Member is clearly referring to intelligence matters on which it is not our practice to comment.

Departmental Officials (Language Qualifications)

Mr. Holland: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many of his officials at administrative grade are qualified, respectively, at (a) O-level, (b) A or S-level, (c) diploma and (d) university degree level in (i) French and (ii) another European Community language; and what procedures are operated by his Department to ensure that documents of the European Communities placed before the House are properly translated.

Mrs. Chalker: For diplomatic service staff the information on language qualifications is as follows:

(i)(a) 1,383; (i)(b) 914; (i)(c) 367; (i)(d) 313; (ii)(a) 1,733; (ii)(b) 757; (ii)(c) 495; (ii)(d) 304.

Information on the language qualifications of ODA staff is not held in the same way as information for diplomatic service officers. But my hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development will write to the hon. Member when the information that is available has been assembled.

The Commission is responsible for the translation of Community documents. To check all translations in London would not be operationally feasible and would greatly delay the depositing of documents in Parliament.

Arms Control Panel

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when was the last meeting of the Ministers' panel on disarmament arms control and non-proliferation; and what is its composition.

Mr. Mellor: The advisory panel on disarmament last met in April 1987. Since 1983 its composition has varied from one meeting to another, according to the agenda. It was established in 1964 to enable Ministers to discuss arms control issues with politicians, academics and non-governmental organisations. In recent years this dialogue has been continued and expanded through a number of increasingly specialised groupings.

BBC (External Services)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to increase the allocation of resources to the external services of the British Broadcasting Corporation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: None. The grants-in-aid for the BBC external services for 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91 were set out in the 1987 public expenditure survey at the level necessary to carry out the prescribed broadcasting output and sustain the 1981 audibility improvement programme.

Derrick Gregory

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he is making to the Government of Malaysia to commute the death penalty on Derrick Gregory.

Mr. Eggar: We are considering the content and timing of a plea for clemency on humanitarian grounds, which might be submitted by the British High Commissioner in Kuala Lumpur to the Malaysian Government in support of a petition which Mr. Gregory's lawyer is preparing.

Turkey

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of Turkey concerning the European conventions on the repatriation of prisoners and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Both the United Kingdom and Turkey are parties to the Council of Europe convention on the transfer of sentenced persons. The convention came into force for Turkey on 1 January 1988. There have been no discussions between our Governments on the operation of the convention, but there has been direct contact between the Home Office and the Turkish Ministry of Justice about individuals who have expressed an interest in transfer, under the terms of the convention, to serve the remainder of their sentences in their home countries. These exchanges are continuing.

Chile (Exiles)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what actions have been taken by Her Majesty's ambassador to Chile in respect of (a) the detention of former United Kingdom resident Jamie Caro and (b) the safety of other returning exiles.

Mr. Eggar: Sri Caro is a Chilean citizen. We have therefore no consular standing to intervene on his behalf. We are, however, aware of the practical difficulties faced by some Chileans now returning to their own country. Her Majesty's ambassador is in regular touch with returnees from the United Kingdom, who seem to find this helpful. He has discussed some of the returnees' practical difficulties with the Chilean authorities. We do not, however, believe that returning exiles are in any greater physical danger than others in Chile.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Statistics

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing information available to him for Brazil, China, Ethiopia, India, Kenya, Nigeria, Sri Lanka, the United States of America and the United Kingdom on (a) the total population, (b) the per capita gross national product in constant 1987 United States dollars, (c) the average annual rate of growth for the period 1970 to 1987, (d) the percentage of the population under 15 years of age and (e) the size of the population under 15 years of age.

Mr. Chris Patten: Available information on question (c) and for the latest available year on questions (a), (b),(d) and (e) is in the table.

Mr. Chris Patten: Information for the years in question is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Available information is as follows:

Nicaragua

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid the United Kingdom gave to Nicaragua in the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will publish a table showing how the aid was used in individual projects.

Mr. Chris Patten: The United Kingdom has given both bilateral and multilateral aid to Nicaragua. In 1986, bilateral aid was £86,000 of which £82,000 was for disaster relief and the remainder for technical co-operation. In 1987, bilateral aid was nil. The latest figures for multilateral aid to Nicaragua attributable to the United Kingdom are for 1985 when £2·9 million was contributed through all agencies of which £2·3 million was provided through the European Community. In that year, our bilateral aid was £116,000.

In addition to these amounts, we have co-financed with British voluntary agencies a number of small development projects in Nicaragua.

Latin America

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing for all countries in Latin America, information available to him for the latest year for which figures are available on the proportions of the male and female population who were economically active and the proportions of the female population economically active in the years 1960, 1970 and 1980.

Mr. Chris Patten: The information is as follows:

Aga Khan Foundation

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what controls will be put on the use of food granted to the Aga Khan Foundation.

Mr. Chris Patten: Her Majesty's Government have not made any donations of food to or through the Aga Khan Foundation; nor do they have any such plans.

Group of Seven

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the average percentage of gross national product given in aid by members of the Group of Seven leading industrialised countries, excluding the United Kingdom, in 1987 or in the latest available year.

Mr. Chris Patten: In 1986, the latest year for which official figures are available, the net official development assistance of the Group of Seven leading industrialised countries excluding the United Kingdom represented 0·32 per cent. of their combined GNP.

World Bank

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list in the Official Report all those votes taken at meetings of the World Bank since 1979, stating the position Her Majesty's Government took on each vote; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: It is not the policy of Her Majesty's Government to disclose how our executive director voted in the World Bank's executive board.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 7 June.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 7 June.

Mr. Ieaun Wyn Jones: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 7 June.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 7 June.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 7 June.

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 7 June.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 7 June.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 7 June.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 7 June.

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 7 June.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House, I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I hope to have an audience of Her Majesty the Queen.

Blandford Fly (Dorset)

Mr. Adley: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the co-ordination between the Department of the Environment, the Department of Employment and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in taking action to combat the scourge of the Blandford fly in Dorset.

The Prime Minister: I understand that there is to be a meeting on 8 June between representatives of the Health and Safety Executive, North Dorset district council and the Freshwater Biological Association to discuss the problem of the Blandford fly. Subsequently, if advice from the Independent Advisory Committee on Pesticides is required, all the approving Departments will automatically be involved. I am satisfied that there is good co-ordination between the Departments involved in pesticide approvals.

Church of Scotland (Reports)

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Prime Minister what response she will be making to the reports dealing with housing and the gap between the rich and poor presented to her at the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland on 21 May.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland will, in due course, respond on behalf of the Government, to the report "Housing Scotland's People".

The discussion of poverty appears to rest heavily on the old DHSS low-income families statistics, which used the supplementary benefit scale rates as the yardstick for the measurement of low income. This series has been the subject of a recent technical review, the report of which has been placed in the Library. The report highlights a number of significant weaknesses in the approach, including the fact that under it the more help provided to those dependent on benefit, the more people will appear to be on "low incomes". In addition, there are significant statistical reservations about estimates for Scotland in isolation. The hon. Member may be aware that the recently published "Households Below Average Income—a statistical analysis 1981-85" shows that those in the lowest income groups have seen higher than average increases in real incomes.

President Evren

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Prime Minister whom President Evren of Turkey will meet when he visits Britain.

The Prime Minister: As guest of Her Majesty the Queen, President Evren will meet members of the royal family and Ministers, as well as a number of right hon. and hon. Members, officials, business men and others with an interest in Turkey.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Rifle Club Range

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Lord President of the Council what information he has as to how much public money was spent on establishing the Palace of Westminster rifle club range; and as to how much public subsidy goes towards its annual expenditure.

Mr. Wakeham: There is no record of the Palace of Westminster rifle club range ever having received any public subvention or annual subsidy.

Sports and Social Club

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Lord President of the Council what information he has as to how much public money was spent on establishing the Houses of Parliament sports and social club; and what subsidy is given towards its annual expenditure.

Mr. Wakeham: There is no evidence of public money having been spent on the establishment of the Houses of Parliament sports and social club. Its annual expenditure is financed by the annual appeal to Members of both Houses, by subscriptions and by profits from the club's facilities.

Palace of Westminster (Visitors)

Mr. Ken Hargreaves: To ask the Lord President of the Council what plans he has to protect from inclement weather visitors to the Palace of Westminster queuing for admission via the Norman Porch.

Mr. Wakeham: A number of possible measures has been considered by the authorities of both Houses. No acceptable arrangement has yet been agreed, but the matter is regularly reviewed.

ENVIRONMENT

Property Services Agency

Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has yet completed his assessment of the report of the efficiency scrutiny into project management in the Property Services Agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: We have now considered the report, and have produced an action plan which sets out our response to its recommendations and our plans for implementation. I have today placed copies of the report and action plan in the Library.

Prospect Estate, Rushmoor

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the purpose of discussions currently taking place between his Department and officers of the borough of Rushmoor on the subject of major technical repairs for the Prospect estate; and when he will receive a deputation from the borough.

Mr. Waldegrave: I met a deputation from the borough of Rushmoor on 26 May and discussed with them the effects of the subsidy rules on projects for the renovation of dwellings on the Prospect estate.

European Sporting Events (Policing)

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is satisfied with the co-operation between British Transport Police and their European counterparts regarding the policing of European sporting events involving United Kingdom clubs, including arrangements for travelling thereto and therefrom.

Mr. Moynihan: I am advised that the British Transport police have excellent communications with their counterparts in Europe. I understand that they maintain close co-operation, as appropriate, on police intelligence and the travel arrangements of supporters.

Waste Tips (Gases)

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to tighten controls over the emission of methane and other gases from waste tips; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The Government put forward a number of proposals for strengthening the regulation of waste disposal in a consultation paper in September 1986. These proposals include empowering local authorities to require continuing precautions at waste disposal sites until they are safe. An announcement will be made shortly about the Government's decisions on these proposals.

An urgent survey by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution to establish the extent of the landfill gas problem is currently in hand. When that exercise is complete, the Government will consider whether further measures are necessary.

Water Pollution

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to increase the penalties for pollution of water supplies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The maximum penalties which can be imposed by Magistrates for offences under part II of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 are fines not exceeding £2,000 and terms of imprisonment of up to three months. On indictment there is no limit on the fine that may be imposed, and the term of imprisonment can be up to two years. Penalties for pollution offences are kept under regular review, but there are no immediate plans for increasing them.

British Waterways Freight Organisation

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions took place with his Department concerning the sale of the British waterways freight organisation; what consultation took place with interested parties; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The British Waterways Board discussed with the Department its proposed approach to the sale of its road freight depots. The board advised staff and trade unions in February that it was seeking private sector involvement to secure the future of the depots. Staff and unions have been given details of the terms of the sale, which enabled staff to transfer on their existing conditions of service.

Dog Wardens

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, in light of the renewed suspension of postal deliveries to the Hanway Estate, Hanwell W7, as a result of canine attacks on postmen, he will exempt local authority expenditure on dog wardens from the ambit of expenditure control; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Secretary of State has treated this request that he exempt local authority expenditure on dog wardens from the ambit of expenditure control as a representation that he make a specification subtracting this expenditure from total expenditure for block grant purposes under powers in the Local Government Finance Act 1987. He has considered this request very carefully but is not minded to make such a specification in the light of the information available to him.

Sewage Discharges

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which water authorities have so far submitted to his Department their reports for 1987 detailing works which have failed to comply with discharge consent conditions.

Mr. Moynihan: All water authorities have submitted reports detailing sewage treatment works which failed to comply with numerical discharge consent conditions in 1987.

Palace of Westminster Toilets (Cleaning)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the last five occasions prior to 24 May when the wall tiles in the ladies' toilets of the Committee Room Corridor were fully cleaned; when the floor was cleaned; and if he will give the same information for each of the ladies' toilets in the Palace of Westminster.

Mr. Chope: The wall tiles and floors were cleaned in accordance with the terms of the contract on 17, 18, 19, 20 and 23 May.

Ramsgate Harbour (Access Road)

Mr. Aitken: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to announce his decision on the planning application for the Ramsgate harbour access road.

Mr. Waldegrave: Shortly.

Rating Reform

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what account he has taken of the potential usefulness of using dates of birth in the community charge register as a means of assistance for the assessors.

Mr. Howard: There will be no assessors in England and Wales. The Government's view of the usefulness of dates of birth to community charges registration officers in England and Wales was set out by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, during the Committee stage of the Local Government Finance Bill (Official Report, Standing Committee E; 9 February, c. 524).

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether community charge officers will be able to have access to the personal data that may be carried by the Government data network.

Mr. Howard: No.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when methods of litter collection and disposal were last updated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The collection of litter and its disposal within the general waste stream together with other refuse collected in their respective areas is the responsibility of the relevant local authorities. It is for them to assess and utilise the most up-to-date and cost-effective methods available which are most suitable for their particular areas.

Hazardous Waste (Shipments)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he intends to take to make sure that the Government comply with all EEC directives relating to transfrontier shipments of hazardous waste; when Her Majesty's Government will agree a definition of what is hazardous; whether it will adopt the current Belgian definition, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: We plan to implement the directives by means of regulations to be laid before Parliament before the summer recess, to come into effect in the early autumn.

The control and supervision procedures introduced by the regulations will apply to special wastes as defined in the Control of Pollution (Special Waste) Regulations 1980 and will replace existing controls on imports and exports contained in the 1980 regulations. In addition, the procedures will apply to such imports of non special waste as are notified to waste disposal authorities by a holder in another member state as being "hazardous" in terms of that country's implementation of the directive.

The effect of the regulations will be to provide waste disposal authorities, both at the port of entry and at the disposal site, with prior notification of shipments and better information on the nature of the waste. Details of the proposed procedures have been circulated to local authority and industry associations.

Uranium Discharges

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what levels of uranium were discharged into Rivacre brook, and from there into the river Mersey, by British Nuclear Fuels plc Capenhurst in each year from 1983 to 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The annual total uranium alpha activity discharged into the Rivacre brook by British Nuclear Fuels plc from its Capenhurst works in each year from 1983 to 1986 is as follows. Data for 1987 and 1988 are not yet available.

Year	Annual discharge in mega becquerels
1984	800
1985	900
1986	2,000

These levels demonstrate that the discharge represents an insignificant radiological hazard to members of the public.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will impose an absolute level on discharges of uranium by British Nuclear Fuels plc at Capenhurst; and at what level that will be set.

Mr. Moynihan: The certificate of authorisation for the disposal of low level liquid radioactive waste from British Nuclear Fuels plc Capenhurst works into the Rivacre brook, which sets concentration limits on uranium discharges is currently subject to review by the authorising Departments. It is the intention to include limits on total quantities discharged. The review will be completed before the end of the year.

Ozone Layer

Miss Fookes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the results of research into the damage to the ozone layer over the Arctic and the Antarctic from the production of chlorofluorocarbons.

Mr. Moynihan: It seems evident from recent experiments that the Antarctic ozone hole is caused by man-made CFCs in the special conditions which exist over Antarctica each spring.

The effect of CFCs on the stratosphere over the Arctic is still far from clear; a large experimental programme (in which the United Kingdom is participating) will take place in the Arctic in January 1989 to try to resolve this. Our stratosphere ozone review group has agreed to provide an up-to-date report on these matters as soon as possible.

Ealing Council (Borrowing)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will investigate borrowing by Ealing council against current and future housing investment programme allocations and capital receipts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The means by which a local authority may borrow are specified in schedule 13 to the Local Government Act 1972 and regulations made thereunder. If my hon. Friend has reason to believe that Ealing council is raising money by other means, I invite him to place the evidence before the council's auditor.

Water Byelaws

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will implement water byelaws in England and Wales in accordance with the model issued by his Department in 1986.

Mr. Moynihan: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Hornchurch (Mr. Squire) on 27 April 1988, at column 165.

Legionnaire's Disease

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, in view of the recent outbreak of Legionnaire's Disease at the British Broadcasting Corporation he will instruct the Health and Safety Executive to give wider publicity, including advertising, to the dangers of improperly managed water systems in large buildings.

Mr. Nicholls: I have been asked to reply.

The Health and Safety Executive has already published advice in guidance note No. 48 of its environmental hygiene series on the precautionary measures that can be taken to minimise the occurrence of legionnaire's disease. Copies of this guidance note are available from HMSO and I welcome the opportunity provided by my hon. Friend to publicise it further. Copies of the note will be placed in the Library.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

National Farmers Union

Mr. Favell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the president of the National Farmers Union; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. MacGregor: I last met the president of the National Farmers Union on 16 May when we discussed the Commission's 1988-89 farm price proposals.

Milk Marketing Board

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the chairman of the Milk Marketing Board; and what issues were discussed.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My right hon. Friend last met the chairman of the Milk Marketing Board on 25 April, when a number of issues of current concern to the dairy industry were discussed.

Food Industry (Exports)

Mr. Bovis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the performance of the food industry in increasing exports to Community partners.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Exports of food from the United Kingdom to other countries of the EC12 have more than doubled since 1980 and now comprise over 70 per cent. of the total of our food exports. This is a considerable achievement. However, given that this represents a little over £2,000 million in a total food market in the rest of the EC12 estimated at over £350,000 million, there are clearly further opportunities to be exploited.

Surplus Food and Drink

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the current total volume and value in sterling of surplus food and drink in the European Economic Community.

Mr. MacGregor: A note setting out the volume of EC intervention stocks of agricultural commodities which includes only the surplus quantities held in EC intervention is deposited in the Library of the House and is updated monthly. The estimated book value of the EC stocks excluding depreciation, set out in the most recently deposited note, is £4·0 billion.

Farmers

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers there are in each county in England at the latest convenient date.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The information requested is shown in the table.

Somerset Wetlands

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how long he estimates the Somerset wetlands will continue to qualify as an environmentally sensitive area at current rates of drying out; and whether he will facilitate the introduction of a system of water table management aimed at preserving the levels, and moors, wetland status.

Mr. Gummer: My officials have met representatives from Wessex water authority, the NCC and RSPB to discuss their recent report on declining water levels and breeding wading bird numbers in the Somerset levels and moors. As a result, it has been agreed that a joint technical assessment of the current situation will be carried out in consultation with IDBs, environmental and farming interests. Proposals for remedial action will be examined if they are found to be necessary.

Alternative Land Use

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many applications have been received under the farm diversification grant scheme; and what progress has been made towards meeting the targets for applications under the scheme.

Mr. Gummer: By the end of April we had received 514 applications under the scheme in England. Grant has now been approved worth £686,000 on total capital investments of £2·745 million. We are delighted by the enthusiastic response from farmers to this new scheme.

Feed Additives

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultations he has had on the use of (a) Carbadox and (b) Olaquindox as an animal feed additive.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I am not authorised to consult representative organisations on the authorisation of medicinal feed additives. The following committees have been consulted at various times on one or other of these products:

(a) the veterinary products committee.
(b) the chief medical officers committee on mutagenicity of chemicals in food, consumer products and the environment.
(c) the chief medical officers committee on carcinogenicity of chemicals in food, consumer products and the environment.

Radionuclide Sampling

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make available the information contained in the document "Radionuclide Sampling in the Environment 1987", in the form of a map with sampling points marked as accurately as possible; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I assume the publication referred to is "Radionuclide Levels in Food, Animals and Agricultural Products 1987". The information in section A of the document is given by product and by country. Section B gives a summary of live monitoring of sheep in Cumbria, Wales and by county outside the restricted areas. Section C gives laboratory results of sheepmeat sampling by zones within the restricted areas. The document summarises 279,000 monitoring results and the cost of individual mapping would be disproportionate.

Badgers (Tuberculosis)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many badgers have been killed by his Ministry in each parish in 1986 and 1987 as a result of herd breakdown of tuberculosis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 4 May to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) at columns 482-84. All badgers taken in those removal operations were killed for post mortem examination.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 19 May, Official Report, column 569, when he expects the live testing of badgers for tuberculosis to begin and on what scale.

Mr. Donald Thompson [holding answer 26 May 1988]: Until the laboratory tests have been completed and the results validated it is not possible to say when the live testing of badgers for tuberculosis will begin, or on what scale.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any further information regarding the timing and scale of use of the tuberculosis vaccine for badgers.

Mr. Donald Thompson [holding answer 26 May 1988]: I have nothing to add to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member on 20 May at col. 612.

Sheep Paint

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why the paint issued to farmers in Cumbria to mark their sheep following the restrictions after Chernobyl contained no label indicating that it was harmful.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The tins did carry a warning in the form of a manufacturer's label.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place in the Library the data sheet of application details of Dac-Chlor A.A. paint issued to farmers to mark sheep in the restricted areas following the Chernobyl disaster.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Examples of the written instructions issued by the Ministry to farmers concerning the application of Doc Chlor AA paint are being placed in the Library of the House.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why the tins of paint issued to farmers to mark their sheep in the restricted area of Cumbria, following the Chernobyl disaster were collected in by his staff when the paint had been used and the tins emptied; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The used tins were collected for accounting purposes and to ensure that all supplies had been fully utilised.

Whaling Commission

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the Whaling Commission; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Gummer: I opened the 39th annual meeting of the International Whaling Commission last year and issued a statement to this year's meeting which has just taken place in New Zealand re-emphasising the need to uphold the moratorium on commercial whaling, stressing that it should not be undermined by misuse of provisions for scientific whaling and stating that further attention should be paid to a number of issues including humane killing to further the IWC's important responsibilities in the conservation and proper use of the world's natural resources.

Free Food

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make arrangements for the constituents of South Hams to receive free deliveries of beef and butter recently announced, which are currently unavailable because of a lack of delivery arrangements.

Mr. MacGregor: Applications were invited until 29 February from non-profit making organisations willing and able to distribute beef and butter to the needy. Although a large number of applications were received, none were from South Hams. Since the whole of the United Kingdom's allocation of funds has been divided between the 127 designated organisations, it would not be appropriate to entertain late applications. Nor do the rules of the scheme permit us to accept late applications as qualifying for the use of European Community funds.

Chernobyl

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the total staff and administration cost to his Department of the Chernobyl accident.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Precise figures are not available, but on a broad assessment of the Department's programmes for food safety and for the radiological protection of our food supply I estimate that staff costs resulting from the Chernobyl accident are of the order of £1·9 million. In addition, my Department has spent some £0·4 million on the purchase of samples and of materials and equipment for analytical purposes and for monitoring.

Nutrition Information

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to provide consumers with suitable information to assist them in using the nutrition information provided voluntarily by manufacturers on food labels designed to enable individuals to achieve a balanced diet.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The major step we have taken in this area is the issue of voluntary nutrition labelling guidelines to encourage manufacturers and retailers providing nutrition information to do so in a standard format. This will enable consumers to compare foods more easily and to make healthy choices. We fully recognise the need to provide consumers with educational material to help them obtain maximum benefit from nutrition labelling. We have a very successful free booklet "Look at the Label" on understanding food labels and this is currently being updated to take account of the advent of nutrition labelling. Another valuable guide is our "Manual of Nutrition". The Health Education Authority has produced material on diet and health and there are numerous books by private authors available to the general public. A wide range of useful nutrition information is also produced by food manufacturers and retailers.

Storm Damage

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he is in a position to announce the Government's conclusions on the recommendations made by the House of Commons Select Committee on Agriculture and by the forest windblow action committee for further financial assistance for the restoration of woodlands damaged by the storm of 16 October 1987.

Mr. MacGregor: I am replying today to the Select Committee and a copy of my response will be placed in the House of Commons Library. Both the Select Committee and the forest windblow action committee recommended further financial assistance to deal with the rehabilitation of storm damaged woodland. The action committee in particular recommended:

(i) a short-term transport subsidy aimed at encouraging the movement of pine and beech wood to more distant markets (supported by the Select Committee);

(ii) a supplement to the normal Forestry Commission grants for replanting woodlands damaged in the storm of 16 October 1987.

After careful consideration of these recommendations, I have taken the view that the action committee's second proposal would provide a longer-lasting and more direct benefit than a transport subsidy in respect of the woodlands concerned. I recognise that owners whose woodlands suffered storm damage on 16 October 1987 will incur additional costs both in preparing sites for planting and in the planting itself. As an incentive to replant in these circumstances, I therefore intend to make special supplements of £150 per hectare for conifers and of £400 per hectare for broadleaves available over the next five years on top of the Forestry Commission's normal planting grants in respect of restocking in these storm-damaged woodlands. These supplements will be provided for eligible restocking carried out by applicants under the new woodland grant scheme and for those who still qualify under the commission's old schemes. On mature consideration the Government have concluded that such a supplement is the best way of meeting the Select Committee's concern that we consider whether more support should be available to help repair the damage. The European Commission is being informed under the provisions of article 93 of the treaty of Rome.

I have decided that there is an insufficient case for a transport subsidy. In reaching this conclusion, I have to take account of the fact that the loss of timber value, as opposed to the replanting cost, is insurable. The effect of a subsidy would be to reduce the insurable loss which it is not appropriate for the Government to undertake. Moreover, where there is a local glut after a storm prices will decline in any event and as a result it will be more economic for purchasers of timber to transport it, including over greater distances. Such a subsidy in these circumstances would be unlikely to provide cost-effective benefits.

Full details of the administrative arrangements for the new supplements will be announced by the Forestry Commission as soon as possible, but any owners who have already taken steps to secure the replanting of their storm-damaged woods under the commission's grant schemes will not be placed at a disadvantage as we have agreed that the supplement may be applied to them retrospectively.

It is estimated that the total cost of the supplements, covering the replanting of some 5000 hectares of conifers and 7000 hectares of broadleaves, will come to £3·5 million over the five-year period. There will be no addition to the overall provision for public expenditure programmes set out in Cm 288-II.

I hope that full advantage will be taken of these special supplements, so that the much-loved landscapes so sadly affected by the storm can eventually be restored to their former state.

Budgie Seed

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the proposal to increase the levy on budgie seed made by the European Commission; and whether this proposal will fall under the majority voting procedures within the Council of Ministers

Mr. Donald Thompson: We remain firmly opposed to this proposal, which would lead to unjustifiable increases in the import levies for canary seed, buckwheat and millet. The proposal is made under article 43 of the treaty of Rome, and may therefore be adopted by qualified majority.

New Zealand Lamb

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will consider pressing for a minimum import price for New Zealand lamb imported into the European Community.

Mr. Donald Thompson [holding answer 27 May 1988]: The European Council in February 1988 invited the Commission to prepare a mandate for negotiations with third countries on the import arrangements for sheepmeat. The Commission envisaged that this might contain a number of points including the respecting of import price discipline.

We shall consider the draft mandate and the appropriateness of the individual elements in it once the Commission submits it to the Council.

Pigmeat MCAs

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received concerning the pigmeat monetary compensation amount regime.

Mr. Donald Thompson [holding answer 27 May 1988]: We have received a substantial number of representations on this subject. My right hon. Friend has made clear in the Agriculture Council our commitment to press for the complete elimination of all United Kingdom MCAs in the pigmeat sector.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many people are at present employed in agriculture and related employment in the United Kingdom, the English regions, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland; what are the corresponding figures for 1978, 1968, and 1958; and in each case what is the percentage difference compared with the present situation.

Mr. Donald Thompson [holding answer 27 May 1988]: Numbers of persons engaged in agriculture in England, Wales, Scotland, Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom as a whole at June 1987 are shown in the following table (1) along with corresponding figures for the years 1958, 1968 and 1978 as far as these are available. No figures are available for employment related to agriculture. Table 2 shows the numbers engaged in agriculture in the regions of England in 1978 and 1987. This table excludes minor holdings which do not make an annual census return. Comparable regional figures are not available for 1958 or 1968 because of change in definition. The final table shows the percentage reductions between each of the previous dates and 1987 in the number of farm workers, the only category for which data are available for all years.

EMPLOYMENT

North-West (Tourism)

14. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on his Department's proposals to encourage foreign tourists to visit the north-west of England.

Mr. Lee: The British Tourist Authority has, in conjunction with the North West tourist board and the Northern Consortium developed a range of promotional activities to encourage overseas visitors to the north-west of England. These include brochures and videos on holidays in the region, travel guides and sales missions aimed at overseas tour operators and travel agents.

Equal Pay

15. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on his Department's policies on the implementation of the principle of equal pay for work of equal value, in the light of the decision in Hayward v. Cammell Laird Shipbuilders Ltd.

Mr. Nicholls: The Government fully support the principle of equal pay for work of equal value. We monitor closely the working of the Equal Pay and Sex Discrimination Acts to see whether they are operating fairly and effectively. We shall continue to do this in the light of this important decision and of other test cases still before the courts.

Skill Shortages

16. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement about current proposals to deal with skill shortages.

Mr. Cope: The strength of the economy is leading to increasing demand for skills. We have made a massive increase in our investment in training since 1979, particularly for young people and the unemployed. Employers need to continue to take advantage of this whilst also stepping up their own investment in the skills of their employees.

Adult Training Programme

17. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement about the plans for the new adult training programme employment training.

Mr. Fowler: The new employment training programme is to come into operation on 5 September on the basis of the unanimous recommendations of the Training Commission which I have accepted in full. The commission has made considerable progress on the detailed implementation arrangements and has just begun the process of signing contracts under the new programme.

41. Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he is considering making any changes in the proposed adult training schemes.

Mr. Nicholls: No. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State accepted in full the recommendations made to him by the Training Commission—and recently announced his decisions on some detailed issues arising from the Commission's recommendations. The new employment training programme will come into operation as planned on 5 September.

47. Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many local authorities and voluntary organisations have indicated that they will not participate in the adult training scheme unless the arrangements for the scheme are changed.

Mr. Nicholls: The Training Commission is currently in negotiation with potential providers of training for the new programme including local authorities and voluntary organisations. They were asked for proposals or clear expressions of interest by 3 June. It is, therefore, too early to take a firm view on how many will take part. But it is clear that large numbers are serious about getting involved. Training Commission officials have been and are giving them all possible help. I urge all local authorities and voluntary organisations, particularly existing community programme sponsors and agents, who have indicated interest to submit proposals as soon as possible.

61. Mr. Charles Wardle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received on the adult training scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The community programme and our provision for unemployed adults will be replaced by employment training from 5 September. I have received a number of representations from hon. Members and others about this important new programme which will provide quality training for longer-term unemployed people.

62. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received on the principle of trainees on the adult training scheme receiving their full entitlement to benefit plus a training allowance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: I have received a number of representations from hon. Members and others about the payments to be made to participants on employment training. Decisions by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on the training allowance implement the unanimous recommendations made by the Training Commission and will ensure that all participants will be better off on the programme than remaining unemployed and claiming benefit.

63. Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment under what conditions single parents who wish to participate in the adult training scheme will be eligible for child care allowance.

Mr. Nicholls: All lone parents who participate in employment training will be entitled to have child care costs of up to £50 a week for each child placed with a childminder, nursery or creche registered with a local authority met by the Training Commission.

68. Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to meet representatives of the Trade Union Council general council to discuss the adult training scheme.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend met representatives of the TUC general council on 18 May to discuss employment training. There are no plans for a further meeting.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the maximum weekly top-up payable to participants on the adult training scheme beyond the £10 to £12 per week to be paid by the Manpower Services Commission without incurring benefit loss or tax liability; and what would be the effect of employers deciding to make a payment of more than £5 weekly.

Mr. Nicholls: Under DHSS regulations, regular voluntary payments of up to £5 a week per family unit may be disregarded for the purposes of assessing entitlement to income support or housing benefit. Such payments are not liable to income tax. If a payment in excess of £5 were made to a trainee in receipt of income support, the first £5 would be disregarded and the balance deducted £1 for £1 from his or her benefit entitlement. The payment would not be liable to income tax.

Labour Statistics

18. Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current levels of unemployment in Hampshire and the south-east.

Mr. Lee: In April 1988, the number of unemployed claimants in the county of Hampshire was 40,800, a fall of 17,000, or more than 29 per cent. compared with a year ago. The comparable figure for the south-east region was 549,700, a fall of 171,700 or nearly 24 per cent. over the year.

21. Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current levels of unemployment in Yorkshire.

Mr. Lee: In April 1988, the number of unemployed claimants in the counties of South Yorkshire, North Yorkshire and West Yorkshire was 205,700, a fall of 39,400 or more than 16 per cent. compared with a year ago.

31. Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the proportion of population of working age in employment in the United Kingdom and in the European Community.

Mr. Lee: Taking working ages as 15 to 64 years the proportion in 1985 was 66 per cent. in the United Kingdom and 57 per cent. in the European Community as a whole.

32. Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on current levels of unemployment in the south-west.

Mr. Lee: In April 1988, seasonally adjusted adult unemployment in the south-west region was 145,400, compared with 186,900 in April 1987, a fall of 22.2 per cent. over the last 12 months.

34. Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current levels of unemployment in the west midlands.

Mr. Lee: In April 1988, seasonally adjusted adult unemployment in the west midlands region was 249,200, compared with 313,000 in April 1987, a fall of 20.4 per cent. over the last 12 months.

40. Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current levels of employment.

Mr. Lee: In December 1987, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 24,735,000 people in the employed labour force in Great Britain. The employed labour force is the sum of employees in employment, the self-employed and H.M. forces.

43. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the present level of employment in Suffolk.

Mr. Lee: Employment statistics for counties and smaller areas are available only for dates when censuses of employment are taken, and the most recent are for September 1984. There were then 221,000 employees in employment, excluding self-employed people and members of Her Majesty's forces, in the county of Suffolk.

48. Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current levels of unemployment in East Anglia.

Mr. Lee: In April 1988, seasonally adjusted adult unemployment in the East Anglia region was 55,400 compared with 76,000 in April 1987, a fall of 27·1 per cent. over the last 12 months.

50. Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current levels of employment in the London borough of Southwark.

Mr. Lee: Employment statistics for local areas are available only for dates when censuses of employment are taken and the most recent are for September 1984. There were then 130,700 employees in employment, excluding self-employed people and members of Her Majesty's forces, in the London borough of Southwark.

51. Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the level of unemployment in Liverpool, Riverside.

Mr. Lee: In April 1988 the number of unemployed claimants in the Liverpool, Riverside parliamentary constituency was 9,922, a fall of 1,126 over the last 12 months.

Part-time Workers

26. Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will consider the extension of full employment protection rights to part-time workers.

Mr. Nicholls: No. To do so would impose additional costs on employers and discourage them from recruiting part-time workers.

Community Work

27. Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what progress is being made in linking unemployment benefit to work associated with benefiting the community; and if he will make a statement

Mr. Nicholls: It is open to people in receipt of unemployment benefit to undertake voluntary work in the community if they wish. This does not affect their entitlement to benefit so long as they remain available for work.

38. Mr. Crowther: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any plans to extend beyond the pilot areas the practice of recalling for further restart interviews those who have not taken up any of the offers made at their earlier interview.

Mr. Lee: As announced in the White Paper, "Training for Employment", the restart programme will be further developed during 1988-89. An important aspect of this development will be the gradual introduction of follow-up interviews throughout the country. They will be carried out by both restart counselling staff and by claimant advisers, and will be offered to those who most need additional help. This will include those who decline all offers of help at their main restart interview.

Channel Tunnel

39. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his latest estimate of jobs created by the construction of the Channel tunnel.

Mr. David Mitchell: I have been asked to reply.

It is estimated that about 100,000 man years of work will be generated in the United Kingdom by Eurotunnel and British Rail work on the Channel tunnel and its equipment during its construction.

Retraining Grants

44. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to review the availability of Manpower Services Commission grants for retraining; and if he will make a statement.

Disabled People

45. Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any plans to improve the services provided by his Department for disabled people.

Mr. Lee: As announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment during the debate on the Local Government Bill on Wednesday 9 March, Official Report, column 346, I am reviewing the policies and programmes that my Department supports for disabled people. Plans for improvements to services will be developed in the light of this review.

Young Persons (Advice)

46. Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what arrangements are being made by his Department to provide advice on employment or training to young people who cease to be eligible for benefits on 4 September.

Mr. Cope: From September 12 when most young people under 18 will cease to be eligible for income support, the Government are extending their guarantee of a YTS place to all 16 and 17-year-olds who are not in work or further education. As a result, no young person under 18 need be unemployed. Advice and help in applying for training and employment opportunities will be promptly and readily available, as now, from the careers services provided by local authorities and from my Department's jobcentres.

Building and Construction Sites (Safety)

49. Mr. Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he next plans to meet the chairman of the Health and Safety Commission to discuss safety on building and construction sites; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: I have not planned to meet the chairman of the Health and Safety Commission to discuss safety on building and construction sites. The Government fully support the Health and Safety Executive's approach to improving safety standards in this area, which was outlined in the debate on 2 December 1987. It includes the current series of blitzes and other initiatives designed to effectively impress on employers and others the importance of safety.

Enterprise Agencies

53. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a further statement on the progress of enterprise agencies.

Mr. Cope: There are now over 400 local enterprise agencies in the United Kingdom. My Department, through the local enterprise agency grant scheme, encourages the development of viable agencies in England; 189 agencies were supported in 1987-88.

Lost Working Days (Strikes)

56. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many working days were lost by strike action in January 1979 and January 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The number of working days lost through stoppages of work due to industrial disputes in January 1979 is 2,966,000. The comparable figure for January 1988 is provisionally estimated as 92,000 lost working days.

59. Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the average number of hours of overtime worked per manufacturing industry employee during the last quarter of 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The information available relates to overtime hours worked by operatives in manufacturing industry. During the last quarter of 1987 the average number of weekly overtime hours worked per operative was 3·7 seasonally adjusted. 71. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a further statement on the progress of the YTS.

Mr. Cope: At the end of April 1988 there were 381,000 young people training on the two-year YTS. Over 50 per cent. of trainees entering their second year on the scheme have already gained a vocational qualification. Latest survey results show that when young people leave YTS, 75 per cent. go into jobs or into further education and training. The YTS is firmly established among young people as a natural and valued start to working life, while employers welcome YTS as the means to ensuring a highly trained and adaptable work force.

Accidents at Work

67. Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proposals he has to reduce accidents at work.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Commission and Executive currently have a number of initiatives under way to reduce the number of accidents at work. I expect the commission to submit proposals for the next three years to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State later this year.

Centres for the Unemployed

70. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to ensure continuance of the centres for the unemployed after the ending of the community programme.

Mr. Nicholls: Applications for the continuance of centres for the unemployed will be considered in the same way as all other proposals under the new programme for unemployed adults, employment training.

Long-term Unemployment

72. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what have been the results of the trial use of outreach workers and video facilities to make contact with the longer-term unemployed.

Mr. Lee: The employment service is trying a number of outreach activities to make its services more accessible to unemployed people, including the long-term unemployed. The main projects are:

Specialist "inner city officers" working from jobcentres.

Direct access to jobs and information through videos and information technology.

Advertising of jobs on television.

These projects are still being evaluated.

Registered Disabled People

73. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the number of registered disabled people unemployed on 30 April.

Mr. Lee: I regret that this information is not available. The only count made of unemployed registered disabled people is of those who choose to register for work at jobcentres. The latest figures available show that on 8 January there were 21,765 unemployed registered disabled people registered for work at jobcentres.

Benefit Changes

76. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment in how many cases his Department's attention or that of the Manpower Services Commission has been drawn to individuals in the various employment and training schemes being placed in difficulty as a consequence of the social security and housing benefit changes.

Mr. Nicholls: None.

Growth

77. Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which sectors of the industrial and service industries are currently showing the most growth and potential for growth throughout the United Kingdom.

Mr. Lee: During 1987, employment in the United Kingdom grew fastest in banking, insurance and finance (by 7 per cent.), construction (by 4 per cent.) and transport and communications (by 3 per cent.). In addition, employment in tourism-related industries grew by over 3 per cent. in 1987.

The Department does not make forecasts of employment changes. However with the economy about to enter its eighth successive year of growth, all sectors of the economy should benefit from the continuation of the Government's current economic policies.

Child Care Payments

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made of the reasons for the current rate of take up of the child care payments in the 10 pilot programme areas.

Mr. Cope: Under the pilot scheme in 10 areas, child care payments were made available for lone parents who are eligible for the new job training scheme. People who are registered as unemployed for more than six months are eligible for the new job training scheme, but those, including lone parents who are on benefits, who are not registered as unemployed, are not eligible.

The employment training programme, which will replace the new job training scheme from September, will extend child care payments for lone parents, on these terms, nationally. In addition, we have announced that lone parents, all of whose children are in full-time education, and who have received income support on DHSS order books for at least six months, will be eligible for the programme and for child care payments.

Wages

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the average hourly wage for (a) full-time female employees, (b) part-time female employees, (c) full-time male employees, and (d) part-time male employees, in the English regions since 1985, in cash and real terms.

Figures for 1987-88 are not yet available.

Figures for 1978 can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Single Market

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what changes will be necessary in United Kingdom employment legislation in order to satisfy the harmonisation requirements of the European Community for the achievement of the single market in 1992.

Mr. Cope: No directives have been adopted in the context of completion of the single market in 1992 which require changes in the United Kingdom employment legislation.

Building Sites (London)

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were the estimated number of building sites in London during 1987 and the number of inspectors in the field in London, inspecting these sites during 1987.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 26 May 1988]: The HSE does not keep estimates of the number of building sites and cannot provide the information sought. On 31 December 1987, a total of 12 qualified inspectors were employed on construction work in London.

Building Sites (Prosecutions)

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the final outcome in terms of (a) construction sites visited, (b) prohibition and improvement notices issued and (c) prosecutions initiated, with the results, for the series of visits to construction sites carried out by the Health and Safety Executive in 1987.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 26 May 1988]: During the series of construction site blitzes carried out by the Health and Safety Executive in 1987, a total of 4,289 construction sites were visited, 1,006 prohibition and 28 improvement notices were issued, and 25 prosecutions were initiated. The present series of construction blitzes will continue until September 1988. The results of prosecutions initiated are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

THE ARTS

Libraries

Mr. Haynes: To ask the Minister for the Arts how many complaints he has received in the past 12 months from library users that public libraries are not sufficiently client-orientated.

Mr. Luce: None, but a number of the representations made on the Green Paper, "Financing our public library service: four subjects for debate", have advocated the development of more client-orientated services.

British Telecom

Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister for the Arts what information he has on sponsorship of the arts undertaken by British Telecom.

Mr. Luce: I am delighted by the recent increase in British Telecom's programme of arts sponsorship. Under the business sponsorship incentive scheme, I have made 12 awards of £115,394 to match new sponsorships by BT headquarters, BT mobile communications and seven BT regions. I know that a number of other BT regions also support local arts activities.

Premium Book Subscription Schemes

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister for the Arts what evidence he has of the outcome of premium book subscription schemes in (a) New Zealand and (b) West Germany.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 26 May 1988]: I understand that the schemes operated in New Zealand and West Germany are not premium book subscription schemes of the kind proposed in my Green Paper.

SCOTLAND

AIDS

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report for each health authority in Scotland the number of persons suffering from AIDS; and if he will disaggregate the statistics by age and sex.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: To the end of April 1988, reports had been received of 56 cases of persons with AIDS in Scotland, of whom 50 were male and six were female. 26 of the males and five of the females were alive at that date. Disaggregations by age are not available. As the figures of AIDS cases and deaths for particular health board areas are, in some cases, very low, and as their publication may in consequence endanger medical confidentiality, geographical breakdowns are not published.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his Department's latest estimate of the number of people in Scotland that are currently HIV positive.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: We have not made an estimate of the number of people in Scotland who are HIV positive. Of those who have chosen to be tested for HIV antibodies, by the end of March 1988 1,436 had been found to be HIV positive.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many terminations of pregnancy have occurred in Scotland because the mother is HIV positive.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There have been 26 terminations of pregnancy since 1985 on women who were recorded as HIV positive.

New Hospitals

Mr Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each health board the dates of approval for all new hospitals approved since 1979.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is as follows.

All projects approved since 1979

Rating Reform

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether community charge officers will be able to ask for information concerning an individual from gas, water and electricity boards; and whether those boards could exchange information about individuals to the community charge officer.

Mr. Lang: Under section 17(3) of the Abolition of Domestic Rates Etc. (Scotland) Act 1987, community charges registration officers have access, for the purpose of carrying out their functions, to information held by regional councils as water authorities. They have no access to information held by electricity boards or British Gas plc (Scotland), except in the unlikely event (which may also apply to regional councils as water authorities) of these bodies being "responsible persons" in relation to particular premises for community charge registration purposes. None of the bodies mentioned will have access to the community charges register beyond that provided for in section 20(2) of the 1987 Act.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish all cost estimates made in relation to the implementation of the community charge in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: The only cost estimates made by my right hon. and learned Friend were those contained in the explanatory and financial memorandum to the Abolition of Domestic Rates Etc. (Scotland) Bill. A record of all the estimates made by local authorities and others is not held centrally.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will issue advice to Scottish local authorities to inform community charge officers that they should indicate on the forms they send to members of the public that the names and addresses of individuals which are collected in relation to the community charge can be sold or disclosed to other organisations without their consent or knowledge.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend is considering whether any restriction should be placed on the parts of the community charges register available for inspection by the public which may be made available for sale. Pending that consideration, I do not consider that formal notification to individuals of the present position on sale of the register is required. It is already made clear in the notice to be sent to registered persons informing them of their entry in the register (schedule 1 to the Community Charges (Registration) (Scotland) Regulations 1988) that certain parts of the register will be available for public inspection.

Prosthetists

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if his Department has costed a National Health Service workshop and prosthetists limb fitting service.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the numbers of prosthetists working in the Health Service who are (a) contractor employed and (b) employed by the health boards.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There are two contractor-employed prosthetists working in the Health Service in Scotland and 18 employed by health boards.

Kerb Crawling

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many arrests for kerb crawling have been made by Strathclyde police in Glasgow in the last 12 months and the previous 12 months;

(2) how many convictions there have been in Glasgow for kerb crawling in the last 12 months and the previous 12 months.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There is no statutory offence of kerb crawling in Scotland. Depending on the circumstances, incidents involving kerb crawling may be charged as breach of the peace but statistics on such convictions are not separately identifiable in the Scottish Home and Health Department classification of crimes and offences.

Prostitution

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many convictions there have been in Glasgow for soliciting in the last 12 months and the previous 12 months.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In 1987, 444 persons were convicted in Glasgow of offences relating to prostitution. The figure for 1986 was 504.

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many owners of saunas in Glasgow have been arrested for offences in connection with prostitution in the last 12 months and the previous 12 months;

(2) how many managers of saunas in Glasgow have been arrested for offences in connection with prostitution in the last 12 months and the previous 12 months.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Statistics on arrests are not held centrally.

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many owners of saunas in Glasgow have been convicted for offences in connection with prostitution in the last 12 months and the previous 12 months;

(2) how many managers of saunas in Glasgow have been convicted for offences in connection with prostitution in the last 12 months and the previous 12 months.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many licence holders operating saunas in Glasgow have had their licences revoked because of reasons connected with prostitution in the last 12 months and the previous 12 months.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I understand that saunas in Glasgow are not required to be licensed by the local authority.

Fishing Vessels (Pressure Stock Licences)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of pressure stock licences attaching to fishing vessels in each port of registration (a) at the outset of the scheme and (b) at the most recent date for which information is available.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Licences issued by DAFS to vessels based on Scottish ports numbered 1,204 at the start of the scheme and 1,168 at 30 April 1988. The table below gives the port of registration of vessels concerned, including a small number registered outwith Scotland.

Cervical Tests

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to be able to publish figures showing how long patients in the Greater Glasgow health board area are having to wait for results of cervical smear tests, as well as the comparable figures for the last 10 years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Strathkelvin and Bearsden (Mr. Galbraith) on 17 May 1988 at column 395.

Private Hospital, Clydebank

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the level of private funding for the proposed Health Care International hospital at Clydebank.

Mr. Lang: The company and its financial advisers have provided, on a commercially confidential basis, full details of the financial structure which is proposed for the projected Health Care International hospital at Clydebank.

Health Care International

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives from Health Care International; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend met representatives from Health Care International during a visit to the Harvard university medical centre on 12 October 1987. The subjects discussed were American public and private sector provision, and arrangements for the supply of blood to the hospital which HCI proposes to build in Clydebank.

Beaches

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps are being taken to clean up the beaches on the south-west coast of Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Responsibility for the cleanliness of beaches rests with the district or islands council concerned, while monitoring the quality of bathing waters is the responsibility of the river purification authorities. If, however, the hon. Member has a particular problem in mind he may like to write to me about it.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each year since 1970 the number of patients on hospital in-patient waiting lists in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The number of persons on in-patient waiting lists for National Health Service hospitals in Scotland at 30 September in each year is as follows:

Acute Beds

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each health board the number of acute medical and surgical beds in private clinics in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information in the form requested is not available.

Coal Imports

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on which countries export coal to Scotland, via Rotterdam, in the current year.

Mr. Lang: Such information is not held by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland: questions concerning Government policy on imports into the United Kingdom are for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy. The latest information on coal imports is set out in the reply given to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang) by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Energy on 4 March.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has as to how much coal, expressed (a) in tonnes and (b) in monetary value, had been imported by the South of Scotland Electricity Board so far in the current year.

Mr. Lang: I am advised by the South of Scotland Electricity Board that it has taken delivery of approximately 30,000 tonnes of imported coal in the current financial year to date. The monetary value of the imports is a confidential matter between the board and its suppliers.

Housing Transfers

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has given any advice to any of the new town development corporations on the transfer of blocks of houses with sitting tenants to any private developer or any other housing body; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: No such advice has been issued.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he proposes to give advice to any of the new town development corporations on the transfer of blocks of houses with sitting tenants to any private developer or any other housing body prior to the announced intention to amend the New Towns (Scotland) Act 1968; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: No transfer of tenanted houses to other landlords in the period before wind-up of the development corporations will take place without the consent of the tenants involved. Advice to development corporations will be issued following enactment of the Housing (Scotland) Bill currently before Parliament.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take steps to ensure that no new town tenant can be transferred to any other landlord under a management agency agreement without the prior consent of the tenant.

Mr. Lang: Any decision to transfer to another landlord in the period before wind-up of a development corporation is a matter for the tenant, as was made clear by my hon. Friend, the Minister responsible for home affairs and the environment when he responded to the hon. Member during Committee stage consideration of the Housing (Scotland) Bill—First Scottish Standing Committee, 25 February 1988, column 1023. The options for housing transfer at wind-up will be considered in the detailed and wide-ranging review which was announced by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State on 13 May.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take steps to ensure that any new town tenant transferred to a new landlord under a management agency agreed between a new town development corporation and a private developer or any other housing body will retain existing security of tenure.

Mr. Lang: Since ownership of the house in such circumstances would remain with the development corporation, any tenants affected by a management agency agreement would retain their existing statutory right to security of tenure.

Housing Debt

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any proposals to write off existing housing debt on any blocks of new town houses purchased by a private developer or any other housing body from a new town development corporation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: No specific proposals have yet been submitted by development corporations to the Secretary of State and any such proposal would require to be considered on its merits.

New Town Housing Stock

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each of the five new towns details of any discussions which have taken place between new town officials and private developers or any other housing body on the management under an agency agreement of any part of the new town housing stock.

Mr. Lang: Preliminary discussions have taken place between representatives of Quality Street and Glenrothes development corporation, which included the possibility of a management agency covering a portion of the housing stock. Those discussions were exploratory and no commitments were made on either side. No such discussions have as yet taken place in the other four towns, although an exploratory meeting has been arranged between Livingston development corporation and Quality Street, at the latter's request.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if any advice has been given to any of the new town development corporations to enter into discussions with private developers on the disposal or management of the new town housing stocks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The Scottish new town development corporation continue to receive advice on the Government's housing policy objectives in the regular meetings which take place between officials of my Department and those of the corporations. There is nothing new about discussions between private housing developers and development corporations.

Chernobyl

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what have been the total staff and administration cost to his Department of the Chernobyl accident.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Staff and associated administration costs relating to the Chernobyl accident which have been incurred by the Scottish Office in the period to the end of May 1988 are estimated to be in the region of £0·9m. In addition, some £464,000 has been spent on such matters as purchasing sheep and other produce for testing; the laboratory analysis of these to establish the levels of radioactivity; associated transport costs; and purchasing live monitoring equipment and paint used in connection with the mark and release scheme. Compensation to farmers in the restricted areas in Scotland has so far amounted to £1·6m.

Forestry

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total area of land for which forestry grant applications were submitted in each year from 1 April 1983 to date in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Scotland; and in each country what was the area of land (i) withdrawn before decision on forestry grant was reached and (ii) refused grant-aid by the Forestry Commission.

2. The areas of land shown as withdrawn include cases in which applicants decided not to proceed because of objections or modifications to their proposals put forward by the Forestry Commission or consulted authorities which were expected to result in the application being refused in whole or in part.

Patients (Treatment Statistics)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each year since 1979 the number of patients treated in each health board from outside that health council's area.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Child Benefit

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has as to the total amount of additional revenue which would be collected if child benefit were to be counted as part of taxable earnings; and what this sum would represent in terms of a reduction in the standard rate of income tax.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The income tax liability arising from taxing child benefit in 1988-89 would be about £1,100 million. This estimate assumes that child benefit received by married couples would be taxed as the husband's income. A reduction of 1p in the basic rate of tax would cost about £1,400 million in a full year at 1988-89 levels of income.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the total amount of child benefit together with the number of families and children in respect of which it is paid and the percentage which each figure represents for the following income bands (a) under £5,000, (b) £5,000 to £10,000, (c) £10,000 to £15,000, (d) £15,000 to £20,000, (e) £20,000 to £25,000, (f) £25,000 to £50,000, (g) £50,000 to £100,000, and (h) £100,000 and over.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 27 May 1988]: Information about the incomes of families receiving child benefit is not routinely collected. The following estimates of the distribution of gross incomes of recipient families in 1988-89 are therefore made on the basis of sample survey data which are subject to normal sampling and response variation.

Band of gross income	Families receiving child benefit		Number of children		Child benefit expenditure
	(thousands)	(per cent.)	(thousands)	(per cent.)	(thousands)	(per cent.)

Notes:

(1) Estimates are based on the 1985 family expenditure survey, supplemented by the survey of personal incomes, and updated to 1988-89 levels of earnings and benefit rates.

(2) Income is measured on a gross basis and is the family's total income from all sources including benefits.
(3) No detailed breakdown is possible for an income band above 50,000 because of sample sizes.
(4) All figures rounded to the nearest 10,000.
(5) Estimates assume 100 per cent. take-up of income-related benefits.

Labour Statistics

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the increase in employment in the United Kingdom since 1983; and what equivalent figures he has for those countries subject to the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Mr. Lilley: Figures for civilian employment in the United Kingdom and in the member countries of the ERM are given in "Eurostat", March 1988, page 39.

Growth Rates

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has as to what has been the average rate of growth of the countries subject to the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system since 1985; which country has enjoyed the highest and which the lowest rate of growth; and what have been the respective rates of growth.

Mr. Lilley: Figures for GDP for each of the ERM countries are given in "Eurostat", March 1988, page 35.

Inflation

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has as to what has been the average rate of inflation of the economies subject to the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system since 1985; which country has enjoyed the lowest rate of inflation and which the highest; and what were the respective rates.

Mr. Lilley: Consumer price indices are given for all ERM member countries in "OECD Main Economic Indicators", monthly.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the rate of inflation in the British economy since January 1985; and what information he has as to how many countries within the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system have had a higher rate of inflation.

Mr. Lilley: Consumer price indices for the United Kingdom and for all the ERM member countries are given in "OECD Main Economic Indicators", monthly.

Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the current level of inflation.

Mr. Lilley: The retail prices index rose by 3·9 per cent. in the year to April.

Productivity

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the growth in productivity in the United Kingdom since 1983; and what equivalent figures he has for productivity of each of the economies subject to the European monetary system.

Mr. Lilley: One measure of the productivity of labour is real GDP divided by the number of persons employed. GDP figures for the United Kingdom, on the average basis, are given in "Economic Trends", April 1988, page 6 and for the other countries in the "OECD National Accounts", volume 1. Figures for civilian employment for all the countries can be found in "Eurostat", March 1988, page 39.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the annual growth of productivity for the whole economy since 1980.

Mr. Major: Between 1980 and 1987, output per head in the whole economy increased by 20·5 per cent. This represents an annual average increase of 2·7 per cent. over the period.

Pound Sterling

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the rate of exchange of the pound sterling with the currencies subject to the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system has altered since January 1986.

Mr. Lilley: The average sterling exchange rate index against those currencies participating in the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system has fallen by 3·7 per cent. since January 1986.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Burnley on 20 May, Official Report, column 583, how many of the representations received on the value of the pound were from the glass-making industry; to what effect they were made; and if he will make a statement;

(2) pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Burnley on 20 May, Official Report, column 583, how many of the representations on the value of the pound were from the aerospace aviation industry or its supplier; to what effect they were made; and if he will make a statement;

(3) pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Burnley on 20 May, Official Report, column 583, how many of the representations received on the value of the pound were from the textiles industry; to what effect they were made; and if he will make a statement;

(4) pursuant to the answer given to the hon. Member for Burnley on 20 May, Official Report, column 583, how many of the representations received on the value of the pound were from the motor industry or its suppliers; to what effect they were made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations on the exchange rate from several different sectors of industry.

Job Creation

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has as to what has been the average level of job creation since 1983 of the economies whose currency is subject to the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system; which country enjoyed the highest level of job creation and which the lowest; and what were the respective levels.

Mr. Lilley: "Eurostat", March 1988, page 39 gives data on civilian employment for each member country of the ERM. These data generally relate to numbers of jobs rather than numbers of persons.

Economic Growth

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the growth of the United Kingdom economy since January 1985; and what equivalent figures he has for those economies subject to the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Mr. Lilley: Growth is usually measured as the increase in GDP (or GNP) at constant prices. Quarterly and annual GDP figures for the United Kingdom are given in "Economic Trends", April 1988, page 6. (The average estimate at 1980 prices is the preferred measure for calculating growth rates.) Annual figures for the United Kingdom and all the member countries of the ERM, are given in the "OECD National Accounts." volume 1.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing public expenditure by main programme in real terms for each year from 1975 onwards, taking 1975 as the base year at 100.

Mr. Major: The table shows, in index form (1978-79 = 100), the changes in real terms in the public expenditure planning total by function since 1978-79. Figures for earlier years are not readily available on a comparable basis.

Developing Countries (Debt)

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing for each developing country for each year from 1983 the proportion of export earnings constituted by debt service charges.

Mr. Lilley: The information is contained in the 1987-88 edition of the "World Debt Tables" (volume II) published by the World Bank. A copy is available in the statistical section of the Library.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing the percentage of all non-oil developing country debt, for each year from 1973 to 1987, at variable interest rates.

Mr. Lilley: The percentage of public and publicly guaranteed long-term debt outstanding and disbursed at variable interest rates for non-oil developing countries, for 1975 and for each year from 1980 to 1986 (the latest available year), is as follows:

Comparable information for each year from 1973 to 1979 (other than for 1975) may be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Figures for the percentage of total debt at variable interest rates are unavailable.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received seeking an exemption from value added tax for hospital radio stations in respect of equipment bought by them; and what response he has made.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend has received no further representations since the reply I gave to the hon. Member on 6 May at column 649.

Mr. Anderson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the overall costs of administration, collection and enforcement of value added tax.

Mr. Lilley: The overall cost of the administration, collection and enforcement of value added tax is estimated to be £244 million for the year ended 31 March 1988.

Mr. Holland: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the number of companies (a) registering for value added tax and (b) deregistering for value added tax in each available year since and including 1979.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 23 May 1988]: Figures for businesses registering and deregistering for value added tax in each year since 1979 are as shown by the table:

Economic Output

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the growth of economic output over the latest 12 months period for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Preliminary estimates show that the output-based measure of gross domestic product increased by 4½ per cent. between the first quarter of 1987 and the first quarter of 1988.

Customs Posts

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was by port the number of customs posts at 1 May; and what was the figure on 1 June 1986.

Mr. Lilley: For operational reasons the number of customs officers employed in each of the 155 ports and airports controlled by customs is not published.

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total number of customs posts at ports and airports at 1 May; what was the figure on 1 June 1986; and how the customs budget has changed over the same period.

Mr. Lilley: The total number of customs officers deployed at ports and airports at 1 June 1986 was 6,900 and at 1 May 1988 the provisional figure is 7,700.

The total cost of administration of customs work for the financial year ending 31 March 1986 was £161·8 million and for the year ending 31 March 1988 the provisional cost is £203 million.

Exchange Rate

79. Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has estimated the effect of the exchange rate on the rate of employment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: Exchange rate policy is part of total economic policy. The firm financial discipline inherent in the Government's economic strategy has contributed to the longest period of continuous employment growth in almost 30 years.

Civil Servants (Northern Ireland)

Mr. McCusker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he has taken to set up monitoring procedures to examine the religious affiliation of civil servants employed by his Department in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: Her Majesty's Treasury does not employ any civil servants in Northern Ireland.

Customs Station, Donnally

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the new customs station, currently under construction at Donnally, Newry, to become operational.

Mr. Lilley: The new customs station at Damolly, Newry is expected to become operational on 1 November 1989.

Business Investment

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest forecast for business investment in 1988.

Mr. Major: Business investment is forecast to grow by 9 per cent. in 1988, as shown in chapter 3 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report.

Retail Prices Index

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the increase in the retail prices index for each of the last nine years and his estimate for this figure in the current year.

Mr. Lilley: The figures are given in the table.

Retail Prices Index
Percentage increase on previous year

	per cent.
1979	13·4
1980	18·0
1981	11·9
1982	8·6
1983	4·6
1984	5·0
1985	6·1
1986	3·4
1987	4·2

Forecast 1988 Q4 on 1987 Q4 is 4 per cent.

Government Departments (Personal Data)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what plans he has to ensure that any new use or disclosure of personal data between participating Departments on the Government data network is subject to prior approval of the Data Protection Registrar;

(2) if he will describe the intended process of authorisation of disclosures of personal data between Departments that may arise following the introduction of the Government data network; and if he will make it his policy to place a copy of any document or future document which describes that authorisation process in the Library.

Mr. Brooke: The process of authorisation of disclosures of personal data between Departments is governed by their registrations under the Data Protection Act 1984. Compliance is a matter for the Departments concerned.

Government Data Network

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will describe the changes brought to the design of the Government data network as a result of his discussions with the Data Protection Registrar.

Mr. Brooke: The Data Protection Registrar has been kept informed from the outset of the proposals for maintaining security on the Government data network, including arrangements for controlling access. He has expressed no reservations about the proposals.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will now quantify the cost savings that will arise over the next 10 years as a result of the Government data network.

Mr. Brooke: In assessing the value for money of the Government data network, its costs were compared with the viable alternatives—using comparable public services, or implementing separate networks similar to GDN.

The savings from using the GDN service are estimated at around 45 per cent. and 30 per cent. respectively. Actual savings will depend on the use made of the service.

Manufacturing Output

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about manufacturing output during the last 12 months for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: In the first quarter of 1988 manufacturing output was 5½ per cent. higher than a year earlier.

Income Tax

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give, for the latest year available, the number of tax units who are married couples falling within each £1,000 income band up to an income of £30,000 and thereafter in £10,000 income bands up to £100,000; and if he will specify the number of wives and husbands falling within each band, giving the average incomes of wives and husbands within each band separately and the same figures in aggregate for those tax units on incomes in excess of £100,000.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 13 May 1988]: Provisional estimates for married couples liable to income tax in 1988-89 are given in the table. I regret that a more detailed analysis is not possible, because estimates are based on a projection of the 1985-86 survey of personal incomes. The table shows the average income of husbands where the wife has no income and average incomes of both husband and wife where both spouses have income.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Holland: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the number of companies paying corporation tax at (a) the full rate and (b) the small companies rate as applicable for each available year since and including 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 23 May 1988]: Estimates of the numbers of companies liable to pay corporation tax on their profits in accounting periods ending in financial years 1978-79 to 1985-86 are shown in the table. Figures for more recent years are not sufficiently complete to provide a reliable estimate. The 1985-86 estimate is provisional. These numbers have on this occasion been reduced to take account of the fact that CT liabilities are eliminated for some companies by tax already deducted or paid.

Companies liable to Corporation Tax

Accounting periods ending in:	Numbers '000
1978-79	195
1979-80	200
1980-81	210
1981-82	220
1982-83	235
1983-84	245
1985-86	300

In respect of 1985-86 about 20,000 companies have liabilities at the full rate and a further 20,000 are in the transitional band between the small companies rate and the full rate. Equivalent figures for earlier years are not available. Membership of company groups affects the point at which marginal and full rates apply and recently available information on this aspect has been used in deriving these estimates.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the total amount of inheritance tax payable in respect of an inheritance of £1 million of a capital distribution made to an individual from an accumulation and maintenance trust where the settlor has survived for seven years.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 23 May 1988]: Gifts are exempt from inheritance tax where donors survive seven years. This applies also to distributions from accumulation and maintenance trusts where the settlor has survived seven years.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much inheritance tax would be payable in respect of an inheritance in 1988-89 amounting to £1 million by a single individual on his or her 21st birthday comprising (a) a gift of shares from his father in an unquoted company comprising a controlling interest and constituting business property valued at, before relief £200,000, (b) cash from his mother who has made no previous gifts of £100,000, (c) a gift of a farm from his uncle who survives for seven years after the gift of the value of £500,000 and (d) capital distribution of £200,000 from an accumulation and maintenance trust set up by his father who survives for seven years, where no gifts have been made by his father other than (a) and (d).

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 23 May 1988]: Because the donors at (a) (c) and (d) have survived their gifts by seven years and the gift by the donor at (b) is below the 1988-89 taxable threshold, (an exemption which also applied under capital transfer tax) no inheritance tax would be payable in 1988-89 on any of these gifts. However, if the donors at (a), (c) and (d) had died within seven years of their gifts, inheritance tax would have been payable at their deaths with business and agricultural property reliefs on the gifts at (a) and (c) as under capital transfer tax.

Trading Services (Accounts)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a list of the accounts for trading services operated by departments of certain other public bodies for which the Treasury has directed or approved the form of accounts according to the procedure of section G, paragraph 4 of Government Accounting (1986), indicating (a) the category of accounts so prescribed, (b) the statutory basis for this requirement of the period over which this has been done by convention and (c) the form and place of publication of such accounts.

Notes:

1. This information has been extracted from a new computerised database being built up by the Treasury. There is a risk that the names of some bodies may not yet be on the database, but the list is substantially complete.
2. The list includes bodies producing commercial style accruals accounts, and some bodies at present producing cash accounts which intend to move over to an accruals basis shortly.
3. The list excludes Memorandum Trading Accounts (MTAs): as Government Accounting paragraph G: 4(c) explains these are informal working documents. Treasury "direction" of the form that MTAs take is through the dissemination of general guidelines to departments.
4. The abbreviations used to categorise public bodies are:
   "NDPB": non-departmental public body;
   "Department": a Government department;
   "Trad Fund": a trading fund established under the Government Trading Funds Act, plus the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority; and
   "Supp'l Account": an account for a service conducted by a department, for which audited commercial style accounts are produced and published.
5. The references in the final column to indicate the form and place of publication mean:
   "Annual accounts available from HMSO": these are formal "White Paper", accounts as defined in Government Accounting (Section 0 Paragraph 185), printed by HMSO and laid before Parliament;
   "Annual accounts available from Body": the accounts are not laid before Parliament, but copies may be obtained from the body itself.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated capital cost of the proposed customs facility at Waterloo station for Channel tunnel passengers.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 26 May 1988]: Discussions are at present taking place between Customs and British Rail about the facilities that will be required at Waterloo for the clearance of Channel tunnel passengers. The provision and capital funding of the facilities are the responsibility of British Rail.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated annual running cost of the proposed customs facility at Waterloo station for Channel tunnel passengers.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 26 May 1988]: The arrangements for Customs clearance at Waterloo station have yet to be finalised and it is too early at this stage to estimate what the running costs will be.

European Investment Bank (Loans)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) why exchange risk cover for European Investment Bank loans of over $25 million will not be applied to loans made to local authorities which are not part of a European Community integrated operation; and what was the cost to the Treasury of the last five years of the operation of the scheme;

(2) why the ½ per cent. interest rate subsidy formerly available for European Investment Bank borrowers has not been reinstated; and, over the last five years of the scheme's operation, how much local authorities in the United Kingdom benefited from the ½ per cent. interest rate subsidy.

Mr. Lilley [holding answers 26 May 1988]: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Slough (Mr. Watts) on 2 December 1987 at column 614, which sets out the reasons for the withdrawal of interest rate subsidy available under the official exchange cover scheme. Loans over $25 million made to local authorities, whether or not they are part of a European Community integrated operation, are eligible for exchange risk cover.

In the period to 2 December 1987 local authorities borrowed £570 million under the scheme. During this time, the interest rate benefit available to borrowers has varied from ¼ to ½ per cent. However, this does not reflect the true cost of operating the scheme. Local authorities borrow under the scheme for the benefit of the reserves, so any calculation must take into account the interest earned on that part of the United Kingdom's official reserves raised by this means and the cost to the Government of the sterling finance, but the sums involved cannot be hypothecated. Moreover, the calculation would also have to take into account any exchange rate gain or loss made on repayment of the loans and any changes in overseas interest rates in relation to those charged on public sector debt during the life of the loans. These calculations cannot be made until the loans have run their full term.

European Community (Contributions)

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the United Kingdom net contribution to the EEC for each of the last eight years; and what is the most likely estimate for the current year and 1989 expressed both in terms of payments made during the year and payments attributed to the year in question.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 26 May 1988]: The information requested for the period 1980 to 1987 is set out in the table. Estimates of the United Kingdom's net contribution to the Community budget for 1988-89 and 1989-90 (on a payments basis) and 1988 and 1989 (on a budget basis) are contained in the last public expenditure White Paper (Cm. 288-II, pages 33 to 36). These estimates did not take account of the agreement at the Brussels European Council on 11 to 13 February on the future financing of the Community. This agreement is likely to increase our net contribution to the Community budget by some £200 to £300 million a year.

Net contribution to Community budget

	Payments basis[1] £ million	Budget basis[2] £ million
1980	706	269
1981	397	115
1982	606	682
1983	647	766
1984	656	709
1985	1,808	759
1986	572	943

[1] These figures show the net payments actually made during calendar years, irrespective of the Community budget to which they relate or from which they are financed. Receipts flowing directly to the United Kingdom private sector are excluded.

[2] These figures show the United Kingdom's net contribution in respect of particular budgets, regardless of when the payments and receipts actually took place. They include an estimate of receipts flowing directly to the United Kingdom private sector and certain payments to other member states which nevertheless benefit the United Kingdom by allowing us to import CAP produce at prices below CAP levels. They take account of our net contribution to the "unallocated budget", which consists mainly of the Community's aid expenditure.

[3] Estimate.

EC (Budget)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a table showing details of total payments to the European Economic Community budget for 1987 and total receipts for each of the member countries of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 27 May 1988]: Details of payments made by the European Economic Community to member states in 1987 are not readily available. The own resources payments made by member states to the Community in 1987 were as follows:—

	mecu
Belgium	1,702
Denmark	845
Germany	9,385
Greece	340
Spain	1,700
France	7,330
Ireland	338
Italy	5,192
Luxembourg	74
Netherlands	2,372
Portugal	342
United Kingdom	5,728

Mortgage Interest Relief

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what date in August mortgage interest tax relief becomes applicable to a property.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 27 May 1988]: I assume my hon. Friend is referring to the proposed change to a residence basis for mortgage interest relief. Under clause 41 of the Finance Bill this will take effect from 1 August 1988.

Manufacturing Investment

Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect of successive Budget changes on investment in manufacturing industry in the regions.

Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect of successive Budget changes on investment in manufacturing industry in the north.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect of successive Budget changes on investment in manufacturing industry in the north.

Mr. Major: The reductions in tax rates and increases in allowances in recent Budgets have improved incentives and stimulated enterprise, which will have contributed to higher investment throughout the country.

DEFENCE

RAF Feltwell

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what will be the role of the proposed deep space tracking station at RAF Feltwell in relation to (a) the United States Air Force global positioning system and (b) any other systems; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 21 March 1988 at column 7.

Low Flying

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the overall rates of low-level flying accidents in the Royal Air Force, expressed as a percentage of flying hours and low-level flying hours since 1980.

Mr. Freeman: As was explained to the hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours) at column 82 on 8

December 1987, records of hours flown at low level by military aircraft are not held centrally. The rate of major accidents (per 10,000 hours flown by Royal Air Force aircraft at all levels worldwide) which occurred during low level operations was as follows:

	Per cent.
1980	0·12
1981	0·11
1982	0·22
1983	0·17
1984	0·14
1985	0·10
1986	0·08

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low-level sorties were flown by the RAF in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the Federal Republic of Germany; in each year since 1980.

Mr. Freeman: Separate records of low-level sorties flown by the RAF in the United Kingdom are not available, but those for all British military aircraft (both fixed wing and helicopter) were as follows.

	Number
1980	[1]80,860
1981	[1]94,620
1982	[1]106,920
1983	[1]118,920
1984	109,244
1985	115,063
1986	123,488
1987	123,293

[1] Before 1984 sorties were not recorded directly but have been calculated from movements. On average there are 2·5 movements per sortie.

Figures for RAF fixed wing low-level sorties in the Federal Republic of Germany are not available prior to 1984. Those for 1984 onwards are given below. These do not include helicopter sorties because these are not centrally recorded.

	Number
1984	18,752
1985	18,124
1986	16,853
1987	15,900

RAF Jets (Accidents)

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the overall rate of fast jet major flying accidents in the Royal Air Force, expressed as a percentage of fast jet flying hours, for each year since 1980.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 18 April to the hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours), at columns 336-8.

RAF (Accidents)

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the overall rate of major flying accidents in the Royal Air Force, expressed as a percentage of flying hours, for each year since 1980;

(2) what are the annual totals of serious flying accidents to United Kingdom military aircraft for each year since 1980;

(3) how many aircrew have been injured in Royal Air Force Tornado accidents since 1980;

(4) how many aircrew have been killed in Royal Air Force Tornado accidents since 1980;

(5) how many Royal Air Force Tornados have been seriously damaged in flying accidents since 1980;

(6) how many Royal Air Force Tornados have been destroyed in flying accidents since 1980.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the annual Statements on the Defence Estimates which, since 1980, have published relevant information about all accidents to aircraft of the three Services which have involved loss of, or serious damage to the aircraft or which have resulted in fatalities or serious injuries. The most recently published information is in Cm. 344-II, tables 5.8 and 5.9.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many serious accidents involving Royal Air Force Tornados have occurred during low-flying operations since 1980 in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the Federal Republic of Germany and (c) other locations.

Mr. Freeman: Since entering service with the Royal Air Force in 1980, major accidents to Tornado aircraft during low-flying operations have been as follows:

	Number
United Kingdom and surrounding waters	6
Federal Republic of Germany	4
United States of America	1

Tornado Aircraft

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he intends to order an attrition batch of Tornado aircraft; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: Nine Tornado GR1 aircraft have already been ordered as replacements for expected attrition losses. A possible further purchase of Tornado aircraft is under consideration.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many night vision targeting pods he intends to order for the Royal Air Force Tornado aircraft.

Mr. Sainsbury: A contract for the supply of 10 advanced laser designator pods for Tornado GR1 aircraft has been awarded to Ferranti Defence Systems Ltd.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans exist to sell Tornado F2 aircraft withdrawn from RAF service to overseas customers.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 27 May 1988]: There are no plans to sell the Tornado F2 aircraft currently in storage at RAF Athan to overseas customers.

Chipmunk Aircraft

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average number of flying hours carried out per trainee Royal Air Force pilot in de Havilland Chipmunk aircraft.

Mr. Freeman: Sixty-five.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how long he expects de Havilland Chipmunk aircraft to remain in Royal Air Force service.

Mr. Freeman: The Chipmunk is expected to remain in service with the Royal Air Force until about the turn of the century.

Hawk Aircraft

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what will be the cost of rewinging Royal Air Force Hawk aircraft.

Mr. Sainsbury: An initial order for an improved design of wing for Hawk aircraft in Royal Air Force service has been placed with British Aerospace. The total cost of the programme will be governed by the outcome of a competition which my Department currently plans to hold for the supply of further production quantities.

Redtop Missiles

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department intends to use the Redtop missiles from Lightning aircraft for training purposes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: No. When the Lightning is withdrawn from service later this month, the remaining Redtop missiles will be disposed of as no further economical use has been found for them. The Lightning is being replaced by Tornado F3 armed with Skyflash medium-range and Sidewinder short-range air-to-air missiles.

ASR 1238

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to make a decision on ASR 1238.

Mr. Sainsbury: A decision on ASR 1238 is not expected for some months.

European Fighter Aircraft

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects a decision to be made on the ordering of an interim engine for the European fighter aircraft.

Mr. Sainsbury: The assessment of the competing bids is well advanced and I would expect the result to be announced later this year.

Canberra Aircraft

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much longer he expects Canberra aircraft to remain in Royal Air Force service.

Mr. Ian Stewart: On current plans the Canberra is expected to remain in service into the next century.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Canberras are still in Royal Air Force service.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Four units of Canberras are currently in service with the Royal Air Force.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has any intention of selling Canberra planes presently in Royal Air Force service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: No Canberra aircraft presently in service with the Royal Air Force are being offered for sale. A few non-effective aircraft may, however, be disposed of later this year once spares recovery has been completed.

Jet Provosts

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how long he expects Jet Provost aircraft to remain in Royal Air Force service.

Mr. Freeman: The majority of Jet Provost aircraft are due to be replaced by the Tucano by the mid-1990s, although a few Jet Provosts are expected to remain in service with the Royal Air Force until the turn of the century.

RAF Waddington

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of building hangars for Boeing AWACS aircraft at RAF Waddington.

Mr. Sainsbury: One hangar is being built at RAF Waddington for the United Kingdom E-3 fleet, at a cost of some £5 million.

Jet Provosts and Chipmunks

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Shorts of Belfast contribute any funds to his Department to keep Jet Provost and de Havilland Chipmunk aircraft in Royal Air Force service.

Mr. Sainsbury: No.

United States Navy, Brawdy

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has as to whether there are any plans to withdraw the operating personnel from the United States naval facility at Brawdy, Wales, with a view to introducing remote control operation of the facility.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I understand that there are no current plans to change the United States Navy manning at RAF Brawdy.

Air Combat (Manoeuvring Instrumentation)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration has been given to the deployment of an air combat manoeuvring instrumentation range off the east coast of Britain; and whether any decisions on research, development or procurement of such a system have been made.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply of 11 May at column 134, to my hon. Friend the Member for Waveney (Mr. Porter).

Joint Strategic Target Planning Staff

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British military personnel are currently serving with the joint strategic target planning staff; and what is their function.

Mr. Ian Stewart: A senior RAF officer is serving as a member of SACEUR's liaison team with the joint strategic target planning staff. There are no representatives of Her Majesty's Government with the staff.

Netway

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the function of the Netway communication system; what is the total cost of procuring the system; and where it will be deployed.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Netway communication system is being procured as part of the RAF station transport management aid (STAMA), a system for the routine management and operation of vehicles which will be deployed in most RAF stations. The Netway system will be used to provide communications between remote terminals and the computer processor on the larger STAMA installations. The costs of the system are a matter of commercial confidentiality.

North Sea Platforms

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what military use is made of offshore oil and gas platforms in the North sea.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Offshore oil and gas platforms are occasionally used by the armed forces for training purposes. Military helicopters may also refuel on such platforms when crossing the North sea.

AWACS

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if it is planned to fit Royal Air Force AWACS with the radar upgrades currently being developed by Boeing for the United States Air Force AWACS fleet.

Mr. Sainsbury: When the time comes to upgrade the radar in the United Kingdom's AWACS we shall look very closely at the benefits of participating in any United States air force programme.

Loan Service Personnel

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on which Departments' Votes the salaries and operating costs of United Kingdom loan service personnel serving in overseas countries are borne.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The salaries and other costs of loan service personnel, which are borne initially on Defence Votes, are charged to the foreign Governments concerned or to the FCO and are recovered to Defence Votes as appropriations-in-aid.

Aerazur Parachutes

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Aerazur/GQ 8m low-level parachute is in service with British forces; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: No such parachute is in service with British forces. However, initial trials to assess possible contenders to satisfy a requirement to replace the existing in-service mass drop parachute have taken place. No final decision on a future development and production contract has yet been taken.

Nirex

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what advice on the disposal of defence radioactive wastes is being provided to his Department by United Kingdom Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive Ltd.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Ministry of Defence liaises with UK Nirex Ltd. on a regular basis on the disposal of defence radioactive wastes; the advice received is similar to that given to other nuclear operators.

British Geological Survey

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the contracts currently held by his Department with the British Geological Survey; and what is the purpose of each.

Mr. Sainsbury: Three contracts were placed with the British Geological Survey in 1986 but these were all completed in 1987. No further contracts have been placed. It is not the Department's practice to release details of individual contracts for reasons of commercial confidentiality.

United States Aircraft

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from the United States authorities concerning the possibility of basing United States air force F-15E aircraft in Britain; and what is the Government's policy on such a deployment.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I have nothing to add to the reply I gave to the hon. Member on 3 December 1987 at column 709.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has as to what contracts have been awarded to British Aerospace to service United States air force F-15 aircraft; and what arrangements have been made in support of such contracts.

Mr. Sainsbury: The servicing of United States air force F-15 aircraft, based in the Federal Republic of Germany, is a commercial matter for British Aerospace and the United States air force.

Joint Medical Support Plan

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role of the joint medical support plan in United Kingdom home defence.

Mr. Freeman: The joint medical support plan for the United Kingdom base covers the management and care of battle casualties arising from general war operations within the United Kingdom and NATO areas.

Services Medical Planning Committee

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the functions of the joint services medical planning committee.

Mr. Freeman: The function of the joint services medical planning committee is to co-ordinate joint operational medical policy to meet the requirements of operational planning conducted on behalf of the United Kingdom commanders in chief, and advise the United Kingdom commanders in chief, as appropriate, on medical matters arising from joint operational plans.

Artillery

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the number of nuclear-assigned units of 155mm artillery is to be increased to compensate for the withdrawal of 8in howitzers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: In accordance with long-standing plans, the number of 155mm systems deployed in BAOR will be increased for the purpose of replacing 105mm Abbot guns. There are, however, no plans to increase the number of 155mm nuclear certified systems to compensate for the withdrawal from the 8in nuclear artillery role.

Weapons Storage and Security

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if there are any plans to purchase the weapons storage and security systems from the United States of America for use on RAF airfields.

Mr. Sainsbury: Various options are being examined to improve the storage of our air-delivered nuclear weapons but no firm decisions have yet been taken. There are, consequently, no plans at present to purchase the United States weapons survivability and security system for use by the Royal Air Force.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has been given by the United States authorities concerning the year in which the United States Air Force is expected to seek Congressional approval for the commencement of construction of weapons storage and security system vaults at (a) RAF Bentwaters, (b) RAF Upper Heyford, (c) RAF Lakenheath, (d) RAF Greenham Common and (e) RAF Molesworth.

Mr. Ian Stewart: It is understood that the United States Administration seeks Congressional approval each year for the funding of the construction programme for weapon survivability and security systems for the following fiscal year. No decision has yet been made on the year in which approval would be sought for sites in United Kingdom.

Submarine Reactors

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if any options for disposal of decommissioned nuclear submarine reactors on civil-owned land have been considered.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Woolwich (Mr. Cartwright) on 13 April at column 137.

United States Forces (Mildenhall)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans exist to move the headquarters of the United States third air force from Mildenhall; and what is the location of its new base.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) on 12 April at column 35.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what plans exist to move the United States naval air facility from Mildenhall to Greenham Common;

(2) what plans exist to move the United States air force airborne command and control EC-135 aircraft from Mildenhall to Greenham Common.

Mr. Ian Stewart: None.

NATO Force Goals

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, if the forces specified in NATO force goals are necessarily to be assigned to NATO command in time of crisis or war; if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: No.

United States' HI-CAMP Programme

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assistance has been provided by the United Kingdom to the United States Defence Advanced Research Projects Agency's HI-CAMP programme; and whether the United States of America is providing the United Kingdom with any technical or scientific results from this programme.

Mr. Sainsbury: Under long-standing international arrangements the MOD has collaborated in the United States defence advanced research projects agency's HI-CAMP programme by participation in joint trials and in the analysis of the data resulting. There has been a full exchange of scientific results between the United States and the United Kingdom.

Polaris

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Polaris missile test launches have been conducted in each year since 1979.

Mr. Sainsbury: There have been a total of 31 test launches of United Kingdom Polaris missiles since 1979. These took place as follows:

Year	Number of missiles fired
1979	5
1980	5
1982	4
1983	6
1985	3
1986	4
1987	4

Defence Exports Sales Organisation

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those countries in receipt of official development assistance from the United Kingdom which were visited by representatives of the Defence Exports Sales Organisation in any year since 1979.

Mr. Sainsbury: I have been asked to reply.

Representatives of Defence Export Services Organisation travel very extensively and there must be few places in the free world which they have not visited at some time. Because of the confidentiality of many of the matters involved it is not the practice to list individual countries which have been visited.

Non-nuclear R and D Establishments

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to receive the report of the study groups inquiring into the feasibility of agency management in the non-nuclear research and development establishments of the Ministry of Defence.

Mr. Sainsbury: I expect to receive the report of the study group during the summer.

Naval Documents (Firth of Forth)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the discovery of naval documents floating in the Firth of Forth.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The document in question, classified restricted, listed work which had been specified during the recent routine refit of HMS Hermione in Rosyth royal dockyard. The circumstances of the loss and subsequent discovery are being investigated.

Greenham Common

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times since 1979 he has consented to building on common land at Greenham Common under the Law of Property Act 1925.

Mr. Freeman: Developments at RAF Greenham Common have been subject to the planning procedures applicable to Crown land; no consents have been sought under the Law of Property Act 1925.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many orders of compulsory purchase have been made concerning common land at Greenham Common; and how many negotiated purchases have been agreed, in the past two years.

Mr. Freeman: No compulsory purchase orders have been made by the Ministry of Defence for land at Greenham Common; parts of Greenham and Crookham Commons were requisitioned under emergency powers in the last war and the freeholds were later acquired by agreement.

No land has been purchased at RAF Greenham Common in the past two years.

Mr. Michael McNair Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with the officer commanding the 3rd United States air force about the likely future use of RAF Greenham Common once the INF treaty has been ratified and the first cruise missiles have been taken back to the United States of America.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The withdrawal of ground-launched cruise missiles from RAF Greenham Common will not be complete until towards the end of the three-year reduction period which commenced on the entry into force of the INF treaty. No detailed discussions have yet taken place on the future use of the base after the missiles are withdrawn and firm decisions are not expected for some time.

Bullying

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress in implementing the measures to combat bullying in the Army, outlined to the House in the Army debate on 26 January, Official Report, columns 256-58.

Mr. Freeman: The further detailed examination mentioned in the statement in the Army debate, which in many cases has been concerned with quantifying the manpower requirement for the measures outlined, has been continuing; the Army Board of the Defence Council has strongly endorsed the outcome and the way ahead. Taking them in the order announced in the House, the present position on the various measures is as follows:

At the recruiting and entry stage, medical screening will be improved, by increasing the medical cover at five particular depots where such support is currently provided on a part time basis. In addition, the briefing of civilian medical practitioners will be improved, to give them a fuller appreciation of service medical requirements and the rigours of military training. As part of this process, the Army will implement by March next year a sytem under which all civilian doctors engaged in recruiting attend an annual training day.

The review of the current procedures for selecting and training instructors for recruit training establishments continues. One improvement already agreed, and now being implemented, is the introduction of a new man-management pack, to be included in the training of all instructors. Additionally, a specialised training and management course will be mandatory for either the second in command or the training officer of each training unit.

In order to allow officers and NCOs to devote more time to their primary training and supervisory roles, just over 100 extra posts are to be re-established in the Army's training organisation in United Kingdom, to undertake and alleviate the pressures of unit administration. The additional posts will provide for 22 extra company seconds in commands, 14 additional company quarter-master sergeants, and 66 more corporals. All these posts will have been re-established, and filled, by the end of March next year.

As a means of improving welfare arrangements for single personnel in the Army, an additional 92 posts will be established for members of the Women's Royal Voluntary Service (WRVS). Roughly one third of these posts will be within the United Kingdom Army training organisation where the build-up will start later this summer. Other posts will be added, as recruitment allows, in major units and barracks complexes in Cyprus, the Falkland Islands, and throughout north-west Europe. An additional WRVS personnel management post will be created at the beginning of July, to co-ordinate the recruitment, training and administration of these extra supporting staff.

The content and extent of man-management training on all Army officers' warrant officers', and non-commissioned officers' courses is being re-examined. Special attention is being devoted to young officers' courses, and to the guidance on man management given to commanding officers.

All improper initiation ceremonies have been formally banned, and instructions and guidance issued throughout the Army relating to such practices, to the handling of alcohol abuse which has sometimes led to such incidents, and to the importance of "out of hours" supervision of soldiers. In addition, the chain of command throughout the Army has been formally reminded of the need for all cases of alleged bullying or other unacceptable behaviour to be reported without delay, thoroughly investigated and appropriate action taken where substantiated.

The costs of these measures are estimated at £500,000 for the current financial year, rising to £2 million a year thereafter as the additional staff are recruited.

House Sales (Boscombe Down)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will offer for sale to sitting tenants houses in Cadnam crescent, Beaulieu road and Lyndhurst road at Boscombe Down in Wiltshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: Sitting tenants living in Cadnam crescent, Beaulieu road and Lyndhurst road, whose houses have already been declared surplus to Defence requirements, will receive letters by the end of July asking them if they wish to purchase their houses. Consideration is currently being given to whether any additional houses in Cadnam crescent can be declared surplus and a decision on those will be made in due course.

Property Services Agency (Restructuring)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the implications for the management of the Salisbury Plain training area and the management of the housing stock occupied by military and civilian personnel in south Wiltshire, following the announcement of the restructuring of the Property Services Agency by the Secretary of State for the Environment.

Mr. Freeman: I do not foresee any changes in the policy for management of the Salisbury Plain training area or the housing stock occupied by military and civilian personnel in south Wiltshire as a result of the restructuring of the Property Services Agency. South Wiltshire will continue to be managed by the defence land agent at Durrington who will, from 1 October 1988, report directly to the Ministry of Defence rather than to the Property Services Agency. Defence estate management policy has always been the responsibility of the Ministry of Defence and will remain so in future.

Civil Servants (Religious Affiliations)

Mr. McCusker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what monitoring procedures he has implemented to examine the religious affiliation of civil servants employed by his Department in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Sainsbury: In common with other home Civil Service Departments with personnel located in Northern Ireland the Ministry is collecting data by means of a voluntary survey which will be regularly updated.

Royal Irish Rangers

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans there are to deploy the Royal Irish Rangers Regiment in Northern Ireland within the period between 1 July 1988 and 30 June 1989.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The possibility of deploying Irish named regiments to Northern Ireland is kept under consideration.

Irish Regiments

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers from (a) Great Britain, (b) the Republic of Ireland and (c) Northern Ireland now serve in each of the Irish regiments of the Regular Army.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The number of soldiers currently serving in Irish Regiments in the Regular Army is listed by place of birth:

	Great Britain	Republic of Ireland	Northern Ireland	Others
5th Royal Enniskillen Dragoon Guards	413	6	101	2
Queen's Royal Irish Hussars	346	24	154	4
Irish Guards	486	51	235	9
Royal Irish Rangers	492	82	978	18

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many recruits from (a) Great Britain, (b) Northern Ireland and (c) the Republic of Ireland joined each of the Irish regiments in the Regular Army during each of the past five years.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The information is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Forged CIA Documents

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Brent East, 28 March, Official Report, column 362, whether forged CIA identity documents have been prepared by members of the Army information services in Northern Ireland at any time from 1971 to the current date.

Mr. Freeman: It is not our practice to comment on operational matters.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to encourage British companies to tender for, and to obtain, contracts for the supply of vehicles and field communications systems to his Department.

Mr. Sainsbury: Our general policy is for contracts in these particular fields—along with most others—to be gained competitively. To help provide the fullest measure of encouragement for Companies to compete arrangements have been established to provide for the regular publication of all tender opportunities over £500,000 in the MOD Contracts Bulletin.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to restrict tendering for contracts to supply his Department to companies on an approved list; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Ministry seeks to offer the widest practicable opportunity to companies to bid for MOD requirements where this can lead to better value for money. Accordingly invitations to tender are not restricted to companies on an approved list. However, the Ministry would normally place headquarter contracts only with companies on its defence contractors list.

M.L. Vehicles

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will place orders for the supply of M.L. vehicles for his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: I will write to the hon. Member.

Ocean Venture 88 Exercise

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Her Majesty's forces participated in the Ocean Venture 88 exercise held earlier in the current year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: No British forces participated in Exercise Ocean Venture 88.

Nuclear Weapons Accident Training

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the nuclear weapons accident training that currently takes place at Catterick will be moved when the Royal Air Force fire service is transferred from Catterick to Manston; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: It has been the policy of successive Governments not to discuss the locations or roles of particular units which may be involved in responding to, or training for, an accident involving nuclear weapons.

SDI (Contracts)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the contracts for research and development that have been awarded to universities and other research institutions in the United Kingdom as part of the strategic defence initiative programme, together with the purpose and cost of each contract.

Mr. Sainsbury: No. It is for those universities or other research institutions who hold SDI research contracts to decide whether to divulge such information publicly.

Harriers (Crash)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the circumstances in which a United States Navy pilot was killed flying a Royal Air Force Harrier on 2 November 1987;

(2) if he will make a statement on the estimated frequency of pilots from other nations flying the aircraft of the British armed forces, the level of authority required for pilots of other nations to fly British armed forces aircraft and whether that authority was given in the case of the accident on 2 November 1987 involving a Royal Air Force Harrier piloted by United States Navy pilot.

Mr. Freeman: On 2 November 1987, two Royal Air Force Harrier aircraft from No. 3 squadron, RAF Gutersloh collided over the Otterburn training range while undertaking bombing practice during Exercise Mallet Blow. The pilots, Flight Lieutenant D. R. Sunderland and Lieutenant (United States Navy) J. R. Carver, were both killed. The accident has been the subject of an RAF board of inquiry. A summary of its findings will be published in due course and a copy placed in the Library of the House in the usual way.

Lieutenant Carver had been flying with the RAF as an exchange pilot, in accordance with the usual regulations governing such arrangements. Aircrew exchanges between the services and those of other countries take place on a regular basis. In addition, non-UK personnel occasionally undertake flying training with the services as part of sponsored training schemes, or familiarisation flights for commercial or other reasons. All aircrew are subject to the same rigorous procedures as United Kingdom personnel. It would not be possible, without undue cost and effort, to quantify precisely the frequency of flights undertaken in service aircraft by non-United Kingdom personnel, since this varies over time. All such flights are, however, authorised by the appropriate authority.

Vehicle Checks

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Wiltshire concerning the reports received of Army personnel stopping vehicles on 11 May at 11.45 pm on the A345 at Figheldean.

Mr. Freeman: No. These allegations have not been substantiated by the civil police.

Search and Rescue Stations

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secrertary of State for Defence what search and rescue stations presently exist; what facilities are present on these stations; what equipment is used; what planes and helicopters are used; what are their numbers; how many sorties were flown in the last five years, by year; how many rescues took place; and what new facilities have been provided in the past year.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 26 May 1988]: Military search and rescue helicopters are currently based as follows:

	Helicopters
RAF Lossiemouth	2 Sea Kings
RAF Leuchars	2 Wessex
RAF Boulmer	2 Sea Kings
RAF Leconfield	2 Wessex
RAF Coltishall	2 Sea Kings
RAF Manston	2 Wessex
RNAS Portland	2 Sea Kings
RNAS Culdrose	2 Sea Kings
RAF Chivenor	2 Wessex
RAF Brawdy	2 Sea Kings
RAF Valley	2 Wessex
HMS Gannet at Prestwick	1 Sea King

The helicopters at all these stations are fitted with standard rescue helicopter equipment to meet national and international standards and are supported by appropriate ground facilities. With regard to the ground facilities provided in the past year, I refer the hon. Member to my reply on 13 May to the hon. Member for Angus, East (Mr. Welsh) at column 262 in respect of RAF Leuchars.

In addition, one RAF Nimrod operates from RAF Kinloss or RAF St. Mawgan as appropriate in the long-range search and rescue role. It is fitted with droppable rescue equipment.

Suitably equipped RAF mountain rescue teams are based at RAF Leuchars, RAF Kinloss, RAF Valley, RAF St. Athan, RAF Stafford and RAF Linton-on-Ouse. Within the past year a new headquarters has been built for the team at RAF Stafford; a new headquarters is currently under construction at RAF Leeming for the team at RAF Linton-on-Ouse.

With regard to sorties flown and rescues achieved, I refer the hon. Member to the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988", Vol. 2, table 6.2.

Helicopter Orders

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what orders he has placed for new helicopters since 1 January; and what new orders he intends to place between now and the end of the year.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 27 May 1988]: A development contract for a light battlefield version of the Lynx helicopter was let in March and, subject to satisfactory resolution of contractual issues, an order for 16 of the type is expected to be placed shortly. Delivery is planned to start at the end of 1990.

Low-frequency Transmissions (Rugby)

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the health risks associated with electromagnetic radiation in the context of very low frequency transmissions in the Rugby area; what is regarded as the minimum safe distance for persons living or working in the vicinity of such a transmitter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 27 May 1988]: Such transmissions pose no health threat to people living and working in the area.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the role of the very low frequency communications facility at Rugby; whether it is subject to United Kingdom control; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many United States personnel are based at the very low frequency communications facility at Rugby; what are their ranks; and what are their functions.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 27 May 1988]: The facility, which is an unmanned site, provides a communications relay station for United States forces stationed in Europe.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Aborted Foetuses (Tissue)

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will establish an inquiry into the implications for medical ethics of the operations performed on 3 March and 7 April at the midland centre for neurosurgery and neurology which involved the transplant of live tissues from aborted foetuses;

(2) if he will make it his policy to prevent the use of National Health Service facilities for the performing of operations involving the transplant of live tissue from aborted foetuses;

(3) what information he has as to whether the mothers of the aborted foetuses used as donors of live tissues in operations performed on 3 March or 7 April at the midland centre for neurosurgery and neurology were in any way related or connected with the recipients of the transplanted cells;

(4) what information he has to whether the mothers of the aborted foetuses used as donors of live tissues in operations performed on 3 March or 7 April at the midland centre for neurosurgery and neurology received any payment in connection with the procedures.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what special administrative procedures were adopted prior to the operations performed at the midland centre for Neurosurgery and Neurology on 3 March and 7 April which involved the transplanting of foetal cells to the brains of adult patients suffering from Parkinson's disease;

(2) if consent was obtained from (a) those patients receiving transplanted foetal cells, (b) the mothers of the aborted or stillborn foetuses from whom the transplanted cells were taken, (c) the local ethical committees and (d) his Department prior to the operations performed on 3 March and 7 April at the midland centre for Neurosurgery and Neurology which involved the transplanting of foetal cells to the brains of adult patients suffering from Parkinson's disease;

(3) if he will publish in the Official Report the guidelines issued by his Department on the use of transplant operations of live cells taken from aborted or stillborn foetuses;

(4) if the parents of the aborted or stillborn foetuses used as donors during operations performed at the midland centre for Neurosurgery and Neurology on 3 March and 7 April in the treatment of Parkinson's disease were told the precise use to which the foetal material would be put;

(5) how many of the foetuses from which live cells were taken for operations at the midland centre for Neurosurgery and Neurology on 3 March and 7 April in the treatment of Parkinson's disease were (a) aborted or (b) stillborn; and in the case of (a) what was the number of weeks of gestation;

(6) under which statutory grounds the foetuses involved as donors of living cells for transplant operations at the midland centre for Neurosurgery and Neurology on 3 March and 7 April were aborted.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will make it his policy to incorporate into the forthcoming Bill on human embryo experimentation a clause protecting aborted foetuses from being used as donors of live tissue in transplant operations;

(2) whether his Department is aware of any evidence that the use of live cells from aborted babies in transplant operations is of long-term benefit to sufferers from Parkinson's disease; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will make it his policy to introduce a moratorium on the use of aborted foetuses as donors of live cells in transplant operations until such time as the House can legislate on this matter;

(4) if he will list the names and occupations of the members of the local ethical committee which gave permission for the use of live cells from aborted foetuses to be used in transplant operations at the midland centre for Neurosurgery and Neurology on 3 March and 7 April; and if he will publish in the Official Report the details of the application which they were asked to consider and the form in which such an application was made;

(5) if he will call for a report from the chairmen of the relevant regional and district health authorities as to the circumstances in which operations involving the transplant of live tissue from aborted babies were performed on 3 March and 7 April at the midland centre for Neurosurgery and Neurology.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will review the status and responsibilities of hospital ethical committees; if he will monitor use of foetal material; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Bernard Braine: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what guidelines have been issued by his Department with regard to the ethical implications involved in the use of human foetal brain cells in the treatment of Parkinson's disease; what is the source of supply of such material; how that supply is organised; what the required age of gestation of the foetus involved; what is the method of abortion used; what pain is caused to the foetus in the operation; if an anaesthetic is used separately on the foetus; what steps are taken to obtain the mother's consent in each case; whether any payment is involved and to whom; what information he has as to whether there is any connection between the doctors involved in these abortions with those requesting the foetal material; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The Department's current guidance is that any research involving a foetus or fetal material should be subject to approval by the local ethical committee, and that such committees should base their consideration on the code of practice set out in the report on the advisory group on the use of foetuses and fetal material for research (known as the Peel report, published in 1972). The code's provisions include that there should be no known objection on the part of the parent; that no payment should be made for the material; and that responsibility for deciding whether the material may be used for research should not rest with those conducting the research.

Local ethical committees, which are also the subject of separate guidance, are advisory bodies to safeguard patients' interest and to advise health authorities on the ethics of clinical research investigations. Information on ethical research committee membership is not held centrally.

In the two cases to which the questions refer, the fetal material used was obtained from a nursing home approved under the 1967 Abortion Act, under arrangements approved by the Secretary of State for that nursing home to supply fetal material to the Birmingham university medical centre for a number of research projects. It is a condition of the Secretary of State's approval that the provisions of the code of practice recommended by the advisory group on the use of foetuses and fetal material for research are adhered to. All women whose foetuses may be used to provide material which may be passed to the medical centre are invited to sign a declaration to the effect that they have no special wishes concerning the disposal of material arising from their pregnancy. Material provided to the medical centre is provided anonymously. Information about patients and the circumstances of their abortions cannot be released for reasons of confidentiality, but I am assured that the women concerned received no payment in connection with the procedures, nor were they known to be in any way related to or connected with the recipients of the transplanted cells.

I understand from inquiries made of the appropriate health authorities that the transplant operations were conducted with the consent of the patients who received the transplants and the consent of the local ethical committee, which I understand considered the issues involved with great care and over a long period of time.

A third operation involving the transplantation of fetal brain tissue to a patient suffering from Parkinson's disease has now been performed at the midland centre for neurosurgery and neurology. This also was done in accordance with the Peel code of practice and existing clinical guidance.

In view of the continued advance of medical techniques since the Peel report was published, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services, together with my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales, has decided to set up a committee with the following terms of reference:

> "In the light of recent developments in the field of human tissue transplantation, and other relevant medical research, to review the Report of the Advisory Group on the Use of Fetuses and Fetal Material for Research (the "Peel Report"), and in particular to consider whether any modifications or additions should be made to the Recommended Code of Practice in that Report."

The committee will be chaired by the Rev. Dr. J. Polkinghorne FRS, Dean of Trinity hall, Cambridge and its membership will comprise Sir Raymond Hoffenberg, president of the Royal College of Physicians of London, Professor Ian Kennedy, Professor of medical law and ethics, Kings College, London and Dr. Sally McIntyre, director MRC sociology unit, University of Glasgow.

Influenza

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many cases of flu' were reported in each year since 1982.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that this information is not held centrally.

Since influenza is not a notifiable disease no national statistics are collected however the communicable disease surveillance centre does monitor the types of virus in circulation. During the winter of 1987-88 this sample monitoring indicated that the level of influenza infection in England and Wales was relatively low. The last epidemic was in 1975-76.

Mental Health

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the annual total of cases in which section 136 of the Mental Health Act was used for the last 10 years.

Mrs. Currie: The figures in the table show the number of admissions to NHS mental illness and mental handicap hospitals and units in England under the provisions of section 136 of the Mental Health Act for each year since 1977.

Admissions under section 136, Mental Health Act

Year	Number
1977	1,497
1978	1,608
1979	1,561
1980	1,883
1981	1,907
1982	1,885
1983	1,853
1984	1,959
1985	1,832
1986	1,523

Elderly People

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what proportion of national income Her Majesty's Government spend on programmes for elderly people.

Mr. Moore: About 8·2 per cent. of national income in the United Kingdom is spent by the Government on the social security benefit expenditure and the health and personal social services programmes for elderly people.

Disabled People (Benefits)

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how much is being spent on benefits for disabled people at the current time; and how much was being spent in 1979.

Mr. Scott: The amount, in cash terms, spent on benefits for people who are long-term sick or disabled was as follows:

	Great Britain £ million
1978-79	1,780
1987-88	6,750

Black Report

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what action his Department is currently taking arising from the publication of the Black report, "Inequalities in Health."

Mrs. Currie: The Black report was published in 1980. Since then the Government have made significant increases in the resources available to the Health Service, and the overall health of the nation has continued to improve. Many of the underlying objectives behind the recommendations of the report were in line with the Government's polices set out in "Care in Action", so in many instances the same end has been pursued by different means.

The Government have taken a number of steps to promote good health and to ensure the equitable distribution of health care resources. Unhealthy lifestyles and unhealthy diets create major risks to health. One of the Government's main aims in setting up the Health Education Authority was to give greater emphasis to disease prevention and health promotion. We are determined that all social groups should have the information they need to make wise choices to protect their health. The first major campaign of the new authority, in conjunction with the Government, has been directed at coronary heart disease, which disproportionately affects men from lower socio-economic groups.

The Government have pursued a policy of allocating health authority resources more fairly across the country using the resource allocation working party's approach. Substantial progress has been made in bringing regions closer to their RAWP targets, and this year all regions are within 96 per cent. of target. The review of the RAWP formula has been looking, amongst other issues, at whether the formula should be revised to make it more sensitive to the impact of social deprivation or need for health care.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how much money was spent on preparing for and publicising the changes in the housing benefits system introduced on 11 April; and how much he estimates will be spent on preparing for and publicising the amendments for the housing benefits scheme announced on 27 April;

(2) how much money each local authority administering the housing benefits scheme, introduced on 11 April, has spent on preparing for and publicising the scheme; and how much he estimates each authority will spend on preparing for, and publicising the amendments to the scheme announced on 27 April.

Mr. Portillo: The Department centrally spent about £400,000 on publicising the changes to the housing benefit scheme introduced on 1 April, and made available to local authorities in total a grant of £25 million to support their costs in preparing for the reformed housing benefit scheme; information on actual costs incurred by individual authorities is not available centrally. The cost to authorities of implementing the changes to the scheme announced on 27 April cannot be estimated until the Department completes consultations with the local authority associations on the detailed procedures, and until figures are available for the number of claims expected.

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the numbers of housing benefit claimants as at June 1979 and June 1987 in each of the following constituencies (a) Amber Valley, (b) Mid Worcestershire, (c) West Lancashire, (d) Staffordshire Moorlands, (e) Hendon South, (f) Darlington and (g) Fylde.

Mr. Portillo: I regret that the information is not available.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the latest details of the arrangements under which claimants will be able to apply for and receive their transitional payments of housing benefit; and what steps his Department is taking to make sure that all those who qualify will receive their transitional help.

Mr. Portillo: Leaflet RR4 "Housing Benefit—New Rules" which contains a claim form for transitional payments is available from local authorities, DHSS local offices and post offices. A separate leaflet outlining the scheme has been sent to the various organisations advising claimants. Advertisements drawing attention to transitional payments and to the availability of the leaflet appeared in the national press during the week commencing 23 May.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report a revised version of the table showing gainers and losers from the structural change to housing benefit, Official Report 18 December 1987, columns 915-918, resulting from his increase in the capital cut-off limit announced on 27 April, and a similar table showing the cash position as a result of the transitional help announced on the same date, excluding the effect of local authority rate and rent increases.

Mr. Portillo: The tables published previously remain the best guide to the structural effect of the reforms. The increase in the capital limit to £8,000 is expected to bring back into the scheme about 100,000 households. The transitional payments reduce the size of cash losses but do not affect the overall structural figures for housing benefit.

Artificial Limbs

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list the companies that currently supply artificial limbs to the National Health Service;

(2) if his Department has costed a contract-based limb fitting service for the National Health Service.

Mr. Scott: These are matters for the Disablement Services Authority, to which the hon. Member should address his questions.

AIDS

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many babies have so far been born in England who were HIV positive at birth;

(2) how many babies have been born in England to mothers who are HIV positive.

Mr. Newton: The number of babies born to mothers who are HIV positive is not known, since pregnant women are not routinely tested for HIV antibodies. However, to the end of March the communicable disease surveillance centre had received reports of a total of 20 children who have antibodies to HIV and whose mothers are known to be infected or at high risk. The presence of antibody at birth is not necessarily an indication of infection, and it is probable that some of these babies will eventually be shown to be free of infection.

Solvent Abuse

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the reply given to the hon. and learned Member for Leicester, West (Mr. Janner) on 20 April, Official Report, column 463, if he will give the nature and extent of the drug misuse services for solvent abuse.

Mrs. Currie: The Department has asked health authorities to give priority to the development of services for drug misusers and has provided extra resources to enable them to do so. These services provide counselling, advice and information and, where necessary, detoxification.

Information on the full extent to which local drug misuse services are able to help solvent misusers is not held centrally. Recent research, based on reports from local drug projects, shows, however, that for about half of those seeking help, solvent misuse was, in varying degrees, a problem.

Mental Institutions

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many former mental institutions have been disposed of by his Department as surplus assets; how many have been retained by his Department for other use; and of those sold off, what proportion of the income has been retained by the originating district health authorities.

Mrs. Currie: The information requested is not routinely collected and to collect it by means of a special exercise would involve disproportionate cost. I would however refer my hon. Friend to my reply to a question from the hon. Member for Bradford, South (Mr. Cryer) on 16 February at column 564. That information was the result of a special exercise.

Our policy is that all proceeds should be retained by the health service for reinvestment in the service with a significant proportion being passed to the district health authority which initiated the sale. Proceeds from the sale of former mental institutions are required to be used for the development of services for the mentally ill or mentally handicapped.

State Pension

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the current value in real terms of the basic state pension in 1979 terms.

Mr. Scott: The basic pension of £19·50 payable from November 1978 would be worth £40·19 at April 1988 prices. The current basic pension rate is £41·15, a real terms increase of 2·4 per cent.

Supplementary Benefit (Gallup Survey)

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the results of the Gallup survey for the National Audit Office of supplementary benefit claimants' satisfaction with the service provided by his Department's local offices; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: We have found the results of the Gallup Survey to be a valuable supplement to the Department's own customer research. Some of the findings are encouraging; for instance the local office service provided for supplementary benefit (now income support) pensioners is generally well received. But there are criticisms too, for example, of a lack of privacy for local office callers, which officials will be seeking to put right. It is our intention to commission independent customer research of this type on a regular basis from 1989-90 onwards.

Pensioners

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services when he last met representatives of the pensioners' organisations; and what issues were discussed.

Mr. Scott: I met representatives of Pensioners' Voice on 9 May, when we discussed a wide range of matters affecting the elderly.

Surplus Property (Sale)

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what criteria will be used to determine the proportion of receipts from the sale of surplus property by health authorities which will be allocated to the district health authority initiating the sale.

Mrs. Currie: No criteria are issued, but the policy is that district health authorities should benefit from the disposals they initiate subject to regional health authorities' retaining the flexibility to exercise their strategic role.

Disability Premium

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether offices of his Department will accept backdated certificates where a claimant of disability premium in receipt of income support who is under 60 years of age and who has been incapable of work for 28 weeks, but who has not previously submitted medical certificates for this period; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The award of the disability premium is, in the first instance, a matter for the office of the chief adjudication officer and local adjudication officers. I refer the hon. Member to the guidance issued by that office to local adjudication officers, a copy of which is held in the Library. The relevant guidance is at paragraphs 27092 and 11459 et seq.

Long-term Institutional Care

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people were discharged from long-term institutional care for each year since 1979; what proportion they constituted; and how many were subsequently detained by the police within 12 months of the date of discharge.

Mrs. Currie: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member all the information he seeks, as no record is kept centrally on individual patients or the outcome of patients after discharge.

The table shows the numbers of discharges, after a stay of five years or more, into the community from National Health Service mental illness and mental handicap hospitals and units in England. The table also shows these discharges as a percentage of all discharges inclusive of transfers and irrespective of duration of stay. Comparable figures for 1979 are not readily available.

Child and Family Allowances

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will update the information in his reply about child and family allowance of 15 January, Official Report, columns 441-444, expressed in April prices to include the years 1988-89.

Mr. Scott: The information is as follows:

Cyclotron Trust

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a grant to the cyclotron trust.

Mr. Newton: We are making a grant of £6 million to the cyclotron trust, as a contribution towards the £10·4 million capital cost of the cyclotron which the trust plans to provide in a new facility at St. Thomas' hospital. The cyclotron is used for treating cancers including some which are not normally responsive to conventional radiotherapy and can also enable some patients to avoid disfiguring surgery; 60 per cent. of the cyclotron's capacity will be reserved for NHS patients, and we shall meet up to 60 per cent. of the direct running costs in so far as they are not met from other sources. The project is an important instance of partnership between the public and voluntary sectors.

Mentally Senile Patients

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he is taking to ensure health authorities have adequate nursing provision to allow for mentally senile patients to be cared for separately from those recovering from physical illnesses.

Mrs. Currie: Decisions on the numbers and deployment of nursing staff are matters for local National Health Service management. Health authorities are aware of the need to provide separate services for elderly physically frail and elderly mentally ill people so that mixing of mentally alert with confused patients on the same ward is avoided as far as possible.

Registered Homes Act 1984

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether residents of homes not required to be registered under the Registered Homes Act 1984 will be entitled to income support.

Mr. Portillo: There are certain circumstances in which residents of homes not required to be registered under the Registered Homes Act 1984 will be entitled to income support to the appropriate residential care or nursing home limit. These are set out in regulation 19(3), of the Income Support (General) Regulations 1987, as amended by the Income Support (General) Amendment Regulations 1988, which define "nursing home" and "residential care homes". All residents of homes mentioned specifically in this regulation will be entitled to income support, subject to the normal qualifying criteria.

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether residents of homes with less than four beds not required to be registered under the Registered Homes Act 1984 will receive income support.

Mr. Portillo: Subject to the normal qualifying criteria people in homes with fewer than four beds not required to be registered under the Registered Homes Act 1984 will be entitled to income support up to the appropriate residential care home limit if the conditions set out in regulation 19(3) of the Income Support (General) Regulations 1987 are met. Where the conditions are not met residents will be entitled to income support up to the ordinary board and lodging limits.

Child Abuse (Cleveland)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to receive the report of Mrs. Justice Butler-Sloss's inquiry into child abuse in Cleveland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The report was received yesterday. Arrangements are in hand for publication as soon as is practicable, which is likely to be in about a month's time.

Electro-convulsive Therapy

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the total number of cases in which electro-convulsive therapy has been administered in each year since the treatment became available; what proportion of patients voluntarily submitted to electro-convulsive therapy treatment; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks in the form requested, as no record is kept centrally of either the number of individual patients to whom electro-convulsive therapy was administered, or the circumstances of its administration.

The data held centrally are in the table which shows the number of courses of treatment and the total number of treatments by electro-convulsive therapy administered each year in special hospitals and National Health Service mental illness hospitals and units since statistics were collected in 1979. A patient may undergo more than one course of treatment during the year.

Electro-convulsive therapy treatments and courses: England 1979-80

Year	Treatments	Courses
1979	159,193	26,400
1980	160,277	25,441
1981	147,419	24,407
1982	139,307	22,578
1983	128,526	21,350
1984	125,357	19,850
1985	137,940	20,948
1986	129,757	19,308

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the preparation procedure for the administration of electro-convulsive therapy to an involuntary patient.

Mrs. Currie: The clinical management of a detained patient prior to the administration of electro-convulsive therapy (ECT), as with any other patient, is a matter for the professional judgment of the medical and other staff directly involved in the patient's care.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report those institutions which employ electro-convulsive therapy treatment; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: The table lists all the mental illness hospitals and units, in England, whose medical staff administered electro-convulsive therapy during 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, irrespective of whether the actual treatment was carried out at this site or another.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to take steps to increase the level of staff provision available to undertake electro-convulsive therapy treatment.

Mrs. Currie: The allocation of staff to the administration of electro-convulsive therapy (ECT) is a matter for the professional judgment of those responsible for the clinical management of the patient concerned.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to change the procedures under which electro-convulsive therapy treatment is administered.

Mrs. Currie: The clinical procedure for the administration of electro-convulsive therapy (ECT) is a matter for the professional judgment of those staff with direct responsibility for patient care.

There are no plans at present to change the legal requirements governing the administration of ECT to patients detained under the Mental Health Act 1983. A code of practice for the guidance of professionals involved in the treatment of mental disorder is in preparation, as required by section 118 of the Act, and this will cover procedures for the administration of ECT.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average time between a recommendation of electro-convulsive therapy treatment by an involuntary patient's consultant, the agreement of an independent consultant under the Mental Health Act 1983, and the beginning of treatment.

Mrs. Currie: This information is not collected centrally, although the Mental Health Act Commission does arrange for the independent "approved" doctor to provide a second opinion within two working days of receiving the request for that opinion from the detained patient's consultant.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services in how many cases the recommendation of electro-convulsive therapy treatment on an involuntary patient by that patient's consultant was overruled by the Mental Health Act Commission, in each of the last five years.

Mrs. Currie: This information is not readily available, and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. However, the second biennial report (1985-1987) of the Mental Health Act Commission (section 7) contains statistical information collected by the commission relating to "Consent to Treatment and Second Opinions" which the hon. Member may find of interest. A copy of this report is in the Library.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what guidelines his Department issues on the circumstances in which a person who expresses his wish not to receive electro-convulsive therapy treatment may have that wish overruled.

Mrs. Currie: Other than in cases of emergency and in the case of patients detained under the Mental Health Act 1983, ECT cannot be given to patients without their consent. The Act provides that treatment can be given without the patient's consent where a second medical opinion from an independent, approved doctor (obtained through the Mental Health Act Commission) is obtained to the effect that the treatment is necessary and should be given. Before providing this second opinion, the independent doctor must consult two other persons who have been professionally involved with the patient's treatment; one a nurse, and the other neither a nurse nor a doctor.

GP and Hospital Visits

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in 1987 (a) visited a general practitioner at least once, (b) had at least one consultation in a National Health Service hospital and (c) were admitted as an in-patient to a National Health Service hospital at least once.

Mrs. Currie: Figures are not available in the form requested. The 1986 general household survey has provided the following figures on the use of health services in Great Britain.

(1) 14 per cent. consulted a NHS general practitioner in the 14 days before interview.
(2) 13 per cent. attended an outpatient or casualty department in a three-month reference period.
(3) 9 per cent. underwent an inpatient stay in a 12-month reference period.

Health Care

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the average expenditure per person in the United Kingdom in 1987 for total health care provision broken down into convenient age groups.

Mr. Newton: In 1986, the latest year for which information is available from the national accounts published by the Central Statistical Office, the average expenditure per person in the United Kingdom on health care (public and private) was £384. No breakdown of this total is available by age, but an analysis of gross expenditure on health and personal social services in England in 1985-86 is published in "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1988-89 to 1990-91" (Cm 288-II)—chart 14.4.

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the average expenditure per person in the United Kingdom in 1987 for health care provision in the public sector, and private sectors respectively.

Mr. Newton: In 1986, the latest year for which information is available from the national accounts published by the Central Statistical Office, the average expenditure per person in the United Kingdom on health care was:

Public sector[1]	361
Private sector	23

[1] Excludes expenditure on Local Authority personal social services.

It is estimated that in 1987-88 United Kingdom gross expenditure on the National Health Service was equivalent to £380 per person. Later figures for private sector expenditure are not yet available.

Tendering

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Waveney on 24 May, in respect of regional health authority competitive tendering, he will undertake a central initiative to make all solicitors', architects', quantity surveyors' and engineers' services subject to tender.

Mrs. Currie: Not at this time. I am satisfied with the pace at which health authorities are themselves opening up these services to competition.

South West Thames RHA (Land)

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on how much surplus land is owned by South West Thames regional health authority; how much has been disposed of during the last five years; and what disposal plans it has for the future.

Mrs. Currie: The South West Thames regional health authority held 130 acres of land on 21 March 1987, comprising sites exceeding one acre which had been declared surplus. Disposals during the last five years were as follows:

£ million

Year	Total area (acres)	Total receipts
1983-84	7	2·4
1984-85	38	10·5
1985-86	32	9·1
1986-87	98	30·2
1987-88	Not available	25·4

During the 1988-89 financial year the Regional Health Authority anticipates disposal of about 100 acres of land.

Disabled Persons

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley) of 19 May, Official Report, column 559, why no formal meetings have taken place since October 1987 with local authority associations on the implementation of the Disabled Persons (Services Representation and Consultation) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Since October 1987 much work has been done on the Act which has not required formal meetings. We are now, however, in touch with the associations to arrange a further meeting.

Multiple Sclerosis

Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if those multiple sclerosis sufferers who are under pensionable age and who because of the varying effects of the condition work intermittently, thereby failing to meet the two-year period requirement, will be taken into account for disregard payment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Where entitlement to income support is interrupted for longer than eight weeks because a member of a couple is in work, it will be necessary for them to receive benefit for a futher two years in order to qualify for the higher earnings disregard. However, multiple sclerosis sufferers will qualify sooner if they are entitled to the disability premium. Entitlement to the disability premium depends on whether the person satisfies the criteria for receiving it, as set out in paragraphs 11 and 12 of schedule 2 to the Income Support (General) Regulations 1987.

Teenagers (Detention)

Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services when the transitional social security payments protection becomes operative for teenagers who have been held in detention.

Mr. Scott: The new rules for people who lost significant sums in housing benefit and income support when the new schemes were introduced are set out in leaflets RR4 (housing benefit) and SB22 (income support). These leaflets explain how people may claim. I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library.

Children and Young Persons (Amendment) Act 1986

Mr. Walters: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services when the hon. Member for Westbury can expect replies from the Minister for Health to his letters of 22 January and 28 March about the need for speedy implementation of the Children and Young Persons (Amendment) Act.

Mr. Newton: I replied to my hon. Friend on 2 June.

Rent Rebates

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the number of tenants, by tenure, who would cease to qualify for a rent rebate allowance and the savings in expenditure that would be made, if the rent taper were increased to 70 per cent.

Mr. Portillo: We estimate that if the rent taper were increased from 65 to 70 per cent. there would be a public expenditure saving of some £50 million; 90,000 local authority tenants would lose their rent rebates and 20,000 private tenants their rent allowances.

Disability Benefits

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what he anticipates will be the time scale for the review of disability benefits the Government expects to undertake following publication of the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys survey reports; and what arrangements for consultations it will include.

Mr. Scott: When all the relevant results of the surveys are available, we shall consider what conclusions can be drawn from them concerning benefits for disabled people. We have not yet decided what form that consideration will take, but will make an announcement in due course about consultation with interested organisations on the implications of the survey results.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether there will be any exemptions other than for one registered disabled to one eight-week limit for the payment of the bridging allowance; and whether young people who are not incapable of work but unable through disability to find a suitable YTS place will be able to claim income support after September.

Mr. Portillo: Payment of bridging allowance will be limited to a maximum of eight weeks in any period of 12 months in all cases except where a young person is registered disabled.

The Government have guaranteed a youth training scheme place to all young people under 18 who are capable of work, whether disabled or not. We cannot envisage a situation in which a young person would be too disabled to take up a YTS place and yet would be judged by the adjudicating authorities to be insufficiently disabled to be entitled to income support.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to publish the first part of the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys survey of disablement; what areas will be covered by this and the further reports; and what the timetable is for publication of the further report.

Mr. Scott: There are four surveys covering adults and children separately, with each group further separated between private households and communal establishments. Fieldwork for the last—children in communal establishments—was completed earlier this year.

We hope to publish the first report early in September. This will contain information about the overall prevalence of disability in adults and also report on the methods and concepts used in all the surveys, including the approach taken to the scaling of severity of disability. The second report, containing information about the financial circumstances of disabled adults, is likely to be published in November. Further reports will follow in 1988 and 1989 to cover disabled adults' use of services (including communal establishments), and to provide the same general range of information about children as about adults.

Income Support

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether 16 and 17-year-olds who satisfy any one of the conditions of regulation 13(2) of the Income Support (General) Regulations will ever be entitled to income support while in relevant education for longer than the child benefit extension period; and when regulations on these matters will be available.

Mr. Scott: Amending regulations will be laid before Parliament shortly to ensure that 16 and 17-year-olds who satisfy the conditions of regulation 13(2) (a) to (e) or (h) will be entitled to income support at all times from September 1988.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the 40 per cent. voluntary unemployment deduction is applied to the income support of those (a) who are not required to be available for work on grounds of severe hardship and (b) who are appealing against a decision that they are not incapable of work; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: One of the basic conditions of entitlement to income support is that a person must be available for work unless he or she comes within one of the groups of people who are exempt by regulations from that condition. If a person who is normally required to be available for work is not in fact available, but an adjudication officer is satisfied that refusal of income support would cause hardship to the claimant or his or her family, income support will be paid with a 40 per cent. reduction in the claimant's personal allowance.

If a person who has been sick, and therefore exempt from the availability requirement, is considered by the regional medical officer of the Department of Health and Social Security to be fit for work, and he or she declines to seek suitable work, or places unreasonable restrictions on his or her availability, the adjudication officer may disallow the claim. If the claimant appeals against the decision that he is fit for work, income support can continue to be paid pending the outcome of the appeal. A 40 per cent. reduction in the claimant's personal allowance will be made but there will be no requirement to show hardship in order to receive payment.

In each case the reduction is modified to 20 per cent. if any member of the claimant's family is pregnant or seriously ill and there is less than £200 capital.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many claimants lost their transitional addition because of the change in the Income Support (General) Amendment Regulations 1988 (SI 663) which specified that the disability or higher pension premiums were awarded only if the partner who receives invalidity benefit or severe disablement allowance is the claimant, rather than, as previously, either partner; what was the reason for this change; and what advice was given or is being given to claimant couples in such circumstances.

Mr. Scott: No claimants lost their transitional addition as a result of this amendment to the Income Support (General) Amendment Regulations. The amendment affects members of couples, one of whom has been in hospital longer than 52 weeks. In this situation income support no longer treats the couple as members of the same household and requires a separate claim from each partner. However, under the rules governing invalidity pension and severe disablement allowance, any dependency benefit is normally paid to the partner at home. Thus a fully fit person claiming in his or her own right could have qualified for the disability premium by virtue of another person's entitlement to a qualifying benefit.

The change restored the original policy intention. As it was made before 11 April 1988 no claimant lost benefit, and no special advice was or is considered necessary.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services, whether the Government intend to disregard savings or mobility allowance in applying the capital rule for income support; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: No. I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshaw (Mr. Morris) on 17 May 1988 at columns 412-13.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people fail to satisfy the conditions of entitlement to income support because their mobility allowance savings take their capital over the limit allowed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: I have no knowledge that anyone has failed to satisfy the conditions of entitlement to income support because their savings of mobility allowance exceed £6,000.

Social Fund

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether copies of local social fund guidance indicating local priorities will be made available to the public; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: In the interests of good liaison we expect local office managers to make available, by such means as they judge best, copies of the local office priorities to interested agencies and individuals.

Pensions

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many pensioners currently receive an enhancement of 25p per week on account of their being aged 80 years or more; and what is the additional administration cost of this arrangement.

Mr. Scott: Nearly 2 million pensioners were receiving the age addition in September 1987. The addition is added automatically by computer and the extra administrative costs of paying it are therefore small.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list all those official engagements in the previous 12 months at which the subject of the illness myalgic encephalomyelitis has been raised.

Mrs. Currie: Representatives from the Myalgic Encephalomyelitis Association met my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State on 21 March and had earlier had a meeting with officials.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received from the British Medical Association on the illness myalgic encephalomyelitis.

Mrs. Currie: None.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has had from organisations seeking help for the sufferers of myalgic encephalomyelitis

Mrs. Currie: The Department has received representations from the ME Association and from the Tayside post viral fatigue syndrome support group.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many sufferers of myalgic encephalomyelitis are at present being treated in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that these figures are not held centrally.

Psychiatric Care

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give details of the total cost to the National Health Service of psychiatric care; and what percentage of the health budget, is attributable to such care.

Mr. Newton: It is estimated that the cost of providing psychiatric care covering the treatment of in-patients, out-patients and day patients for mental illness and mental handicap patients was £1,555·5 million at 1985-86 prices, some 16 per cent. of total expenditure on hospital and community health services. Because of data limitations, this figure does not fully cover all community health service expenditure on this care group, neither does it cover expenditure on the family practitioner services.

Mental Illness

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will give the approximate cost to the National Health Service for an in-patient in a mental hospital for (a) three months, (b) six months, (c) nine months and (d) 12 months;

(2) if he will give the approximate cost to the National Health Service for an out-patient in a mental hospital for treatment lasting (a) six months, (b) 12 months and (c) two years.

Mrs. Currie: For information on the average treament costs per inpatient day and per outpatient attendance by type of hospital (including those categorised as "Mental Illness" or "Mental Handicap") for health regions and England as a whole I refer the hon. Member to the Department's annual publication "Health Service Costing Returns" (the latest being for 1986-87)—copies of which are held in the Library.

Health Commissioner

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what financial support he will make available to enable families to meet the costs of bringing matters to the attention of the Health Commissioner.

Mrs. Currie: No costs need to be incurred by complainants in bringing matters to the attention of the Health Service Commissioner.

Benefit Claimants (Banks)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the use by benefit claimants of banks as opposed to post offices; and what weight he gave to the likely impact of his policy on sub-post offices.

Mr. Portillo: Claimants in receipt of benefits paid by computer are offered the choice of payment either by direct credit to a bank account or by order book at a post office. Full consideration was given to the likely impact on the post office network but it is clear that many claimants find payment directly to a bank more convenient.

Family Incomes

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many families with children have incomes in excess of £30,000 in 1988-89.

Mr. Scott: The estimated number of families with children with gross incomes from all sources (including benefits) in excess of £30,000 per annum in 1988-89 is 370,000. This figure is based on projections from the 1985 family expenditure survey, supplemented by information from the survey of personal incomes.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for 1978-79 and 1988-89 the average income before and after tax of (a) families with children and (b) families and individuals without children.

Mr. Scott: Estimates for the financial year 1978-79 can be provided only at disproportionate cost. Only projections are available for 1988-89 which cannot be provided on a basis consistent with historic data. The latest year for which historic data are currently available is 1985; estimates for that year and the calendar year 1979 are as follows:

£ per week

	Families with children	Families and individuals without children
Income Before Tax
1979 (1979 prices)	123	75
1985 (1985 prices)	225	138
Income After Tax
1979 (1979 prices)	101	62
1985 (1985 prices)	180	112

Notes:

1. Income is the family's total income from all sources including benefits.

2. The figures used for tax include National Insurance Contributions.

Women Doctors

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will report on the research project funded by his Department on women doctors' careers.

Mr. Newton: The report "Doctors and their Careers", by Isobel Allen, published today, is the outcome of a research project funded by the Department. We are grateful to Ms. Allen for her work. Women already account for more than 50 per cent. of the intake at several medical schools, and are forming an increasing proportion of the medical work force. It is essential that we make full use of their talents.

We shall of course take account of Ms. Allen's findings in considering the wider report we expect later this year from the national steering group on equal opportunities for women in the National Health Service. Meanwhile, action is already under way, or is being set in hand, on a number of the issues identified by her report. In particular, the "Achieving a Balance" programme for reforming the hospital medical staffing structure addresses the problem of career blockages in the hospital service, and of ensuring better careers guidance and counselling at all stages of training.

We have already reviewed, with representatives of the medical profession and the NHS, the system for part-time training of senior registrars, and a review for the registrar grade has started. We are also examining the doctors' retainer scheme which aims to help doctors with domestic commitments keep in touch with medicine. We recognise the demand for more part-time career posts and will discuss with representatives of the NHS and the medical profession the possibility of increasing these.

I have today announced new measures to reduce the pressures on some junior hospital doctors arising from undesirably long contracted hours of duty.

We will be bringing to the attention of the royal colleges and faculties, and consulting them about how to address, the report's findings of a perception among young doctors that assumptions about appropriate career patterns are too rigid, that patronage is too important in determining advancement, and that certain specialties are seen as unsuitable for women. We shall also discuss with the royal colleges and faculties, with post-graduate deans and with health authorities, ways of eliminating questioning by appointments boards which can be seen as discriminatory.

To assist this process, we are arranging two seminars to promote consideration of Ms. Allen's report by representatives of the health authorities and the medical profession.

Junior Hospital Staff

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he is taking to reduce the hours of work of junior hospital medical and dental staff.

Mr. Newton: I am today publishing a new scheme to reduce the hours of work of junior hospital doctors and dentists. Under the scheme, local professional working parties will be set up in every district to advise on the elimination, wherever possible, of regular rota commitments which require a junior to be on duty, on average, more than one night and weekend in three. This initiative will be carried forward in conjunction with a systematic review to assess the number of medical staff required in each region to provide essential support for consultants in the acute specialties.

Some progress has already been made as a result of action taken in 1982 to ban regular rota commitments for junior hospital medical staff more onerous than one night or weekend in every two, and to set one night or weekend in every three as the target maximum commitment. The number of rotas more onerous than one in three in England fell from 5,000 in 1982 to 3,500 in 1985, representing in the latter year less than 20 per cent. of junior posts. The average number of contracted hours of duty fell from 87·7 in 1982 to 85·7 in 1986. As reported by juniors themselves, average weekly hours of work (as distinct from hours of duty) fell from 58·3 in 1981 to 57 in 1985.

There remains nevertheless a significant number of juniors whose commitments are undesirably heavy: a recent survey identified 1,463 juniors in England whose contracted hours of duty exceeded 104 per week, which is broadly equivalent to a one in two rota. We have therefore concluded that further measures are needed to reinforce the progress already made.

We are establishing a scheme under which, in every district health authority, local professional working parties will be set up to advise on the elimination wherever possible of regular rota commitments which require a junior to be on duty more than one night or weekend in every three. This will be accompanied by a systematic assessment of the number of medical staff required in each region to provide essential support for consultants in the acute specialties, which is itself part of the "Achieving a Balance" programme for reforming the hospital medical staffing structure.

Details of the scheme are set out in circular EL(88)P82, which is being sent to health authorities this week and of which a copy has been placed in the Library.

Dental Charges (Forms)

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the average cost of processing the four-page form F1D, filled in by patients wishing to claim exemption from National Health Service dental charges; what was the average cost of processing the eight-page revised form F1D that replaced it; and what is now estimated to be the cost of processing the 17-page form AG1 that replaced the revised form F1D on 11 April.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 29 April 1988]: I regret that reliable estimates which would provide cost comparisons between the forms F1D, the revised F1D and the AG1 are not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Form AG1 covers a variety of possible situations and the length of time it will take to process will depend on the circumstances of each individual case. However, as the AG1's new design replaces a number of previous separate claim forms which will now be processed in one central office rather than locally, I do not expect there to be higher processing costs.

Weekly Spending Power

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Norfolk, North (Mr. Howell) of 17 May, Official Report, columns 402-6, if he will provide figures for net weekly spending power on the same basis and for the same groups with weekly earnings of £190, £200, £210, £220, £230, £240, £250, £260, £270, £280, £290, £300, £350 and £400.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is provided in the tables. The assumptions are as set out in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Norfolk, North (Mr. Howell) on 17 May at columns 402-6. Typically, however, families in these income ranges are unlikely actually to be paying average local authority rents and rates. Income tax is on a post-budget basis.

ENERGY

Electricity Privatisation

101. Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what assessment he has made of the implications for the United Kingdom's international commitments, and their effect on the conduct of foreign policy, of the proposed privatisation of the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I do not expect our international commitments to be affected by electricity privatisation.

Television and Press Advertising (Expenditure)

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give the sums expended on television and press advertising in order to make the general public aware of (a) the operations at Sellafield in each of the years since its name was changed and (b) the privatisation of British Gas.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The advertising costs incurred by Government during the flotation of British Gas plc amounted to £24·6 million, including VAT, of which TV and press advertising amounted to £21·1 million.

Advertising by British Nuclear Fuels plc is a matter for the company. I am asking the chairman to write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps he proposes to take to reduce the period of time between receipt of notices of appeal from people removed from the country and the forwarding of explanatory statements about their removal to the appellate authority;

(2) if he will give for each year since 1979 the minimum delay time and the maximum delay time between the receipt of notices of appeal from people removed from the country and the forwarding of explanatory statements about their removal to the appellate authority;

(3) if he will give for each year since 1979 the total number of immigration officers employed to prepare explanatory statements about removals and the total number of notices of appeal against removal received;

(4) when he expects that an explanatory statement in respect of the removal of Mr. Asaddar Ali, HO Ref. A371529, will be forwarded to the appellate authority.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 23 May 1988]: The explanatory statement in respect of the removal of Mr. Asaddar Ali was forwarded to the appellate authority on 23 May. I regret the delay in doing so. Procedural checks have been introduced to ensure that all appeals from abroad against removal are dealt with as quickly as possible. The rest of the information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

DEFENCE

Howitzer

Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he is yet in a position to make a statement on 155 mm self-propelled howitzers for the Army.

Mr. Sainsbury: Following careful evaluation and extensive discussions of the competitive proposals put forward by industry to replace the 105 mm Abbot self-propelled howitzers, I have decided to place a contract with Vickers Shipbuilding and Engineering Limited for further work on its AS 90 155 mm howitzer. This contract, worth some £4 million, will be to finance additional work designed to demonstrate more fully the performance of VSEL's design to the British Army's specification. It will at the same time secure the Ministry of Defence option prices for any subsequent production orders. Pending a final decision on production we shall, however, continue to monitor the development in the United States of improvements to the current M109 howitzer.

We intend in this way to preserve the benefits of the original competition whilst creating a sound basis on which a decision on full production can be made early next year.

ENVIRONMENT

Television and Press Advertising (Expenditure)

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the sums expended on television and press advertising to make the public aware of the Nirex document "The Way Forward" and the consultation process it inaugurated.

Mr. Moynihan: This is a matter for Nirex.

Opencast Coal Mining

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when new planning guidance on opencast coal mining will be issued; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Wales have today issued minerals planning guidance note 3 on opencast coal mining. The advice in this new document replaces guidance set out in DOE circular 3/84 (WO 13/84) on the exercise of planning control over opencast working. The new guidance advises mineral planning authorities on the balance which needs to be struck between the economic benefits of developing this source of low-cost energy and the protection of the environment. The guidelines give details of the national policy considerations and the specific impacts which need to be taken into account when determining planning applications for opencast mining.

The guidelines point out that it is for industry to decide the level of opencast output for which they wish to aim in any period; but it is for mineral planning authorities to determine the acceptability of specific projects having regard to both the benefits of opencast coal and the particular proposal, and the environmental and other material considerations relating to the specific site.

The guidelines emphasise the role that opencasting can play in clearing dereliction and improving other despoiled land and encourage the industry and mineral planning authorities to discuss and agree a forward programme of sites within which individual proposals can be considered on their merits.

I hope these guidelines will mark the start of a new chapter of positive and constructive co-operation between the industry and mineral planning authorities to ensure this important resource is extracted in an environmentally acceptable way.

Housing Stock

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards the plans of some local authorities to dispose of their entire housing stock.

Mr. Ridley: In principle, I welcome proposals by local authorities to transfer their housing into alternative ownership, as long as the terms are right.

I have today sent guidelines to local authorities, describing the terms on which I might be prepared to grant consent to an application from a local authority to dispose of all or a substantial part of its housing. Copies of the guidelines have been placed in the Library of the House and in the Vote Office.

Sewage Discharges

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library copies of water authorities' reports for 1986 detailing works which failed to comply with discharge consent conditions.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 7 June 1988]: Individual returns from water authorities detailing sewage treatment works which failed to comply with numerical discharge consent conditions in 1986 were not considered suitable for placement in the Library. However, a summary of the returns detailing numbers of non-compliant works per water authority was published by the Department in chapter 3 of the 1987 edition of the "Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics", issue no. 10

For 1987 water authorities were asked to provide more detailed returns in a format which should permit a more rigorous analysis of a causes of failure and proposals for remedial action.

Environmental Research and Protection

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give figures in real terms at 1987 prices for his Department's expenditure on environmental research and protection in total and broken down into expenditure related to (a) radioactive waste, (b) air pollution, (c) water and (d) countryside for each year since 1974 for which figures are available.

Mr. Ridley [pursuant to his answer, 19 May 1988, c. 580]: The figures for 1981-82, 1982-83, 1983-84 and 1984-85 are as follows:

	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85
Radioactive waste	11·9	9·8	10·2	10·3
Air pollution	2·9	2·2	2·3	2·2
Water	4·5	4·5	4·2	3·7
Countryside	0·4	0·7	0·5	0·5
Other environmental protection	1·9	2·7	2·1	2·4
TOTAL	21·6	19·9	19·3	19·1

Note: Figures for previous years are not available.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Sub-post Offices

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many sub-post offices were closed (a) in 1986 and (b) in 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: This is an operational matter for the Post Office. However, I understand that in 1986, a total of 179 sub-post offices were closed and in 1987 the number was 186.

Radio Surveillance Equipment

Mr. Cran: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 17 May, Official Report, column 377, what are (a) the necessary equipment performance requirements laid down by his Department and (b) the frequencies made available to users of radio surveillance equipment.

Mr. Butcher: There is a range of equipment performance specifications published by the Department and made available from its radiocommunications division's library. The appropriate specifications and frequencies available would depend on the precise purpose to which the equipment is to be put. For example, surveillance equipment may be used to counter criminal activities—by anti-theft devices in retail outlets for instance—or for monitoring the performance of malfunctioning of machinery and industrial processes.

Mr. Cran: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what measures are taken by his Department to establish that licensed radio surveillance equipment is being used for legal purposes.

Mr. Butcher: The Wireless Telegraphy Acts are primarily concerned with preventing radio interference. Illegal surveillance of the kind that I think my hon. Friend has in mind is intended to go undetected and, therefore, would be unlikely to cause interference. The investigation of offences under other legislation would be a matter for the police.

WALES

Farmland

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the percentage of farmland in each grade in each Welsh county.

Mr. Peter Walker: The information requested is given in the table:

Percentage of Agricultural Land, by Grade

	Grade 1	Grade 2	Grade 3	Grade 4	Grade 5
Clwyd	0·9	7·8	32·2	36·8	22·3
Dyfed	—	0·4	19·0	58·0	22·6
Gwent	0·1	1·5	34·6	45·0	18·8
Gwynedd	—	0·6	14·5	29·4	55·5
Mid Glamorgan	0·3	6·0	12·1	32·3	49·3
Powys	—	—	5·3	47·7	47·0
South Glamorgan	1·9	40·2	45·0	10·9	2·0
West Glamorgan	1·7	1·8	22·0	35·8	38·7
Wales	0·2	2·3	17·5	44·2	35·8

Consumer Advisory Committees

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the terms and conditions of members of local consumer advisory committees in Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: The Select Committee on Welsh Affairs recommended in its report "Establishment of Local Consumer Advisory Committees (HCP 335 Session 1981-82)" that the maximum period of continuous service for a member of a local consumer advisory committee in Wales should be six years. This was accepted by the Government when the committees were established in November 1982. However, following representations from the Welsh Water Authority, I have decided to utilise powers available to me under section 24A(6) and (7) of the 1973 Water Act to revoke this requirement—which I feel is an unnecessary restriction of Welsh local consumer advisory committees as compared to the consumer consultative committees in England.

In addition I have also agreed to an amendment to schedule 2, paragraphs 2 and 3, to describe more adequately the category of members intended to represent fishing interests and an amendment to paragraph 3 of the report to remove an anomaly which existed between that paragraph and paragraph 4 of schedule 2. This latter amendment will allow a representative other than the chairman of each of the water company consumer committees to be appointed to the Dee and Clwyd local consumer advisory committee. A copy of the report as modified has been placed in the Library of the House.

TRANSPORT

Ribblehead Viaduct

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in what ways he expects that the repair by British Rail of one of the 24 arches on the Ribblehead viaduct will help to end the uncertainty about the cost of restoring the viaduct.

Mr. David Mitchell: I hope that it will enable more precise estimates to be made of the work required, and hence the costs of repairing the viaduct as a whole. British Rail is keeping English Heritage and Cumbria county council informed.

Motorways (Financing)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department has made any studies of the options for combining private sector finance and tolls in the provision of fast lanes on United Kingdom motorways.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No.

Channel Tunnel (BR Rolling Stock)

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what amount of room the authorities will require in a train using the Channel tunnel; and whether any special construction of rolling stock will be required.

Mr. David Mitchell: I understand that customs and immigration authorities are currently discussing with BR their requirements for accommodation and facilities on trains proceeding via Olympia to points beyond London. The agreed requirements will be taken into account in the specification for the new rolling stock that BR and their French and Belgian counterparts intend to order for services through the tunnel. Present planning is for customs and immigration controls on services to Waterloo to be exercised at the terminal.

Mr. Robert Gee

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to hold a public inquiry under the Merchant Shipping Act 1894 into the death of Robert Gee of 72 Rotterdam road, Lowestoft, in an offshore standby vessel accident in 1987 in Morecambe Bay; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: On 19 January a coroner's inquest returned a verdict of death by misadventure having taken account of investigations by one of my Department's marine surveyors. Revised safety procedures have been brought into operation which should prevent a repetition of the tragic accident and further inquiry would serve no useful purpose.

British Rail

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if anyone has been commissioned by the Government to consider options for the sale of British Rail.

Mr. David Mitchell: No.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Mentally Ill Patients

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what arrangements his Department has made to ensure satisfactory levels of day care for mentally ill and mentally handicapped patients leaving long-stay hospital care; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Responsibility for determining the level of local day care needs rests with individual health and local authorities.

The table indicates the increase in day care places for mentally ill and mentally handicapped people over the period 31 March 1981 to 31 March 1986 (the latest date for which figures are centrally available).

	1981	1986
Mental Illness
Day hospital places	15,300	18,660
Local authority and voluntary day centre places	[1]7,600	[1]9,200

	1981	1986
Mental Handicap
Local authority adult training centre places	43,620	50,370

[1] Includes estimate of places in mixed centres.

NHS (Cornwall)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the state of the National Health Service in Cornwall.

Mrs. Currie: Health services in Cornwall are improving markedly. Over the four years to 1986 the number of in-patient cases has risen from 36,400 to 41,600; the number of out-patient attendances from 199,800 to 223,400; and day cases from 6,400 to 9,800. Major developments are planned or in progress at Trelisk and West Cornwall hospitals. The care of patients requiring long-term care is being taken out of institutions into small community-based units.

All these measures have been made possible by the increased allocation of resources to the Cornwall and Isles of Scilly health authority—revenue spending has increased from £56·7 million in 1982-83 to £74·8 million in 1986-87, 10·7 per cent. in real terms, and the initial revenue allocation for 1988-89 is £84·418 million—and by the health authority's own efforts in sustaining significant cost improvement programmes including some rationalisation of services.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what proportion of ambulance service personnel in England and Wales have received training in intravenous infusion, intrubation, cardiac defibrillation and other advanced life-saving skills.

Mrs. Currie: Health authorities are responsible for the extended training of ambulance crews, the provision of appropriate equipment, and the extent to which this is implemented taking account of local resources, circumstances and priorities. The information requested is not available centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many ambulance service personnel are employed in England and Wales; and what proportion of these are emergency ambulance crews.

Mrs. Currie: At 30 September 1986 the number of whole-time equivalent ambulance staff (including officers) in post in England was approximately 19,000. Information on the number or proportion of these who are emergency crews is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The ambulance service in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Hearing Aids

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the average cost of a National Health Service issued hearing aid;

(2) how many hearing aids are currently issued annually by the National Health Service (a) in total and (b) free of charge; and what is the total cost of this service;

(3) if he will make a statement outlining the range and quality of hearing aids which are currently available under the National Health Service.

Mr. Scott: I am afraid that the information my hon. Friend seeks is not available centrally. Responsibility for the central purchase of NHS hearing aids and their supply to hearing aid centres throughout the United Kingdom was transferred to the Mersey regional health authority in April 1985. My hon. Friend may therefore care to contact the regional chairman direct.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will make it his policy to allow users of hearing aids to put towards the cost of an aid of their choice a voucher from the National Health Service equal to the average cost of a hearing aid issued free by the National Health Service.

Mr. Scott: We will bear my hon. Friend's suggestion in mind.

Single Payments

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many applications for single payments were made in (a) Shetland and (b) Orkney in each financial year since 1984-85; and how many were refused.

Mr. Portillo: The Department's office at Lerwick is responsible exclusively for Shetland, but Wick office, which is responsible for Orkney, serves in addition part of the mainland. The numbers of single payment decisions made representing awards and refusals in the last four statistical years are given in the table.

	1984-85[1]	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88[2]
Wick
Awards	3,364	4,637	5,032	4,936
Refusals	467	956	1,771	1,951
Lerwick
Awards	362	607	792	527
Refusals	59	130	303	234

[1] The Department's statistical years run from April to April.
[2] The figures for 1987-88 are provisional and subject to amendment.

Oral Tobacco Products

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations have been received by his Department in respect of the proposed safety regulation under the Consumer Protection Act 1987 to ban oral tobacco products; what proportion of these were in support of and against the proposals; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: A total of 274 representations have been received, of which 248 were in support of the Government's proposals and 26 were against. United States Tobacco International Inc. has indicated a wish to make further representations and has been offered until 27 June to do so. A similar offer has been made to Svenska Tobaks. A decision on the proposals will be made when all the responses have been fully considered.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has any plans in relation to the six-months qualifying period for attendance allowance, in the light of the abolition of the attendance needs addition, previously available to supplementary benefit claimants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: We have no plans to change the six-months' qualifying period for attendance allowance. Severely disabled people who have claimed the allowance and are waiting to qualify can apply to the Independent Living Fund for help with the cost of domestic assistance or personal care.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what information is available to his Department concerning the number of people who die each year whilst awaiting a decision on their attendance allowance.

Mr. Scott: I regret that the requested information is not available.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will give for each of his Department's local offices the latest available figure for the average length of time it takes to decide an attendance allowance claim;

(2) what is the combined average length of time taken by his Department's local offices to decide an attendance allowance claim; and what standards are laid down by his Department on the turnaround time which offices should aim to achieve.

Mr. Scott: Attendance allowance claims are processed centrally and figures are not kept on a local basis. Since 1983 the average time taken to decide claims has been reduced from 12·5 weeks to 9·8 weeks. Our aim is further to reduce this time to eight weeks.

Prader-Willi Syndrome

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what financial assistance is currently given to parents whose children suffer from Prader-Willi Syndrome; and if he will make a statement about any help that is proposed.

Mr. Scott: The disability benefits available for children are attendance allowance and mobility allowance. Entitlement to these allowances is not related to the specific diagnostic condition, but children who suffer from Prader-Willi Syndrome may qualify if they satisfy the eligibility criteria in terms of their need for attendance or their inability to walk.

St. Peter's Hospital, London

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will make a statement about the recent meeting between the Minister for Health, the right hon. Member for Braintree (Mr. Newton) and consultants from St. Peter's hospital, Henrietta street, London WC2.

Mr. Newton: On 26 May I met representatives of the St. Peter's group of hospitals, with the general manager of North East Thames regional health authority, about proposals by Bloomsbury health authority to relocate the hospitals in the group on the site of the Middlesex hospital.

In the light of the concerns expressed, we have asked regional officers to satisfy us that the proposed timetable for the relocation of St. Peter's hospital is feasible. At the same time we wish all those concerned to complete as soon as possible the details of the plans for the St. Peter's group as a whole to move on to the site of the Middlesex hospital, while maintaining the group's identity and corporate spirit, and ensuring that it continues to flourish as a national and international centre of excellence in urology and nephrology.

Independent Living Fund

Mr. Miscampbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects the Independent Living Fund to being operations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The trust deed was signed this morning and the Independent Living Fund is now formally established. The trustees have already begun work on determining how the fund will operate. Payments from the fund can be made immediately.

I have today laid regulations before the House which will have the effect of disregarding, for the purposes of family credit and income support, payments of income or capital from the fund. A similar regulation in respect of housing benefit will be laid as soon as possible but arrangements have been made to ensure that no beneficiary of the fund will suffer a financial loss because of this unavoidable delay.

I have placed in the Library a copy of the press release issued by the Department. This contains a copy of the trust deed and biographical notes on the 10 trustees.

Breastfeeding

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will support the breastfeeding promotion initiative being developed by the National Childbirth Trust Breastfeeding Promotion Group, La Leche League and the Association of Breastfeeding Mothers.

Mrs. Currie: The Government have been concerned at recent evidence that breastfeeding, which is best for both mother and baby, has become less popular, particularly among poorer women. We warmly welcome the new initiative, which has been actively encouraged by the Department, to form local breastfeeding groups. It is intended to recruit volunteer helpers among mothers and health and education professionals to support and promote breastfeeding, and to explain and promote breastfeeding to young people including through health education in schools.

This is a gratifyingly early response to the key recommendations in "Present day practice in Infant Feeding: Third Report" from the chief medical officer's Committee on Medical Aspects of Food Policy (COMA) which was published in January. The initiative will be launched in detail at a seminar in October, the costs of which are to be underwritten by the Government.

We consider that breastfeeding is very important for the health of future generations. The total estimated funding for the breastfeeding activities of the organisations concerned—the National Childbirth Trust Breastfeeding Promotion Group, La Leche League and the Association of Breastfeeding Mothers, for the next two years is expected to rise to at least £100,000 and will be reviewed in 1990. Further measures in line with the COMA recommendations will be announced shortly.

British Pensioners (Canada)

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the calculations on which he based the figure of £25 million for the first year cost of paying future increases to British pensioners living in Canada, which was contained in his observations on the parliamentary petition of the hon. Member for Harborough dated 12 April.

Mr. Nicholas Scott [holding answer 26 May]: The figure of £2·5 million in observations on this petition for the first year cost at 1988 rates of paying pension increases to British pensioners in Canada was wrongly printed on the Order Paper as £25 million.

I regret that the figure of £2·5 million was itself incorrect. The cost has now been recalculated on the basis of statistics for December 1987 at which date the number of pensioners in Canada was 76,152. The current cost of the pensions payable to these pensioners is estimated, on the basis of a sample, to be approximately £61·5 million, while the cost if the pensions were not frozen would have been about £106 million before the last uprating. The hypothetical cost of the 1988 uprating has been calculated by applying this year's uprating factor of 4·2 per cent. to this nominal cost of £106 million, giving a figure of £4·4 million. This recosting also shows that to pay full United Kingdom rates of pension immediately to all British pensioners in Canada would cost an extra £48·6 million and to do the same for all pensioners abroad would cost about £205 million.

EMPLOYMENT

Age Discrimination

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, what guidance is given to jobcentres to discourage age discrimination by employers; what evidence there is that employers abide by requests not to indulge in such discrimination; and what plans he has to ensure that employees are employed on the basis of ability rather than date of birth.

Mr. Lee: Jobcentre staff are instructed to encourage employers, where appropriate, to remove or broaden age limits attached to notified vacancies. If an employer insists on an age limit the vacancy will be accepted, but jobcentre staff may subsequently approach the employer on behalf of an otherwise eminently suitable jobseeker who is outside the stated limits. Information is not available on the number of employers who accede to these requests.

The Government will continue to point out to employers that it is not in their interests to impose unnecessary age restrictions when recruiting staff.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list in the Official Report the number of employees in employment for each year since 1965, broken down into all manufacturing and non-manufacturing groups, for the north-west region and for England, together with the year-on-year percentage changes in employment patterns.

Mr. Lee: The Department's statistics are arranged according to the standard industrial classification 1980 and a consistent series is only available from June 1971. Figures prior to that date are classified according to the standard industrial classification 1968. The available information is as follows. The figures have not been adjusted for the effects of seasonal variations.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the percentage of (a) female and (b) male unemployment in 1985, 1986 and 1987 in each of the English regions.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. The table shows the average number of unemployed male and female claimants, seasonally adjusted and excluding school leavers, expressed as a percentage of the working population for each of the years requested and for each of the English regions.

Unemployed adult claimants: seasonally adjusted

Job Training Scheme

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the total cost of the job training scheme; and if he will also express this figure as a per capita cost of each (a) entrant to the job training scheme, (b) person leaving the job training scheme and (c) person obtaining a vocational qualification from the job training scheme.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 17 May 1988]: In 1987-88 the provisional total cost of the job training scheme, excluding administrative costs, was £64·7 million. On that basis, the per capita cost was £646 per entrant and £939 per leaver. Information on the per capita cost of people leaving the job training scheme with a vocational qualification is not available.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last discussed with the National Farmers Union the stewardship of ancient monuments and sites of special scientific interest on agricultural land.

Mr. Gummer: My officials and I are in frequent contact with the National Farmers Union to discuss a wide range of subjects, including the good stewardship of ancient monuments and sites of special scientific interest on agricultural land.

SCOTLAND

AIDS

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many babies born in Scotland were HIV positive at birth;

(2) how many babies have been born in Scotland to mothers who are HIV positive.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Babies are not routinely tested at birth for HIV antibodies. However, to the end of March 1988, reports had been received of a total of 66 infants-children, excluding haemophiliacs, born in Scotland, who have antibodies to HIV. Of this total, 38 were born to mothers who are known to be HIV positive.

Ministerial Replies

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what criteria are applied by his Department with regard to the disclosure to third parties of ministerial replies to hon. Members, without the consent of the hon. Member concerned.

Mr. Rifkind: I would hope to avoid disclosing to third parties any correspondence with an hon. Member which might cause him or his constituents embarrassment, for example because it dealt with personal matters or with other matters that had been raised on a confidential basis. But where a number of Members have written to me about an issue which has aroused wide interest, there have been occasions when copies of replies sent by me or on my behalf have been distributed quite widely. If a particular case is causing the hon. Member concern, he may care to write to me.

Housing (Shetland)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) whether he will publish in the Official Report a copy of the letter sent by the chairman of the Scottish Special Housing Association to him dated 20 April regarding the association's housing stock in Shetland;

(2) whether he has received a formal request from the chairman of the Scottish Special Housing Association for consent to the transfer to Shetland islands council of 55 of the association's houses in Shetland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The chairman of the Scottish Special Housing Association, Mr. Derek Mason, wrote to my right hon. and learned Friend on 20 April about the future ownership of the association's houses in Shetland, in the light of representations which had been made by a number of tenants, and I have replied to Mr. Mason's letter. It is not normal practice to publish correspondence between Government Ministers and chairmen of non-departmental public bodies.

As the hon. Member is aware, the original proposal put forward by the SSHA for the future of their housing stock in Shetland involved complete withdrawal from ownership. Tenants were offered the option of having their houses transferred into the ownership of Hjaltland housing association. If a majority of tenants had wished to pursue that option, the SSHA wished to be able to offer the remaining minority of tenants the option of having their houses transferred into the ownership of Shetland islands council.

Circumstances have changed. In the light of their tenants' views, the SSHA no longer plans complete withdrawal from Shetland. The question of sales to the islands council to facilitate that withdrawal no longer arises therefore. I understand that Mr. Mason is writing to all the association's tenants in Shetland, informing them of the position and explaining the background.

Maternity Units (Elgin)

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has now received from people in Moray about the case for retaining local general practitioners' maternity units and for establishing a specialist obstetric unit in Elgin.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend and I have received 62 representations from people in Moray about the future of maternity services provision there.

Education Reform

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report, the latest total number of representations he has received advising him of support for a provision for opting out within the Scottish school system, showing, where possible, where these representations have come from (a) recognised official organisations, or (b) individuals within each district council area.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have nothing to add to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Rutherglen (Mr. McAvoy) on 25 May at columns 185-86.

Dounreay (Leukaemia)

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the report by the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment on the incidence of leukaemia around Dounreay will be published.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The report has been published today and copies placed in the Library. The committee has emphasised both the small numbers of leukaemia cases involved, and that any conclusion based on these numbers must be subject to a degree of uncertainty. Nevertheless it concludes that there is evidence of a raised incidence of leukaemia among young people living in the vicinity of Dounreay. In the committee's view, this evidence, taken in conjunction with that relating to the area around Sellafield, tends to support the hypothesis that some feature of the two nuclear plants that the committee has examined leads to an increased risk of leukaemia in young people living in the vicinity of those plants.

The committee does, however, point out that conventional dose and risk estimates suggest that neither authorised nor accidental discharges could be responsible. Estimates of radiation doses to young people resident in Thurso have been made by the NRPB, on behalf of the committee. These estimates suggest that, using conventional dose modelling procedures, the risk attributable to the doses received by local young people from the discharges is very small indeed, being of the order of only 0·005 of a case.

The committee does, however note uncertainties about dose and risk calculations especially in respect to exposure of the foetus and small child. The report identifies a number of possible explanations, but does not point to any particular one, and therefore considers all possible explanations need to be investigated further. Recommendations for these further investigations are made.

The Government are grateful to the committee for its report. A great deal of work is already being done to investigate this problem. There are clearly uncertainties in relation to the causes of elevated rates of leukaemia which can occur in a variety of locations. The Government accept, in principle, all the committee's recommendations for further work. It is hoped that this work will advance our knowledge in this area.

The recommendations specific to Scotland are:

Recommendation 1
a retrospective case control study of leukaemia occurring in young people in Caithness in the period 1968-1986. This study is already underway;

Recommendation 4d
a detailed survey to identify the extent to which radioactive contamination is present in household dust in the Dounreay area. Plans are already being made on how best to carry out this survey;

Recommendation 2
birth cohort, and school cohort studies. Consideration is currently being given on how to undertake this last recommendation.

The other recommendations relate to various aspects of monitoring and research and the relevant United Kingdom Departments are considering how best to implement them.

Scottish Council for Voluntary Organisations

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has received regarding the reduction in grant to the Scottish Council for Voluntary Organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 27 May 1988]: I have received 64 representations, most of which clearly derive from contacts initiated by the council itself. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Renfrew, West and Inverclyde (Mr. Graham) on Tuesday 12 April at column 46.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Labour Market (Regions)

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect on the labour markets in the regions of recent economic trends.

Mr. Major: The recent favourable performance of the United Kingdom economy has benefited the labour market in all regions. Unemployment has fallen significantly in all regions over the past year.

Manufactures (World Trade)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current United Kingdom volume share of world trade in manufactures.

Mr. Major: In 1987 the estimated United Kingdom volume share of total world trade in manufactures was about 7½ per cent. As chart 3·5 in the FSBR shows this share has been broadly stable since 1981, after previous decades of decline.

Merseyside

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans his Department has to assist the economic development of Merseyside.

Mr. Major: The Government's economic policies, continued in my right hon. Friend's latest Budget, promote an environment for business to prosper and provide strong encouragement to economic development in all areas of the United Kingdom. Over the last year the north-west has seen one of the largest falls in unemployment in the United Kingdom.

Regions (Economic Development)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the differential impact of Government policy on economic development in the regions.

Mr. Major: The best way to encourage economic development in the regions is through sound economic policies, designed to promote healthy, non-inflationary growth in the national economy, backed up by an effective regional policy. These are the policies the Government are pursuing.

European Commission (Cash Position)

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the European Commission's latest cash position and the implications for the United Kingdom.

Mr. Brooke: The European Commission estimates that its spending obligations under provisional twelfths this month will exceed the available resources. The Commission has informed us that it expects to have to overdraw its accounts with member states in accordance with article 12(2) of Council regulation 2891/77. The amount involved for the United Kingdom is expected to be of the order of £98 million. As I explained to the House on 19 May at column 1151 the Government are obliged to meet an article 12(2) request provided it is genuinely needed to cover a prospective cash deficit and provided that it would not involve exceeding the own resources known to be available for the year. We will accordingly meet this request directly from the Consolidated Fund, in accordance with section 2(3) of the European Communities Act 1972. Repayment of any drawing under this facility will be made by deduction from future own resources payments.

The article 12(2) facility does not affect the total amount which the Community is authorised to spend during the year. The Commission's request does not, therefore, involve any net addition to public expenditure.

Civil Servants (Northern Ireland)

Mr. McCusker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Home Civil Service staff are employed by United Kingdom Government Departments in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 7 June 1988]: Five thousand and one, as at 1 April 1987. In addition there were some 29,500 staff in the Northern Ireland Civil Service.

Departmental Officials (Language Qualifications)

Mr. Holland: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many of his officials at administrative grade are qualified, respectively, at (a) O level, (b) A or S level, (c) diploma and (d) university degree level in (i) French and (ii) another European Community language; and what procedures are operated by his Department to ensure that documents of the European Communities placed before the House are properly translated.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 7 June 1988]: Qualifications in French and other European Community languages held by Treasury staff are as follows:

	French	Other Community language
O-level	212	67
A/S level	89	54
Diploma	—	—
University degree	12	8

The figures for O and A-levels take no account of qualifications held by those whose schooldays predate the GCE. Responsibility for the translation of European Community documents placed before the House rests with the Commission and Council Secretariat of the European Communities.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Hong Kong (Expo 1997)

10. Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support he is giving to the proposal that Hong Kong should host Expo 1997; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We are aware of interest in Hong Kong in the idea of a world exhibition in 1997. Discussions are still at a very preliminary stage.

Namibia (South African Troops)

14. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he intends to take to encourage an early withdrawal of South African troops from Namibia.

Mrs. Chalker: We shall continue to press South Africa to agree to the implementation of United Nations Security Council resolution 435. We believe that the current United States-led negotiations offer the best prospect of such a settlement.

Falkland Islands (Ministerial Visits)

15. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what visits have been made by Foreign Office Ministers to the Falklands since 1979.

Mr. Eggar: Since 1979 there have been eight visits by Ministers at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

China

16. Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further steps he is taking to improve the United Kingdom's relations with China.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Relations between Her Majesty's Government and China are good. We were pleased to entertain Mr. Wu Xuegian in March and I met the new Foreign Minister Mr. Qian Qichen at the United Nations yesterday.

Hong Kong (Basic Law)

Mrs. Chalker: Some progress has been made to alleviate the consequences of the city's division. Mrs. Chalker: We are not directly involved in the talks.

95. Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current level of British Government assistance to the Government of Angola; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: Expenditure under the bilateral aid programme for Angola in 1988-89 is expected to amount to about £400,000 mainly on English language teaching and teacher education and training projects locally, and on training in Britain. I have also approved this year contributions of £820,000 towards UNICEF activities in Angola and £750,000 for emergency relief operations. We now look forward to developing this co-operation still further in such areas as the creation of the EC single market by 1992 and our defence relationship within the Alliance.

Gulf War (Shipping)

65. Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what protests have been made by Her Majesty's Government to the Iraqi authorities concerning the bombing of neutral ships in the Gulf.

Mr. Mellor: We have protested to both Iraq and Iran on a number of occasions about attacks on neutral shipping in the Gulf which we regard as unlawful and in contravention of mandatory UNSCR 598. The last occasion was on 18 May when the Iraqi ambassador was summoned to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to receive a protest following the Iraqi attack on 14 May on a British-registered tanker—the Burmah Endeavour.

83. Mr. Dennis Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British seamen have been killed or injured in attacks on shipping in the Persian Gulf.

Mr. Mellor: It is not possible to give definitive figures. 71. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what account is taken in the conduct of foreign policy of the volume of trade between the United Kingdom and other countries; and how this is reflected in current relations with (a) Europe and (b) the Commonwealth.

Mrs. Chalker: The overall objective of our relations with any country in Europe, the Commonwealth or elsewhere, is to enhance the security and prosperity of the United Kingdom. Mr. Eggar: We understand that budgetary difficulties may lead to restrictions on the scale of activities of the Guatemalan human rights procurator although we have no information suggesting the complete closure of his office. The procurator is funded by the Guatemalan Congress and not the Government. It would be inappropriate for us to become involved in an internal Guatemalan budgetary issue.

East-West Relations

75. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what factors are currently influencing East-West relations.

Mr. Mellor: Stability and mutual understanding in East-West relations are developing well, on the basis of the West's strong and united stance. The Soviet Union is increasingly willing to acknowledge its past mistakes and the need for change abroad to match that at home. We welcome this, but look forward to further progress in arms control, particularly in the conventional and chemical weapons fields, in the peaceful settlement of regional conflicts and in respect for human rights.

Much however remains to be done in the fields of arms control, particularly the conventional imbalance, the settlement of regional conflicts and human rights. The United States-Soviet summit in Moscow was a further major contribution to the maintenance of a stable and predictable United States-Soviet and wider East-West relationship.

My right hon. and learned Friend delivered the United Kingdom national statement on 7 June and a copy of this has been placed in the Library of the House. We are looking for balanced and constructive discussion of all aspects of arms control and disarmament and look forward to a final document which reflects this.

United Kingdom (International Organisations)

87. Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has made any assessment of the United Kingdom's membership of international organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: United Kingdom membership of the majority of international organisations is naturally governed by international law but subject to these constraints our position is under continuous review.

Common European Foreign Policies

89. Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 4 May, Official Report, column 459, what specific subjects he expects to be raised when he next meets his European Community partners on 13 June to discuss development of common European foreign policies.

We are concerned about Czechoslovakia's failure to honour all its commitments in the field of human rights. However, we continue to attach importance to relations with Czechoslovakia. I plan to visit Prague in June, and look forward to a full discussion of all aspects of our relations.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: We continue to work for the convening of an international conference as a framework for negotiations to resolve the conflict and we urge all parties to respond positively to Secretary Shultz's continuing initiative.

Anglo-South Africa Relations

99. Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further measures he is considering to improve Anglo-South Africa relations.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer my hon. Friend to the speech my right hon. and learned Friend made on 17 May to the Royal Commonwealth Society, a copy of which has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

French Revolution (Bicentenary Painting)

100. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give details of any communications he or his Department has had with the French Government concerning the cancellation of the work of the Scottish artist, Ian Hamilton Finlay commissioned by the French Government to commemorate the bicentenary of the French Revolution; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We have had no formal contact with the French Government about this matter, although we have been following it closely. I understand that the French Ministry of Culture had written to Mr. Ian Hamilton Finlay with a detailed explanation of its decision.

British Hostages (Lebanon)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action is being taken by Her Majesty's Government in respect of the disappearance in the Lebanon of Mr. Terry Waite and Mr. John McCarthy.

Mr. Mellor: We continue to call on those Governments or organisations with influence over the hostage-takers to use their influence to secure the unconditional release of those held. We follow up every lead in the search for news of our hostages. Her Majesty's embassy in Beirut is doing all it can, in very difficult circumstances. We also remain in touch with middle eastern and other Governments.

European Council of Ministers (Meetings)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will next be attending a European Council of Ministers meeting; and what subjects he expects to discuss.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I expect to attend the next Foreign Affairs Council in Luxembourg on 13-14 June. The agenda includes items on Community financing, the Lomé convention, food aid, dates for next year's European Parliament elections and relations with CMEA and EFTA countries. The full agenda has been deposited in the Library of the House.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Fair Employment

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Department of Foreign Affairs of the Irish Republic made representations to the Government of the United Kingdom on behalf of persons holding membership of the Fair Employment Trust against whom action had been instituted by the Housing Executive; and what responses were made by the Government to such representations.

Mr. Needham: Any such exchanges, as is usual with communications between Governments, would be confidential. But in the case to which I believe the hon. Lady refers, I understand from the Housing Executive, which is responsible for the recruitment and management of its own staff, that no punitive action has been instituted in respect of the two persons concerned.

Development (Newtownards)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made to ensure that the new development adjacent to 35 Ballygeleagh road, Kircubbin, Newtownards complies with the conditions of its planning permission; what further action he proposes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: Apart from the failure to erect a screen fence which was required as a condition, the new development has been carried out in accordance with the planning permission granted on 17 July 1987. The Department of the Environment (Northern Ireland), as planning authority, has taken action to secure the erection of the fence. However, the developer has indicated that he wishes to apply for planning permission for the removal of the fencing condition.

Boards (Elected Representatives)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any plans to increase the number of elected representatives on Government boards in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: My right hon. Friend has no current plans to do so.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any plans to increase the number of elected representatives on education boards to the point where they no longer form a minority of members.

Dr. Mawhinney: No.

Hospitals

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide an estimate of the cost of employing a project manager, commissioning engineer, commissioning nurse, and commissioning supplies officer to form the core of a commissioning team for the proposed Antrim area hospital.

Mr. Needham: The estimated cost of employing the core commissioning team at 1987-88 pay and prices levels is £95,150 a year. It is expected that the team will be required for approximately three years.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide details of the number of hospital beds available in hospitals in East Antrim, by hospital, for each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Needham: The available information is as follows:

Average available beds 1980-87 for hospitals in East Antrim

Labour Statistics

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons are presently employed in manufacturing industries; and how many of these are employed by employers from the United States of America.

Mr. Viggers: At December 1987 (the latest date for which figures are available) there were 101,810 employees in employment in manufacturing in Northern Ireland. At present United States-owned companies account for 10,136 employees in manufacturing industries.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons are presently in full employment; and how many of these employees are employed by employers from the United States of America.

Mr. Viggers: Information on full-time and part-time employment is obtained from the census of employment, held every three years. The most recent census results available relate to September 1984. At that time there were 392,925 full-time employees in employment in Northern Ireland. Numbers of full-time employees in United States-owned companies on a comparable basis to this figure are not available.

Newtownards (Parking Places)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to provide additional parking places in Newtownards which will be (a) free and (b) pay parking.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 7 June 1988]: The Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland is currently negotiating to purchase the old gasworks site in Mill street, Newtownards to construct a new 208-space car park. No decision on charging will be taken until it is purchased and is fully operational.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his reply of 6 May, Official Report, columns 615-16, how many free parking places there are at present in Newtownards; and how many free parking places there will be after the introduction of parking charges in the towns.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 7 June 1988]: The Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland currently provides approximately 530 free off-street parking spaces in Newtownards. In addition there are approximately 900 on-street parking spaces available. After the introduction of parking charges in the town approximately 200 off-street parking spaces will remain free in addition to the on-street parking.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to allow Ards borough council authority to provide (a) free car parks and (b) pay car parks in Newtownards.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 7 June 1988]: The Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland is the sole road authority in Northern Ireland and has no statutory powers to enable the borough council to provide town centre parking in Newtownards.

Urban Development Grant

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what was the total allocation of funds under the urban development grant for Armagh;

(2) how many applications have been made for funding under the urban development grant for the town of Newry; how many of these applications have been successful; and what is the total sum paid to date on the successful applications;

(3) how many applications have been made for funding under the urban development grant for Armagh city; how many of these applications have been successful; and what is the total sum paid to date on the successful applications;

(4) what has been the total cost to date of the administration of the urban development grant in Northern Ireland;

(5) what was the total allocation of funds under the urban development grant for Newry;

(6) how many applications have been received for funding under the urban development grant scheme for each of the designated district towns in Northern Ireland; how many have been successful for each town; and what is the total sum which has been allocated to these successful applications in each designated town.

Mr. Needham [holding answers 7 June 1988]: These are matters for the board of the International Fund for Ireland. I have arranged to have the questions referred to the chairman.

Nursing Home Residents (Financial Assistance)

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what financial assistance is available from the Department of Health and Social Services for elderly people resident in private nursing homes.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 7 June 1988]: Patients in private nursing homes whose capital does not exceed £6,000 may have their income including, for example, retirement pension and attendance allowance, supplemented by income support up to a maximum of £230 a week, depending on the type of care involved, to enable them to contribute to the cost of their maintenance. A personal expenses allowance of £9.55 a week is also payable.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what additional financial assistance is available from the Department of Health and Social Services for elderly people currently resident in private nursing homes where the fees are in excess of the assistance currently available under income support regulations, particularly in areas where there are no beds available in area health board nursing homes.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 7 June 1988]: None. However, health and social services boards have general responsibility for the welfare of persons in need including the accommodation needs of those elderly people who are unable to meet the financial charges for private nursing home care.

Milk Quotas

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what benefits are available from the Department of Health and Social Services to farmers who have no income for varying periods of time as a result of having exceeded their allocated milk quotas.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 7 June 1988]: Farmers who work at least 24 hours a week on average may be eligible for family credit provided that they have at least one dependent child. Income support may be payable to those who work for less than 24 hours on average. Housing benefit may also be available to farmers, regardless of the number of hours worked, and they may be eligible for help with, for example, prescription and other Health Service charges. Social fund crisis loans may be considered for immediate short-term needs in an emergency where a loan is the only means of avoiding serious damage or serious risk to the health or safety of the applicant or a member of the family.

Newry and Armagh (Street Lighting)

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total expenditure by the Department of the Environment on street lighting in the constituency of Newry and Armagh in the years 1984-85, 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 7 June 1988]: Figures for street lighting expenditure by the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland are held by district council area and not by constituency as requested.

Total expenditure for the district council areas of Armagh and Newry and Mourne, including the council electoral areas, The Fews, Crotlieve and the Mournes wholly or partly outside the constituency of Newry and Armagh, was as follows:

1984-85	652,000
1985-86	707,000
1986-87	724,000
1987-88	816,000

AI Services (N.I.) Society Ltd

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his reply of 11 May, how much AI Services (N.I.) Society Ltd. paid for his Department's assets; and whether this was the highest offer received for the assets.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 7 June 1988]: Negotiations are presently under way with AI Services (N.I.) Society Ltd. on the terms and conditions for acquisition of the assets of the Department of Agriculture's AI service. As stated in the reply of 11 May, the grant of the licence to provide an AI service was not conditional on acquisition of the Department's assets and offers were not sought from applicants for the assets.

Crime Statistics

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons were charged with non-scheduled offences; how many were charged with scheduled offences; and how many persons were found not guilty of all or some of the offences with which they were charged in each six-month period of 1987.

Mr. Stanley [holding answer 26 May 1988]: Statistics are not available in the precise form requested. The number of persons tried in the Crown court for scheduled and non-scheduled offences and the number of those people found not guilty of all offences in each half of 1987 were as follows:

	First half	Second half
Numbers tried
(a) Non-scheduled offences	689	504
(b) Scheduled offences	397	316
Numbers found not guilty of all offences
(a) Non-scheduled offences	47	28

Security Forces (Offences)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list separately for the Royal Ulster Constabulary and Reserve, the Ulster Defence Regiment and Army, the number of members and ex-members of these forces charged with and the number convicted of, scheduled offences committed, or allegedly committed, by members of the security forces while using firearms, for each year since 1969.

Mr. Stanley [holding answer 26 May 1988]: Comprehensive records of security forces personnel convicted of offences involving the use of firearms were not kept before 1980. Details of the numbers charged with scheduled offences involving the use of firearms are not available, but the information about convictions for such offences is as follows:

Number of convictions[1] of members of the security forces where firearms were used

	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987	[2]1988

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Teachers' Pay and Conditions

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he will be in a position to publish his proposals for teachers' negotiating machinery for pay and conditions of service.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has received various responses from interested parties to the Green Paper "Teachers' Pay and Conditions: A Consultative Document". He will be undertaking discussions with those parties in the course of the next few months.

Burnage High School

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway) of 23 May, Official Report, column 13, he has now obtained a complete copy of the MacDonald inquiry into Burnage high school; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I have received a copy of the published report from Manchester city council and have placed copies in the Library. I have not seen a copy of the complete text. I consider that the report raises issues of public interest and should be published in full, unless the council can demonstrate overwhelming arguments to the contrary. I do not believe that considered conclusions can be drawn on the basis of the present severely foreshortened report. Accordingly I have asked the council for a clear statement of the specific difficulties which it sees in publishing the report in full and why these cannot be met if necessary by excising only particular and limited passages.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Nicaragua

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing in ranked order the contributions, as a percentage of their total aid budget, made by the development assistance committee donor countries to Nicaragua, for the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Chris Patten: Net official development assistance from Development Assistance Committee donor countries to Nicaragua in 1986 as a percentage of their total official development assistance was as follows:

Donor	per cent.
Finland	2·28
Sweden	1·61
Norway	1·44
Netherlands	1·10
Switzerland	0·86
Austria	0·65
Italy	0·57
Denmark	0·46
France	0·28
Canada	0·25
Germany	0·21
Belgium	0·12
Australia	0·01
United Kingdom	0·01
Japan	0·00

Source: DAC Chairman's report

The figures are based on bilateral aid to Nicaragua as a percentage of each donor's total bilateral plus multilateral aid. The United Kingdom's share of multilateral, mainly European Community, aid to Nicaragua in 1985, the latest year for which this figure is available, amounted to about 0·2 per cent. of our total aid; statistics are not available which would show the amount which other DAC countries provided to Nicaragua through multilateral channels.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Social Security Commissioners

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Attorney-General how many days on average each social security commissioner has conducted oral hearings in (a) London, (b) Edinburgh, (c) Northern Ireland and (d) Cardiff (non-resident) in the period from January to the end of April 1988.

The Attorney-General: The table shows the average number of days over that period on which each of the resident commissioners conducted oral hearings in each of the places mentioned, except for Cardiff for which the table shows the average number of days on which each of the visiting, non-resident commissioners conducted oral hearings.

	London	Edinburgh	Northern Ireland	Cardiff
Number of resident commissioners	13	2	2	0[1]
Total number of days devoted to oral hearings	54	12	9	9·5
Average number of days on which each resident commissioner conducted oral hearings	4·15	6	4·5	2·38[2]

[1] Over the period, four different commissioners visited Cardiff from London to conduct oral hearings as required.
[2] This figure is reached by dividing the total number of days by the number of non-resident commissioners who sat at Cardiff over the period, that is 9·5/4.

"Spycatcher"

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Attorney-General if, in the light of the judgment of the High Court in Australia, he will give the latest total amount spent by Her Majesty's Government on all aspects, including legal, travelling, administrative and other costs, relating to the Government's legal action on "Spycatcher" in the United Kingdom and elsewhere.

The Attorney-General: The total amount expended to date on legal costs both here and abroad in respect of litigation and advice and on travelling and subsistence is about £848,000. To seek to quantify administrative costs would involve disproportionate expense.

TRANSPORT

Driving Instructors Licences

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information his Department holds on the numbers of approved driving instructors licences issued for each of the last 10 years; and at what level of regional disaggregation this information is available.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The national figures for the numbers of approved driving instructors on the Department's compulsory register and for the numbers of trainee licences to give instruction are as follows:

	ADIs at year end	Trainee licences issued
1977	20,897	4,355
1978	21,670	5,358
1979	22,511	5,635
1980	23,562	5,414
1981	25,098	5,496
1982	26,101	5,054
1983	26,942	5,142
1984	28,090	5,643
1985	28,675	4,203
1986	30,069	2,350
1987	31,336	2,518
[1]1988	32,090	1,377

[1] To May.
Regional figures are not available.

Plutonium

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what requirements have recently been imposed by (a) the United States Government and (b) the international Atomic Energy Agency regarding the transport of plutonium by air.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member for Brent, East (Mr. Livingstone) on 1 February 1988, at column 509.

Motorways (Double-decking)

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans for double-decking motorways.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: None at present.

Road Schemes (Specifications)

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those road schemes which have been built to the same specification as the M25 between Leatherhead and Reigate and identify any defects in the concrete construction of these carriageways which required rectification.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information requested, for national roads, is as follows:

Road constructed in C40 concrete (jointed unreinforced)

M25 Leatherhead-Reigate	July 1984-May 1985	4·80	142 full depth cracks 73 mid-bay cracks 4 longitudinal cracks 7,632 joint arris spalling

Road Construction Contracts (Consulting Engineers)

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made on the proposed introduction of the changes in the role of the consulting engineer in motorway and trunk road construction contracts which he announced in the House on 23 July 1987, Official Report, column 288-89.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Details of the proposed amendments to the conditions of contract to give effect to the changes have recently been sent to the professional bodies for comment. The proposals maintain an important role for the consulting engineer, within a framework which places responsibility for major decisions on the Department as employer. Initially, the Department plans to let three contracts under the new arrangements, for which tenders are expected to be invited this autumn.

M25 (Leatherhead-Reigate)

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he is now in a position to make a statement on the progress made in establishing responsibility for the issues arising out of the construction of the M25 between Leatherhead and Reigate.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We have commissioned a leading consulting and testing engineer to undertake an independent investigation of the important and complex issues underlying the views reached by the engineer to this contract. The investigation will cover other concrete roads built to the same specification, which have apparently not suffered from such extensive problems. We expect to reach a view on the question of responsibility by about the end of the year.

Traffic Counts

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the highest traffic count of (a) all vehicles and (b) heavy commercial vehicles on urban roads that has been reported to his Department in the last two years; what was the date of the count; and where was the road.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [pursuant to his reply, 25 March 1988, c. 267-68]: I made a mistake in my answer. The information given regarding the highest "all vehicle" traffic count on a built-up road in 1987 was incorrect. The highest recorded 12-hour count was:

	Date of count	12-hour count	Road	Location	Grid reference
All vehicles	13 April 1987	64,874 (64,952 including pedal-cycles)	A4	Great-West Road Chiswick West London	52001780

The correct count at Woodford new road was 36,690 rather than the 73,380 quoted. I apologise for the error.

ENERGY

Plutonium (Shipments)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many shipments of plutonium have taken place (a) by air from and (b) by surface, within the United Kingdom, over the past two years; and if he will give details of airports and routes used.

Mr. Michael Spicer: For consignments of plutonium by air, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 16 February 1988 at column 592. Plutonium is normally sent from Carlisle airport but small samples for safeguards purposes go from Manchester airport.

Surface consignments are primarily shipments from Dounreay to Sellafield. For this I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Member for Hampshire, North-West (Mr. Mitchell) to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Dr. Thomas) on 9 March 1988 at column 205-206.

Information relating to such movements over a short period and to specific shipments is confidential, for reasons of security and commercial sensitivity.

THORP

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when it is expected that THORP will begin commercial scale reprocessing; and what its expected lifetime will be.

Mr. Michael Spicer: THORP is expected to begin commercial reprocessing in late 1992. The lifetime of the plant will be governed by a combination of economic, commercial and operational factors. Experience of other reprocessing plants suggests that THORP can be expected to operate well into the second decade of the 21st century.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has as to what countries currently send spent fuel to Sellafield for reprocessing; what countries are expected to use THORP; and what countries are currently in negotiations for its use.

Mr. Michael Spicer: British Nuclear Fuels plc currently receives spent magnox fuel from Italy and Japan. Utilities in the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Japan, Netherlands, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland have entered into contracts for reprocessing in THORP. Ongoing negotiations with potential customers are commercially confidential.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he plans any future initiatives to promote energy efficiency in the home; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My Department's Energy Efficiency Office, in collaboration with the Building Societies Association, is now launching a new initiative to help building societies to promote energy efficiency to their customers.

For the purpose of this initiative, the Energy Efficiency Office and the Building Societies Association have together published a new leaflet, "Monergy in Your New Home", which building societies will be able to make available to their new and existing borrowers. The leaflet gives basic information on energy efficiency measures and finance, and invites the householder to ask the Energy Efficiency Office for a monergy pack. The pack gives more detailed advice, including a home energy survey checklist and a set of energy saving guides. I am placing a copy of the leaflet and the pack in the Library of the House.

I very much welcome this new initiative, and I am grateful to the Building Societies Association and the participating building societies for making it possible.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what arrangements have been made in preparing the Central Electricity Generating Board for privatisation.

Mr. Peter Morrison: In his statement to the House on 25 February at column 454, my right hon. Friend set out the Government's proposals for the privatisation of the electricity supply industry in England and Wales. Subject to the passage of the appropriate legislation, it is his intention to make the following appointments to the companies which will emerge from the Central Electricity Generating Board.

The first company will own some 70 per cent. of the CEGB's generating capacity, both fossil-fuelled and nuclear. Lord Marshall, chairman of the CEGB, is also to be chairman-designate of this new company and Mr. John Baker, managing director of the CEGB, is to be the chief executive-designate.

The second new generating company will own the remaining 30 per cent. of the CEGB's capacity, all of it non-nuclear. Mr Robert Malpas CBE, currently a managing director of BP, will be taking up the appointment of chairman-designate of this company when he leaves BP in mid-1989. Between now and then he will be available for consultation. Mr. Ed Wallis, presently director of operations for the CEGB, is to be the chief executive-designate of the new company.

The chairman-designate of the national grid company is to be Mr. David Jefferies, the current deputy chairman of the Electricity Council. The chief executive-designate is to be Mr. Bill Kerss at present deputy chairman of the South Wales electricity board.

The chairmen and chief executives-designate will be involved in the work which is now beginning within the CEGB to plan for the transfer of the existing business to the new companies once the legislation to restructure and privatise the industry has been approved.

Energy Efficiency Office

Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he is in a position to announce his decision on the future role of the Energy Efficiency Office.

Mr. Peter Morrison [pursuant to his reply 22 January 1988, c. 885-86]: As I indicated in my answer of 22 January at columns 885-86, consumers are now well aware of the case for energy efficiency. The Energy Efficiency Office is therefore entering a fresh phase. I have decided that its aims will now be to run specific and targeted services backed by technical support, including guidance on the use of the energy efficiency industries; and to ensure that builders and property managers have the necessary technical advice.

Accordingly, from 1989-90, the main areas of the EEO's work will be:

(a) a better regional service offering specific advice and RD and D support to industrial and commercial firms;
(b) continuing support for community insulation projects targeted on pensioners and low income households;
(c) new ways of improving the energy efficiency of housing.

As part of the conclusion of the first phase of the EEO's work, I have decided to bring an end to the energy efficiency survey scheme. There is now wide public appreciation of the potential value of energy surveys, and grants for this purpose are no longer justified. Applications for approval to undertake a survey under the scheme will therefore be considered only if they are received by 24 June 1988.

WALES

Local Education Authorities

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to enable local education authorities in Wales to have the freedom to experiment with new concepts and ideas that are not imposed by the centre, consequent upon his statement to the Welsh Grand Committee on 25 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend has no plans to prevent them from so experimenting. The Education Reform Bill proposes specific powers to enable him to disapply or modify the national curriculum requirements in a school for the purpose of development or experiment.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Manufactured Goods

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the latest balance of trade in manufactured goods.

Mr. Alan Clark: In the first four months of 1988, there was an estimated deficit on trade in manufactures of £3·9 billion.

Citizens Advice Bureaux

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many citizens advice bureaux have legal aid panels.

Mr. Butcher: I understand that about 450 of the 74 main citizens advice bureaux in the United Kingdom currently operate solicitors' rota schemes. Another eight bureaux directly employ salaried lawyers.

Volume Car Production

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what estimate he has made of the trend in volume car production over the next five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: There are no official estimates available.

Tropical Forests

Ms. Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) if the Government are proposing or supporting any special projects related to tropical forest conservation at the forthcoming meeting of the International Tropical Timber Organisation Council session, 22 June to 1 July, in Rio de Janeiro;

(2) when he last met representatives of the International Tropical Timber Organisation; what support has been given to the International Tropical Timber Organisation in its administration of funding for tropical reforestation, conservation and management of tropical forests and market research relating to the international trade in tropical hardwoods; and if he will make a statement;

(3) pursuant to the answer of 21 April, Official Report, column 534, what further action he has taken to implement a code of conduct for the international tropical timber trade; and if he will take steps to ensure that the conservation of tropical forests and their genetic resources will be an essential prerequisite for the future development of the international tropical timber trade.

Mr. Atkins: We will be represented at the forthcoming council session of the International Tropical Timber Organisation, which is expected to discuss the organisation's future role and work programme, including project assessment. We are currently considering our position on the various questions raised as we prepare for this meeting.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the division of responsibility between the Department of Trade and Industry and the Overseas Development Administration with regard to the International Tropical Timber Organisation, particularly in relation to the tropical forestry action plan.

Mr. Atkins: The International Tropical Timber Organisation was established under what is primarily a trade-related commodity agreement; the Department of Trade and Industry has lead responsibility, particularly on trade-related matters. The Overseas Development Administration is responsible for the tropical forestry action plan, co-ordinated by the Food and Agriculture Organisation. The TFAP's overall framework for action in the field of tropical forestry extends to such areas as forestry and land use, conservation and fuel and energy. The tropical timber agreement requires the ITTO to avoid duplication of efforts and co-operate with United Nations organisations such as the FAO. We would expect to see this reflected in the ITTO's future activities.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Ms. Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what specific initiatives his Department has already taken and plans to take, in support of the Montreal protocol for reducing the production of chlorofluorocarbons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The Secretary of State for the Environment has lead policy responsibility in respect of the United Kingdom's obligations under the Montreal protocol, in consultation with my right hon. and noble Friend.

Her Majesty's Government were an initial signatory to the protocol last September and have actively participated in the subsequent discussions on the proposed EC implementing measures, in particular the provisions relating to the scheduled freeze and cuts in production and consumption, and to identify scope for substitutes and increased opportunities for recycling and recovery. We are also supporting the initiatives being taken by industry at a European level to reduce dependance on these chemicals.

Foxley Wood Planning Inquiry

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if his Department's submission to the Foxley wood planning inquiry in Hampshire represents his policy in respect of proposals for large-scale housing developments in the south and south-east of England.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: My Department does not have policies in respect of housing developments in south-east England or anywhere else. Whether the Department considers it has something to contribute depends on the merits of each case.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will publish his Department's submission to the planning inquiry being held into the housing proposals at Foxley wood, Hampshire.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Under normal DOE procedures, copies have been sent to the appellant and to the local authority. In addition I have arranged for a copy of the submission to be placed in the Library of the House.

Film Industry

Mr. Dixon: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are the implications for his policy towards the future of the film industry of the reference to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission of alleged restrictive labour practices in that industry.

Mr. Maude: The reference is intended to establish whether certain specified restrictive labour practices exist in the broadcasting and film industries and, if so, whether they operate against the public interest. The Government will consider whether action is appropriate in the light of the MMC's report.

Insurance Brokers Registration Council

Mr. Page: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he will make a statement on the position of the Insurance Brokers Registration Council as a recognised professional body under the Financial Services Act.

Mr. Maude: Recognition of professional bodies under the Financial Services Act is a matter for the Securities and Investments Board. In January the board made an interim recognition order in respect of the council pending the making and coming into effect of the council's new rules on investment business. An order approving the Insurance Brokers Registration Council (Conduct of Investment Business) Rules 1988 has been laid before Parliament and copies of the rules have been placed in the Library. The order and with it the rules will come into effect on 21 June 1988.

Tin Mining (Cornwall)

Mr. Harris: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, if he will make a statement on the current position of the Rio Tinto Zinc Corporation plc tin mining operations in Cornwall.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursant to his answer, 22 March 1988.]: The loan of £15 million offered in 1986 to Carnon Consolidated Ltd., then a subsidiary of RTZ Corporation plc, is repayable in the years 1996-2001. The loan of £10 million offered this year to Carnon Holdings Ltd., (the new parent company of Carnon Consolidated Ltd.) replaces guarantees of £10 million commercial loans under the 1986 offer. This loan is repayable from 1993 onwards. Both loans are interest-free and both are linked to capital expenditure. Repayments of both loans are related to the after-tax profits of the preceding year above a minimum level. There are provisions for repayments to be waived if profits are insufficient.

Companies Registration Office

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the proposed increase in the charge for searches at the Companies Registration Office and as to why the request for a duplicate of the roll film of information received at the office each day as a cost-effective service to the public and to the Companies Registration Office was not accepted.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 7 June 1988]: The proposed increase in the fee for searches at the Companies Registration Offices is intended to ensure that the full cost of providing this service is met by those using it. The Registrar of Companies has been discussing with major users the possibility of supplying them with roll film copies of company documents and expects to write to them shortly about such a service.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many searches were undertaken by the Companies Registration Office during 1987 on behalf of Government and other public authorities listed as major users.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 7 June 1988]: No Government Department or other public authority is among the major users of search facilities at the Companies Registration Offices. In 1987, some 170,000 searches were carried out for the CROs' own working purposes and those of other parts of the Department of Trade and Industry. Searches for other Government Departments and other public authorities attract the normal search fee and are therefore not always separately identified, but total at least 70,000.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Value Added Tax

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of businesses with a turnover of £250,000 or less are currently subject to a surcharge as a result of late submission of their quarterly value added tax returns.

Mr. Lilley: Customs do not keep separate surcharge statistics for businesses with a turnover of £250,000 or less.

At the end of May 1988 approximately 20 per cent. of all businesses registered for VAT were in receipt of extant surcharge liability notices. About half of these had not yet incurred a surcharge.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the nature of representations he has received from small businesses concerning the restriction on companies taking advantage of the new instalment system for value added tax payments to those which are up to date on payments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: No such representations have been received.

Consumer Credit

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the rate of growth in consumer credit over the past year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: In the 12 months to 31 March 1988, the amount outstanding on all consumer credit agreements rose by 18·1 per cent.

CIVIL SERVICE

Staff Exchanges

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what was the level of interchange between the Civil Service and industry and commerce in 1987.

Mr. Luce: Returns from Departments show that there were 278 outward and 195 inward secondments in 1987, a total of 473. This is more than double the figure in 1979 and is 1 per cent. higher than in 1986. The figure for secondments to other bodies rose by 5 per cent.

I welcome this high level of interchange and will be reviewing ways of strengthening the links still further. A copy of the 1987 interchange report has been placed in both Libraries of Parliament.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Litter-related Offences

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions were made for each of the last five years in (i) the United Kingdom, by region, and (ii) Basildon for litter-related offences; and how much was recovered in fines.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information available to me, which may be incomplete, is brought together in the following tables. Data is not collected centrally on moneys recovered in fines for individual offences.

[2] Data is not collected centrally for Basildon alone but for the whole of the Billericay petty sessional division.
[3] Figures are those recorded centrally and are approximate: detailed checking of individual cases would involve disproportionate cost.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders already convicted of litter-related offences were (a) re-prosecuted and (b) re-convicted at later dates for similar offences in the United Kingdom, by region, and in Basildon, in each of the last five years.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions there were for litter-related offences on British Rail property for each of the last five years;

(2) how many (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions there were for litter-related offences for each of the last five years for each of the United Kingdom's national parks.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested is not available. Details of the precise location of such offences are not collected centrally.

Industrial Waste

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions there were in connection with the illegal dumping of industrial waste (i) in rivers and seas and (ii) by other methods in the United Kingdom, by region, and in Basildon for each of the last five years.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is not possible to distinguish prosecutions for the unlawful disposal of industrial waste from the records of court proceedings held centrally.

Isle of Man, Guernsey and Jersey

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provisions of the single European market in 1992 will apply to (a) the Isle of Man, (b) Guernsey and (c) Jersey; and under what powers.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The provisions of the treaty of Rome which apply to the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man are governed by articles 25-27 and protocol 3 to the treaty of accession. Provisions for achieving the completion of the internal market will apply to the islands only within this framework. They are primarily concerned with the harmonisation of custom controls and the free movement of agricultural and animal produce.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the arrangements for the issue of the common European passport in (a) the Isle of Man, (b) Guernsey and (c) Jersey; and how this will affect the right of movement, work and abode in the United Kingdom and other European countries of residents of the islands.

Mr. Renton: Passports will continue to be issued in the islands through the lieutenants-governor in exercise of the royal prerogative. The common format passport, which is not a European Community passport as such, will merely bring about changes in form to the present passport. The status, entitlements and privileges of the holder are in no way affected.

Immigration

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether there will be any change to the scope of the definition of public funds, as contained in the statement of changes in immigration rules July 1985, when the wording is revised to take into account the Social Security Act 1986.

Mr. Renton: There will be a slight change of scope but only insofar as family credit and income support, which are to be included in the definition, do not cover precisely the same ground as supplementary benefit and family income supplement, which they replace.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the revised definition of public funds in the statement of changes in immigration rules July 1985 will allow overseas students to be exempt from 80 per cent. of the community charge, on the same basis as students from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Renton: Yes, in that whatever criteria are decided for this concession will apply equally to overseas and home students.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cost to a person appealing against the decision of an entry clearance officer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: There is no charge for exercising any statutory right of appeal provided under the Immigration Act 1971.

Residence Periods

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if there has been any change in the period of residence in the United Kingdom required before indefinite leave to remain can be granted at the discretion of his Department.

Mr. Renton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to a question from the hon. Member for Norwood (Mr. Fraser) on 5 November 1987, at columns 833-34. There have been no subsequent changes.

Haverigg Prison, Millom

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Copeland of 17 December 1987, Official Report, column 626, he will publish the report and recommendations of the inquiry into security arrangements at Haverigg prison, Millom, Cumbria;

(2) if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Copeland of 17 December 1987, Official Report, column 626, he will state whether any security arrangements have been changed at Haverigg prison, Millom, Cumbria;

(3) if he will list all those occasions in the last twenty years on which prisoners have escaped, or attempted to escape, from Haverigg prison, Millom, Cumbria.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Statistics on escapes are published in annual reports on the work of the prison department, copies of which are available in the Library, and show that the following numbers of prisoners escaped from Haverigg:

	Number
1969	—
1970	1
1971	3
1972	9
1973	6
1974	—
1975	2
1976	4
1977	6
1978	2
1979	6
1980	2
1981	1
1982	5
1983	3
1984-85	14
1985-86	5
1986-87	5

The 1984-85 figure is for the 15-month period from 1 January 1984—31 March 1985. Subsequent reports relate to the year from 1 April. Between 1 April 1987 and 31 May 1988, five prisoners escaped.

As to attempted escapes, the readily available information relates to 1986-88. During these years, the following numbers of prisoners were caught while in the process of attempting to escape, or were apprehended or seen in circumstances which suggested that they were about to make an attempt:

Year	Number
1986	30
1987	18

[1]To 31 May.

In accordance with standard practice, inquiries were made for internal management purposes into particular incidents at Haverigg to which the hon. Member's question answered on 17 December 1987 related. No changes arising specifically out of those incidents were deemed necessary but the experience of escapes at Haverigg and elsewhere is in forming a general review of security arrangements in medium-low security establishments which is in progress.

Work has been carried out on the installation of a new fence around the sportsfield at Haverigg, which will bring this area up to current security standards in keeping with the main perimeter of the prison; and work to install a similar fence around the prison's farm was scheduled to start in the near future.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the various categories and numbers of prisoners held at Haverigg prison, Millom, Cumbria, in each year since 1979.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The readily available information is given in the table.

Population of Haverigg closed training prison on 31 March: by security category, 1979-88

	Security category[1]
	A	B	C	D	not recorded centrally	Total population in establishment

[1] The figures are those recorded centrally and are approximate, detailed checking of individual cases would involve disproportionate cost. All figures are rounded estimates and therefore may not add to the totals.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what investigations have been carried out into alleged drugs abuse at Haverigg prison, Millom, Cumbria, in the last 10 years.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We attach much importance to keeping illicit drugs out of prison establishments and are determined that counter-measures are taken. The regular monitoring of the incidence of drugs is a normal management function. Following the issue of further guidance last autumn, governors were required to review and report upon the situation in their establishment and the need for additional measures to be taken. A full search by drug dogs took place at Haverigg on 23 March, when some cannabis was found. Allegations concerning the availability of drugs at Haverigg will be investigated by the deputy director general of the prison service as part of his inquiry into the recent incidents at the prison.

Vietnamese Refugees

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will reconsider the limit on Vietnamese refugees allowed into the United Kingdom from Hong Kong, in the light of the recent additional influx of refugees to the colony.

Mr. Renton: I have nothing to add to the reply given to the hon. Member for Wrexham (Dr. Marek) on 26 April at columns 85-86.

DNA Fingerprinting

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will now consider DNA fingerprinting as conclusive evidence of parentage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: Due weight is already given to the results of DNA tests submitted by applicants in support of entry clearance applications. The results of the pilot trial to evaluate the role of DNA testing in immigration procedures will be available shortly.

Mrs. N. Goodman (Passport Application)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why the application of Mrs. Nanette Ida Goodman of 12 Avenue terrace, Southend-on-Sea, to the Petty France office for a passport renewal on 19 April, explaining the urgency of her application, has still not been dealt with; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: Without Mrs. Goodman's date of birth, the London Passport Office is unable to trace her application on the computerised record of postal applications awaiting processing. If my hon. Friend will let me have this information, we will do all we can to ensure that the application is expedited. The passport department has tried to contact Mrs. Goodman by telephone, but her number is unavailable.

Ministerial Meeting, Munich

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the recent ministerial meetings he attended in Munich.

Mr. Hurd: The Ministers of the States of the European Community responsible for counter-terrorism and immigration met on 3 June in Munich under the chairmanship of Dr. Zimmermann, the Minister of the Interior of the Federal Republic of Germany. Lord Cockfield, a Vice-President of the European Commission, was present for the discussion of immigration matters.

In the immigration meeting we reviewed the position on possible changes in controls at the internal borders of the Community in the light of the Single European Act. Some of my colleagues envisaged that it might become possible to abolish immigration frontier controls within the Community if a series of conditions were fulfilled. These conditions would include the strengthening of controls at the external frontiers of the Community, including the full harmonisation of visa requirements. Others agreed with the United Kingdom that it was not possible to envisage the abolition within the foreseeable future of all immigration controls over third country nationals at intra-Community borders. All the Ministers present endorsed the statement by the presidency that no decision to abolish these controls had been taken.

Frontier controls were also discussed, at my initiative, in the Trevi meeting in view of their importance in continued international cross-border co-operation to combat terrorism, drug trafficking and other crime. My colleagues unanimously accepted my suggestion that the Trevi machinery should be used to consider the implications of changes in frontier controls and the kind of measures which could be taken to off-set potential security disadvantages which might otherwise result from the implementation of the European internal market.

At the immigration meeting, we had before us a further report from the ad hoc group of senior officials established in 1986 during the United Kingdom presidency. We endorsed the recommendations made by that group, including recommendations for improved co-ordination between the representatives of member states in third countries, in assessing conditions in those countries which are relevant to the grant of visas, and to the consideration of applications for asylum.

My colleagues and I continue to be concerned at the considerable increase in some member states of the European Communities in the number of applications for asylum from persons who do not satisfy the criteria laid down in the 1951 Geneva refugee convention and appear to be exploiting the asylum procedure for purposes for which it is not intended. We therefore reaffirmed our aim of guaranteeing every asylum seeking the right to have his application examined in one of the member states but equally the aim of preventing the abuse whereby the same foreign national made different asylum applications in several member states. We welcomed the progress made towards establishing the necessary criteria for determining which state should be responsible for considering any individual application.

In the Trevi meeting we also discussed events since our previous meeting in Copenhagen in December, including the recent murderous attacks by the Provisional IRA in the Netherlands. There was unanimous and wholehearted condemnation of the Provisional IRA and my colleagues supported my suggestion that this should be recorded in the presidency press statement issued after the meeting.

Various measures to intensify co-operation were agreed including priority search measures for major terrorists, improved gathering of information on terrorist movements and the immediate exchange of information following a major terrorist incident. Proposals for greater co-operation between Trevi states in the forensic field will be developed by officials. We also agreed a refined and updated assessment of the terrorist threat to Community countries.

Further co-operation to combat drug trafficking using the drug liaison officer network was agreed.

My colleagues also agreed to my proposal that we should study ways of confiscating funds intended to support terrorism. The United Kingdom Government's proposals for legislation to replace the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984, which expires in March 1989, will provide a starting point for that study.

Prisons (Mother and Baby Units)

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women in prison mother and baby units on the most recent convenient date had not previously served a custodial sentence; what were their ages; and for what offences they had been sentenced.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [pursuant to his reply, 23 May]: I regret that incorrect information was contained in that answer. The reply should have read as follows:

Forty-two women including seven remand prisoners in mother and baby units on 13 May 1988 had not previously served a custodial sentence. Their ages are shown in table 1. Table 2 lists the primary offences for each of the 35 sentenced women.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Hospitals

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what overall savings will be obtained by the proposal in the Northern health board operational plan to replace ward accommodation at Holywell hospital by provision of local psychogeriatric units in Larne and Whiteabbey.

Mr. Needham: This is primarily a matter for the Northern Health and Social Services Board. Rather than achieve savings, however, I understand that the proposal, which is only at the planning stage, is intended to improve services for elderly people in the areas mentioned.

Fair Employment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the employers in Northern Ireland which the Fair Employment Agency has (a) chosen or (b) had discussions with to revoke or modify directions previously given under subsection 2(i) or 2(ii) under Part II, section 13 (5)(a) or (b) of the Fair Employment Act (NI) 1976.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 20 May 1988]: The information is as follows:

Cookstown District council;
Armagh district council;
Lough Neagh Fishermen's Co-operative.

ENVIRONMENT

Waste Disposal

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to introduce legislation to ensure that the producers of waste are responsible for its disposal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: We intend, following our September 1986 consultation paper, to announce our conclusions on waste disposal law amendment very shortly.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Government propose to compile a register of persons authorised to handle waste.

Mr. Moynihan: Our consultation paper on amendments to the law relating to waste disposal included a proposal to register waste handlers. We plan to make an announcement on the results of the consultation very shortly.

Litter and Industrial Waste

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many tonnes of (a) domestic litter and (b) industrial waste were legally disposed of for each of the last five years in (i) the United Kingdom, by region and (ii) Basildon;

(2) if he will estimate how many tonnes of (a) domestic litter and (b) industrial waste were illegally disposed of in each of the last five years in (i) the United Kingdom, by region and (ii) Basildon;

(3) what was the total cost to (a) taxpayers and (b) ratepayers of the disposal of (i) domestic litter and (ii) industrial waste for each of the last five years in (x) the United Kingdom, by region and (y) Basildon;

(4) how many tonnes of (a) biodegradable and (b) non-biodegradable waste were (i) legally and (ii) illegally disposed of for each of the last five years in the United Kingdom, by region, and in Basildon;

(5) if he will list the various methods by which (a) domestic litter and (b) industrial waste are disposed of; if he will list the total number of tonnes disposed of by each method for each of the last five years in the United Kingdom, by region, and in Basildon; and if he will express the total for each method as a percentage of the overall total;

(6) how many tonnes of (a) industrial waste and (b) domestic litter were disposed of other than in seas or rivers in the United Kingdom, by region, and in Basildon, for each of the last five years;

(7) how many tonnes of (a) biodegradable and (b) non-biodegradable waste were disposed other than in seas and rivers in the United Kingdom, by region, and in Basildon, for each of the last five years.

Mr. Moynihan: Responsibility for the regulation of waste disposal lies with waste disposal authorities. Statistics on the amounts of waste disposed of by the authorities or by the private sector under licence, and the costs to local authorities, are not collected centrally.

The two major methods of disposal of domestic and industrial waste are incineration and landfill, with or without prior treatment. It is estimated that about 100 million tonnes of controlled waste is generated in England and Wales annually. Of this 50 million tonnes is industrial waste, 28 million tonnes is domestic and commercial and the remainder is ash, slag and building waste. Within this total, about 1·5 million tonnes is defined as special waste under the Control of Pollution (Special Waste) Regulations 1980 as being dangerous or difficult to dispose of.

Industrial waste is disposed of almost entirely by the private sector and the costs are borne by the industry generating the waste.

Approximately 10 per cent. of the domestic and commercial waste collected by local authorities is incinerated; the rest is landfilled.

No valid estimates are available of the volume of waste disposed of illegally throughout the country but the London Waste Regulatory Authority estimates that about 1 million tonnes are dumped in the London area at any one time.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many tonnes of (a) domestic litter and (b) industrial waste were disposed of in the sea or in rivers for each of the last five years in the United Kingdom, by region, and in Basildon; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many tonnes of (a) biodegradable and (b) non-biodegradable waste were disposed of in the sea or in rivers for each of the last five years in the United Kingdom, by region, and in Basildon.

Mr. Moynihan: Waste disposal at sea is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. Quantities and types of waste disposed of in United Kingdom sea areas from 1981-85, the last five years for which published figures are available, are given in the 8th-12 annual reports of the Oslo commission, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. Data for 1986 will be available shortly. Wastes are normally licensed for disposal at sea only if they are biodegradable or inert and non-toxic. Discharges of waste to internal waters is a matter for water authorities and figures are not kept centrally.

Landfill Waste Sites

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment who is responsible for monitoring landfill waste sites once local authority responsibility ceases after they are closed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The obligations of a waste disposal authority under the Control of Pollution Act 1974 to monitor landfill sites cease when the licence expires. However, district councils retain their duties under section 91 of the Public Health Act 1936 to inspect their districts for the occurrence of any statutory nuisance which may be caused by the deposit.

Housing Density

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is satisfied that provisions relating to the density of house and other building and the provision of drainage and sewerage are not being exceeded on land in the vicinity of Cortons brook and the Brent river; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Decisions concerning the density of development in Ealing, as elsewhere, are a matter for the local planning authority taking into account any general guidance. My Department's circular 17/82 emphasises that, where land drainage considerations arise, they should always be taken into account in determining planning applications. The adequacy of infrastructure is also a consideration for the local planning authority in consultation with the relevant utilities.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what high level nuclear waste of United Kingdom origin has been dumped in drums in the sea.

Mr. Moynihan: None. High level nuclear waste is being stored for at least 50 years before disposal is envisaged. In any case such waste is unsuitable for disposal in drums at sea.

Newcastle Recreational Project

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to make funds available to Newcastle under Lyme borough council for Newcastle recreational project 1746/88 and to finance similar projects in operation throughout the United Kingdom now and in the future; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Government money specifically allocated to sport and recreation is channelled through the Sports Council. The council dispenses these funds in accordance with its own policies on a regional and national basis. Priority is given to projects which provide sport and recreation opportunities for areas and groups of special need including the unemployed. I understand that the council's west midlands region provided some financial support last year for the Newcastle recreation project and that similar projects in other regions are also assisted by the council. The Government fully support the Sports Council's "areas of special need" policies and increased the council's grant by over £2 million for this purpose in 1988-89, to a total of £39 million.

Chlorine

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will take account of the projected rise in chlorine levels in the atmosphere from 3 parts per million to 5 parts per million by the end of the century, in deciding whether to support a ban on the use of aerosol sprays containing chlorofluorocarbons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The Government believe that emissions of chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) are best limited through controlling supply rather than specific uses, such as aerosols. The European Commission's proposals for implementing the Montreal protocol in the European Community also reflect this overall approach. We nevertheless welcome the recent announcement by the British aerosol industry that it will voluntarily phase out non-essential use of CFCs in aerosols by the end of 1989. The Government are keen to encourage voluntary reductions in CFC use by all sectors of industry.

Environmental Impact Assessments

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will explain how the system for including environmental impact assessments in the planning process will operate in enterprise zones and simplified planning zones; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: I shall shortly be laying before Parliament regulations applying the requirements of the EC directive on environmental assessment to projects subject to development control. Further provision will be required to ensure that the directive's requirements are complied with in enterprise zones and simplified planning zones, without unnecessarily restricting the broad freedom to undertake development in such zones. The necessary instruments will be made as soon as possible.

London Docklands (Housing)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the average weekly rent of a private unit of housing in the area of the London Docklands development corporation for each year since its establishment.

Mr. Trippier: The only information available is for rents registered by the rent officer in the year in question in each of the three dockland boroughs, as follows:

Year	Newham		Southwark		Tower Hamlets
	Unfurnished £	Furnished £	Unfurnished £	Furnished £	Unfurnished £	Furnished £
1981	9·71	13·36	12·11	18·04	9·61	10·40

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will estimate the average construction costs of a unit of housing association housing (a) in the area of the London Docklands development corporation and (b) in that part of the London borough of Southwark for which the planning authority is the London Docklands development corporation;

(2) if he will estimate the change in investment on public housing in real terms in the area of the London Docklands development corporation since 1981.

Mr. Trippier: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the average construction costs of a unit of new housing for private sale (a) in the area of the London Docklands development corporation and (b) in that part of the London borough of Southwark for which the planning authority is the London Docklands development corporation.

Mr. Trippier: Information on average construction cost is not available, but average sale prices between October 1986 and September 1987 have been estimated as follows for the LDDC part of each of the three docklands boroughs:

	Newham £	Southwark £	Tower Hamlets £
1 bed unit	45,000	57,500	65,000
2 bed unit	55,000	70,000	100,000
3 bed unit	70,000	80,000	120,000
4 bed unit	115,000	150,000	150,000
5 bed unit	—	200,000	—

Agricultural Dwellings

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to ensure that, as a prerequisite to the granting of planning permission for an agricultural dwelling, the future economic viability of the farm is established beyond reasonable doubt.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. Guidance about the viability of a farming enterprise is given in the annex to DOE circular 24/73. Each planning application for an agricultural dwelling is decided on its merits in the light of this guidance, the other factors listed in the annex, and all other material planning considerations.

London Docklands Development Corporation

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much public money has been spent and how much private investment attracted to the London Docklands development corporation in (a) Southwark, (b) Newham and (c) Tower Hamlets, for each year since the London Docklands development corporation was established.

Mr. Trippier: I will write to the hon. Member.

London Docklands (Population)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the population within the area of the London Docklands development corporation for each year since its establishment, and the predicted population for the 1990s.

Mr. Trippier: Population estimates and projections for the LDDC area since 1981 are as follows:

Year	Population
1981	39,429
1982	40,700
1983	41,100
1984	42,000
1985	43,820
1986	45,749

Widdicombe Committee

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Government will publish their response to the Widdicombe committee of inquiry into the conduct of local authority business.

Mr. Chope: Soon.

Council House Sales

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will update the table giving information on sales of dwellings by each local authority in England, referred to in the answer given to the hon. Member for Banbury on 2 March, Official Report, column 580.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have today placed in the Library the latest version of table 2 giving information reported by each local authority in England on the progress of council house sales up to the end of December 1987.

Tenants' Choice

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to issue further explanatory material on tenants' choice; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The tenants' choice scheme, provided for in part IV of the Housing Bill, is designed to broaden the choices open to secure public sector tenants; to give tenants better services, whether by changing landlord or through the effect of competition on existing landlords; and further to open up very large stocks of rented housing held by local housing authorities to diversity, competition and best housing management practices. As I undertook at the Committee stage of the Bill to do, I have today placed in the Libraries of both Houses a paper, "Tenants' Choice", which explains how we propose to achieve this, including the part that we propose will be played by secondary legislation and by administrative arrangements. It explains in particular the important responsibilities we propose for the Housing Corporation, not only to approve prospective new landlords, but also to act as enabler and provider of information and assistance to tenants and prospective landlords wishing to operate the scheme: amendments to the Bill, tabled yesterday, provide for this extended role. The paper, additional copies of which will be available in the Vote Office, is being sent to the local authority associations and others with a major interest, but is considered primarily to assist this House in its further consideration of part IV of the Bill.

Domestic Waste (Imports)

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the particular danger to human, animal and plant health arising from the disposal of domestic waste imported from the United States of America.

Mr. Moynihan: My officials in consultation with the MAFF and DHSS are considering whether any dangers are posed to human, animal or plant health by the import of domestic waste from the USA.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the amount of domestic waste imported into the United Kingdom from the United States of America in each of the last five years.

Mr. Moynihan: We are not aware of any imports of domestic waste from the USA in the last five years.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will seek powers to prohibit the import of domestic waste from the United States of America into the United Kingdom.

Mr. Moynihan: The provision of waste disposal services is a legitimate business provided it is carried out in accordance with proper environmental safeguards, does not involve risks to public health and does not jeopardise the availability of suitable facilities for the disposal of United Kingdom waste. I am aware of public concern about proposals to import large quantities of domestic wastes from the United States of America and am considering whether any action may be necessary.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the proposed dumping of domestic waste from the United States of America at Arpley Meadows, Warrington.

Mr. Moynihan: I understand that a British Company, Power, Water and Waste, Ltd., have approached the Manchester Ship Canal Company with proposals to landfill United States domestic waste at one of their facilities. I believe negotiations are continuing.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the content of the proposed imports of waste from the United States of America into the United Kingdom for disposal at Arpley Meadows, Warrington.

Mr. Moynihan: I understand that the proposal to import waste from the United States of America concerns normal domestic refuse.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Refugee Camp, Hong Kong

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about his recent visit to the Vietnamese refugee camp in Hong Kong.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend visited the Green Island reception centre and the Chi Ma Wan closed centre in Hong Kong. He was impressed by the efficiency with which both centres are run by the Hong Kong Government, and by the great efforts made to ensure that conditions are as humane as possible.

There has been a dramatic increase in the numbers of Vietnamese boat people arriving in Hong Kong in recent months. The population in the camps has risen to some 15,000, compared with about 8,000 a year ago. More than 1,500 of these have arrived in June. There is little realistic prospect of resettling people on this scale. The great majority are leaving Vietnam for essentially economic reasons, not because of political persecution.

This situation cannot go on indefinitely. We are considering urgently with the Hong Kong Government whether their current policy of treating all Vietnamese boat people arriving in Hong Kong as refugees should be changed.

My right hon. and learned Friend took the opportunity to raise the problem of the Vietnamese boat people with the Vietnamese, Chinese and Soviet Foreign Ministers in New York on 7 June. We will continue to take every opportunity to emphasise to all Governments concerned the need to find appropriate durable solutions to the problem.

Exercise Purple Venture

Sir Antony Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effects of Exercise Purple Venture on the United Kingdom's relations with the countries in Latin America.

Mr. Eggar: Exercise Purple Venture has no relevance to our relations with countries in Latin America. Purple Venture is essentially a paper exercise, although a command and communications element will deploy to Ascension Island. It is a routine command post exercise designed to test command and control procedures. It has nothing whatever to do with the Falkland Islands.

SCOTLAND

Clyde Herring

82. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to review the current total allowable catch for Clyde herring; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There are no plans to review the current total allowable catch for Clyde herring. The most recent advice from the advisory committee on fishery management suggests that the catch in 1989 should be set at the level of landings in recent years.

Fish Stocks

83. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has recently received information from the advisory committee for fisheries management about the current condition of fish stocks in United Kingdom waters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The most recent advice from the advisory committee on fishery management has been received only this week and is still being considered. Advice for some important stocks, notably cod, haddock and whiting in the North sea, has been deferred until the November meeting of ACFM.

North Sea Cod

84. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if it is his intention to seek a review of the state of the stock of North sea cod before the end of June; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The state of the North sea cod stock is reviewed each year by the advisory committee on fishery management. At their latest meeting, ACFM decided to defer until November their advice on North sea cod when further information should be available.

Artificial Limbs

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what profit margin his Department has agreed with the companies which supply artificial limbs to the National Health Service.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The supply of artificial limbs is to be put to competitive tender from 1 January 1989.

Prosthetists

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the cost to the National Health Service if all prosthetists currently employed by health boards became contractor employed.

Mr Michael Forsyth: The trade union representing the prosthetists gave notice in March to the Scottish Home and Health Department that their members intended to resign from the National Health Service, and take up employment with the contractors who manufacture artificial limbs, from the summer. The cost of this change cannot yet be precisely estimated, but is unlikely to be substantial, in view of the saving of the salaries of prosthetists who resign, (and the overheads, such as national insurance and superannuation, associated with their employment) and in view of the competitive tendering, for the supply of artificial limbs from 1 January 1989.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the salaries for prosthetists in the National Health Service who are (a) contractor employed and (b) employed by health boards.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The NHS salary ranges (effective from 1 November 1987) for the grades of prosthetists employed by health boards are as follows:

	Minimum £	Maximum £
Intern	6,680	7,800
Basic Grade (non-National Centre qualified)	7,800	10,020
Basic Grade (National Centre qualified)	9,470	12,250
Senior/Manager	11,690	14,750

Prosthetists who transfered to the NHS from the commercial companies in 1980 retained as part of that transfer agreement their commercial rates of pay which (effective from 1 July 1987) are as follows:

Over 30 years service	14,240
15-30 years service	14,210

10-15 years service	14,035
Up to 10 years service	13,985

In addition to the salaries of the staff involved, the NHS is of course liable for national insurance contributions, and other overheads.

Legal Aid

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many applications have been considered by the Scottish Legal Aid Board since its foundation to the latest convenient date; how many of these have been dealt with by the board; what percentage has been granted; and, of those refused, what have been the reasons for refusal, broken down into percentages in each category.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Provisional figures for applications to the board in its first year of operation are given in the table. Some of the applications determined were submitted under the arrangements obtaining prior to the assumption of its responsibilities by the board on 1 April 1987. Figures for applications for an increase in authorised expenditure for advice and assistance are not yet available.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many complaints he has received from (a) the general public, (b) solicitors and (c) right hon. and hon. Members regarding delays or difficulties in the consideration of applications for legal aid by the Scottish Legal Aid Board.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Since 1 April 1987 when the Scottish Legal Aid Board assumed responsibility for the administration of legal aid my right hon. and learned Friend has received (a) 13 complaints from the general public and various bodies, (b) 24 from solicitors, including representative bodies of the profession and (c) 22 from right hon. and hon. Members.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current number of staff working in the Scottish Legal Aid Board; what is the approved establishment figure; whether he has received representations from the board for additional staffing; what his response has been; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: On 31 May 1988 the Scottish Legal Aid Board employed 345 persons, including temporary staff. Control over staffing costs is achieved by determination of the grant in aid for the board's administration rather than by setting a limit to the numbers employed. No representations have been received from the board for additional staff, but the numbers and grading of staff are the subject of a normal efficiency scrutiny which has just begun.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total sum approved for legal aid by the Scottish Legal Aid Board since is establishment; what were the comparable figures for equivalent periods in previous years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: During its first year (1987-88) the Scottish Legal Aid Board sought and received £44·577 million from the Vote for the Scottish Legal Aid Fund. In 1984-85 comparable expenditure was £31·75 million; in 1985-86, £38·525 million; and in 1986-87, £44·025 million.

Housing Statistics

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has as to how many houses in the Dundee district authority area are (a) below tolerable standard; (b) require comprehensive modernisation; (c) require major repairs and (d) are affected by dampness, in the public and private sectors, respectively, on the latest available figures; and what are the corresponding figures for each year since 1979.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The available information is set out in the table:

Rating Reform

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report the local authorities in Scotland ranked according to the percentage and number of (a) losers and (b) gainers under the poll tax proposals, showing those figures alongside that ranking; and if he will express these figures for both households and individuals.

Mr. Lang: The information is not available by local authority.

Sawmills, Pulp and Board Mills

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide an estimate of the number of people employed in Scottish sawmills, pulp and board mills wholly or partly using home-produced timber.

Mr. Lang: I am unable to add anything to the replies I gave to the hon. Member on 31 March 1988 and 22 April 1988.

Labour Statistics

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give, for each month since January for which figures are available, the number of job vacancies in Dundee.

Mr. Lang: The number of job vacancies (excluding community programme vacancies) notified and remaining unfilled in the Dundee jobcentre area for each month from January 1988 to April 1988 (the latest month for which information is available) is as follows:

1988	Number
January	350
February	379
March	452
April	462

It is estimated that only around one third of all vacancies are notified to jobcentres.

This information is available in the Library.

HMS Sturdy (Incident)

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department has now completed its investigation of the wartime incident involving HMS Sturdy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: On 25 November 1944 HMS Sturdy sighted a 350-ton coaster, flying the Japanese flag, off Laut island to the south-east of Borneo. As the water was too shallow for torpedoes to be launched, Sturdy surfaced and opened fire on the ship. When this did not succeed in sinking the coaster, the submarine came alongside and a party boarded her. They found the ship to be carrying a cargo of oil, a legitimate target. About 50 men had already abandoned ship and the boarding party attempted to persuade a number of women and children still on board to do likewise. They refused to do so, although a boat was available and, in addition, there was a quantity of floating wreckage nearby. The sea was flat calm and land was less than 5 miles away.

The boarding party then placed demolition charges with four minute fuses and returned to the submarine, which drew away from the coaster. At this point Sturdy's commanding officer, Lt. W. St. G. Anderson RNR, who had been able to see about eight people on the ship when she was boarded, and who had concluded that there could be no more than about 15 still aboard, learned that there were in fact 40 to 50. By then it would have been too late to return to the coaster. The charges exploded, setting the ship on fire, and she was left as a total loss.

After he reported this action, Lt. Anderson was relieved of command, and the question whether he should face a court martial was raised at a senior level. In examining the case a number of factors were taken into consideration. Lt. Anderson was a young officer—he was 24—bearing a considerable burden of responsibility who had otherwise served with some distinction. The action in question took place in shallow water where Sturdy could not dive. There was a significant risk of air attack from which the submarine would have had no means of escape, and Lt. Anderson would have been placing his boat and crew in additional danger by remaining on the surface longer than was absolutely necessary. Decisions therefore had to be taken very rapidly. Moreover, had the ship, which was readily indentifiable as an enemy vessel by her flag, been in water deep enough to allow the launching of torpedoes, Lt. Anderson would have been fully entitled under the normal conventions of war to sink her by this means without warning, and without regard to the fate of those on board. In these circumstances, while Lt. Anderson was held to have made a serious error of judgment, a court martial was not considered appropriate. He was subsequently returned to command in another submarine. The deaths of civilians involuntarily caught up in war as a result of a foreign occupation is of course a matter of regret.

Gibraltar (Shootings)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has given permission for any Army personnel based in the United Kingdom to be summoned by the Gibraltar coroner; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I have nothing to add to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) on 17 May, at column 370.

Pilot Training

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what pilot training he proposes to contract out to British Aerospace; what arrangements there will be in relation to costs, security and standard of training; what are the implications for the acquisition of Tucano aircraft for basic pilot training; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: We have no plans to contract out any of our pilot training; therefore, there are no implications for the acquisition of Tucano aircraft for basic pilot training by the Royal Air Force.

EMPLOYMENT

Job Training Scheme

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he proposes to make any changes in the job training scheme.

Mr. Nicholls: As was announced in the White Paper, "Training for Employment", the new and the old job training schemes, together with all our other training programmes for adults and the community programme will be replaced by employment training from 5 September. There will be transitional arrangements as the current schemes are replaced by the new programme, and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State recently announced that a £10 premium is now payable to new JTS participants in line with plans for employment training.

Employment Patterns

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the implications for the north-west region of current changes in national employment patterns.

Mr. Lee: The north-west is sharing in the growth in employment in the service sector, self-employment and part-time jobs. These sectors comprise a similar share of employment in the north-west as in Great Britain as a whole.

YTS

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many young people went into employment, full-time education or further training on leaving youth training schemes.

Mr. Cope: The latest results from the 100 per cent. follow-up survey of YTS leavers in the period April 1986 to November 1987 show that three months after leaving YTS 191,686 (59 per cent.) young people were in a job, 35,982 (12 per cent.) were on another YTS scheme and 11,893 (4 per cent.) were on a full-time course.

Employment Agencies

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to introduce legislation to amend the licensing requirements in respect of employment agencies.

Mr. Nicholls: We have no plans to introduce such legislation.

Trades Union Congress

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to meet the general secretary of the Trades Union Congress to discuss industrial relations.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no current plans to meet the general secretary of the Trades Union Congress to discuss industrial relations.

European Social Charter

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on progress in implementing article 4 of the European social charter.

Mr. Cope: The United Kingdom has accepted all of the provisions of article 4 of the European social charter, except paragraph 3.

Dock Workers

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the ratio between the numbers of staff employed by the National Dock Labour Board and the total numbers of registered dock workers for each year between 1979 and 1987.

Mr. Nicholls: At 31 December of each year the totals were:

	A Staff employed by the National Dock Labour Board	B Total number of registered dock workers	Ratio A:B
1979	527	25,770	1:49
1980	500	23,110	1:46
1981	433	18,219	1:42
1982	309	15,340	1:50
1983	296	13,813	1:47
1984	277	12,505	1:45
1985	269	11,892	1:44
1986	259	10,482	1:40
1987	245	9,965	1:41

Factory Inspectorate

Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish in the Official Report for each of the Health and Safety Executive offices (a) the number of sites under the control of Industrial Major Accident Hazards Regulations, (b) the number of such sites under the jurisdiction of the Chemical Group of Her Majesty's factory inspectorate, (c) the number of Her Majesty's factory inspectors in each chemicals group of Her Majesty's factory inspectorate and (d) the total number of premises under the jurisdiction of each chemicals group of Her Majesty's factory inspectorate.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is not available. The Health and Safety Executive does not hold information on the number of sites subject to the Control of Industrial Major Accident Hazards Regulations. No HSE area office has a group of inspectors solely for inspection in the chemicals industry.

Enterprise Allowance Scheme

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will revise the regulations concerning the enterprise allowance scheme to enable unemployed persons not in receipt of income support to be considered for assistance under the scheme.

Mr. Nicholls: No. The specific purpose of the enterprise allowance scheme is to help those unemployed people who would like to set up in business but are deterred from doing so because they would lose their entitlement to unemployment benefit or income support. I have no plans to change the purpose of this scheme.

Community Programme

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will review the regulations regarding entry to the community programme so that unemployed persons not in receipt of benefit may be considered for placements.

Mr. Nicholls: We have no plans to change the present arrangements. From 5 September all current programmes for unemployed adults, including the community programme, will be replaced by the new adult programme, "Employment Training". Benefit receipt will not be an eligibility condition for employment training.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action he proposes to take to ensure that recreational opportunities for the unwaged section of the community will not be adversely affected by the discontinuation of the community programme in September in favour of the new adult training scheme.

Mr. Nicholls: The community programme will be replaced from 5 September by "Employment Training". Project-based training will be an important part of the new programme with some 194,000 project-based opportunities in the first year, broadly the present level of community programme provision. I hope that most current community programme projects will move forward into employment training.

Poultry Industry (Tenosynovitis)

81. Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will take steps to seek to reduce tenosynovitis in the poultry industry.

Mr. Nicholls: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Palace of Westminster (Labour Statistics)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many people are employed in the Palace of Westminster.

Mr. Wakeham: With the exception of Members and the 917 staff employed by the House of Commons Commission, the varying nature of attendance of those employed in the precincts of this House makes it impossible to provide any meaningful total.

It is understood that the political parties, the police, the security and fire authorities, the press and broadcasting authorities, the Property Services Agency and Crown Suppliers, the Post Office and British Telecom, and other authorities have approximately 950 officers and staff whose employment involves some attendance at the House of Commons. Some of these, however, serve both Houses.

In addition, 1,327 passes have been issued to Members' secretaries and research assistants, but not all are regularly employed in the House. Officials from Government Departments also attend the House from time to time as required.

Palace of Westminster (Accidents)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many accidents have occurred at the Palace of Westminster to members of the public, outside contractors and employees of the Palace of Westminster in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Wakeham: The information requested prior to 1981 is not available. The numbers of reported accidents from 1981 to date is as follows:

	Members of the public	Outside contractors	Staff of the House of Commons
1981	22	2	64
1982	29	3	40
1983	20	1	49
1984	22	—	67
1985	35	—	45
1986	18	—	47
1987	14	1	29
1988 to date	8	—	20

Palace of Westminster (Visits)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Lord President of the Council what information he has as to how many people visit the Palace of Westminster each year (a) for the Line of Route or the Public Gallery (b) to attend meetings or attend dinners and (c) to attend lobbies of Parliament.

Mr. Wakeham: In 1987, the estimated numbers of visitors admitted to the House of Commons were as follows:

	Number
(a) Line of Route	112,176
Public Galleries	147,439
(b) Meetings	69,880
Dinners	77,058
(c) Lobbies	15,058

Vote (Delivery)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Lord President of the Council on how many days in the current parliamentary Session the Deliverer of the Vote has failed to deliver the Vote to recipients outside the House on the day of publication; what the reasons for the late or postal deliveries are; and what steps are being taken to ensure same day delivery.

Mr. Wakeham: The Vote has not been delivered to Members' addresses outside the House on the day of publication on 16 occasions during this Session due to printing delays. In addition, of all the morning deliveries ordered by Members this Session, not all of which include the Vote, 3·3 per cent. have had to be posted due to sickness, transport breakdowns or staff resignations.

I am advised the HMSO has markedly improved the time of delivery to the House of documents for the morning delivery and that all possible steps are being taken by the Deliverer of the Vote and his staff to ensure regular delivery of the Vote to Members on the day of publication.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Food Regulations

80. Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if, in view of recent salmonella incidents, he has any plans to review his policy on food regulation.

Mrs. Currie: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food had already announced on 30 October 1987 that officials had been asked to have further consultations with interested parties to consider the detail of any necessary revisions to current food legislation. I understand that these consultations are continuing, but are expected to be completed by late summer.

Psychiatric Hospitals

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report a list of those psychiatric hospitals caring for long-stay patients in every region showing (a) those which have been approved for closure, (b) those which have been proposed for closure by their regional health authority, (c) those which have been listed in regional strategic plans as possible candidates for closure and (d) the number of patients in each hospital.

Mrs. Currie: The table lists every mental illness hospital in England which discharged (in 1986) one or more in-patients after a stay of five years of more. Some sites listed are mixed mental illness and mental handicap but have a predominance of mentally ill patients. The number of in-patients resident at each site is at 31 December 1986. The closure status is annotated according to the classifications set out in the question. Those under (a) are linked to a specified target closure date.

Hospital Visits

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received concerning the difficulties encountered by people dependent on social security benefits in securing assistance towards travelling costs for journeys to visit close relatives in hospital; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: A few representations have been received. Community care grants are available to income support claimants in certain circumstances for the cost of fares to visit a relative in hospital. Guidance and directions for the award of such payments appear in the social fund manual which was published in November 1987. A copy is in the Library.

Mental Illness

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many patients suffering from mental illness, discharged from hospital in the last two years, have an individual case worker assigned to them; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many patients suffering from mental illness have been discharged from hospital in each health authority for the past two years.

Mrs. Currie: The table provides the available information on discharges, by health authority, from National Health Service mental illness hospitals and units in England for the two latest available years. The figures on discharges exclude transfers to other National Health Service hospitals and the special hospitals, and do not relate to individual patients as a patient may be admitted and discharged more than once during the year. Statistics on the numbers of patients suffering from mental illness who have an individual case worker assigned to them after discharge from hospital are not centrally collected.

Mr. Joseph Gillam

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services when he will submit to the pensions appeal tribunal the statement of case in respect of Joseph Gillam, of 58 Meadowfield close, Rock Ferry, Birkenhead, as indicated in the joint Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State's letter to the hon. Member for Birkenhead dated 22 July 1986.

Mr. Portillo: The statement of case was originally submitted to the pension appeal tribunal on 9 November 1987. The appeal was returned without action on receipt of additional evidence from Mr. Gillam's representative on 12 February 1988. A supplementary statement of case incorporating this evidence and the Department's response was submitted on 1 June 1988.

War Pensions

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average length of time between the receipt of an appeal by the war pensions unit and the submission of the statement of case to the pensions appeal tribunal; and how this compares with past years.

Mr. Portillo: Information is not kept in the form requested. The average time between receipt of an appeal and the despatch of the statement of case to the appellant is currently 54 weeks. For 1987, 1986 and 1985 the times were 52 weeks, 48 weeks and 40 weeks respectively.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many appeals by war pensioners have been awaiting a submission of a statement of case to the pensions appeal tribunal for more than three months.

Mr. Portillo: About 4,700 appeals have been outstanding for more than three months.

Post-neonatal Death Rates

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the post-neonatal death rates separately for England and Wales for 1985, 1986 and 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 18 May at columns 500-1.

Benefit Regulations

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will review the new regulations introduced on 11 April in the reference to the removal of benefit from households without dependent children where one partner is working 24 hours a week or more; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: No. Income support is not payable where either partner works on average 24 hours or more a week. However, claimants in vulnerable groups who are affected by the changes to full-time work rules will be provided with transitional protection as outlined in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Saffron Walden (Mr. Haselhurst) on 28 April at columns 253-54. In addition, housing benefit is available to people on low income if they are responsible for rent or rates.

Cervical Cancer

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many people were trained in the specialised use of laser equipment to treat cervical cancer in the previous 12 months; and if he will give a regional breakdown of how many people are currently employed in this work;

(2) if he will list those district health authorities which do and do not have laser equipment to treat cervical cancer.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that this information is not available centrally.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make additional money available to the West Midlands regional health authority for the purchase of laser equipment by the North Staffordshire district health authority.

Mrs. Currie: The allocation of resources by regions and districts is a matter for the health authorities concerned. This year's revenue allocation to the West Midlands is 10·39 per cent. higher in cash terms and 5·64 per cent. higher in real terms than last year's, and I understand that the initial revenue allocation to North Staffordshire district health authority for 1988-89 now stands at £103,906,000, compared with £93,337,000 in 1987-88.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how much was spent by his Department to recover illegally claimed benefits in each year since 1979, in cash and real terms, at 1987-88 prices.

Mr. Portillo: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give his estimate of (a) the amount recovered and (b) the amount illegally claimed but not recovered from social security claimants for each year since 1979, in cash terms and at 1987-88 prices.

Mr. Portillo: Information on which to base an estimate is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Claimants (Medical Examinations)

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services on what basis doctors are recruited and trained to carry out examinations on attendance and mobility allowance claimants; and to what extent their work is monitored.

Mr. Scott: Claimants for the attendance allowance and mobility allowances are examined by doctors who are selected and trained by the regional office senior medical officer from registered medical practitioners who will have either made an application to be considered for this role or been nominated by their peers as suitable for the task.

The doctors selected are usually recruited from among general practitioners within the locality who will have demonstrable knowledge of local socio-economic conditions, established experience in general medical practice and evident expertise in the conducting of medical examinations. Before a doctor is permitted to carry out examinations on attendance and mobility allowance claimants formal instruction is given by the regional office senior medical officer on the background of, and requirements for, the particular benefit. This instruction is supplemented by written guidance notes. Initially, the performance of the examining doctors is closely monitored by the regional office senior medical officer who will institute further training sessions as appropriate; thereafter the doctors' work is regularly monitored by the regional office senior medical officer; but the form and pattern of such monitoring may vary and are dictated by the individual regional office senior medical officer.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the rate of pay for doctors who carry out examinations on attendance and mobility allowance claimants.

Mr. Scott: The fees currently payable for medical examinations for attendance allowance and mobility allowance are as follows:

	Mobility allowance £	Attendance allowance £
In surgery examination	22·30	—
Examination by domiciliary visit (including travelling time)
Up to including 1½ hours	25·70	25·70
Over 1½ hours up to including 2½ hours	38·50	38·50
Over 2½ hours	59·90	59·90

For joint Attendance and Mobility Allowance examinations carried out by domiciliary visit a fee of £48·00 is payable. Where the time taken exceeds 1½ hours £59·90 is payable.

In some Mobility allowance cases claimants are examined by two doctors at a medical boarding centre. Fees are payable on a sessional basis (2½-3½ hours) at £59·90 for the chairman of the medical board, and £52·30 for the member.

Women's Health

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to focus medical and public attention on women's health problems; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: I am pleased to report that plans for the Department to host a one-day conference on women's health on 22 June this year are now well advanced. The conference will be opened by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and will be attended by an invited audience composed mainly of members of voluntary organisations and media dealing with women's health.

Hon. and noble Members of both Houses who are known to have an interest in health matters have also been invited. Applications for tickets have been very high and reflect the level of interest in women's health.

The subjects to be discussed are of considerable interest to women in this country today and cover a wide range of killer diseases and conditions which cause considerable suffering amongst women. The main subjects will be cancers, mental illness, the menopause and osteoporosis. The conference will provide an opportunity for those involved in promoting women's health to meet and hear from eminent speakers. It will also profide a forum for dispelling some of the myths and correcting some of the misunderstandings about women's health.

The media have been invited to attend, so that messages from the conference will be disseminated to women, and those interested in women's health, throughout the country.

Mr. Gummer: My Department will continue to keep in close touch with the agriculture, food and related industries on the progress of proposals in the single market programme, many of which continue the process of harmonising member states' laws to remove barriers to trade. Our objectives are to ensure that harmonisation takes place without discrimination and without imposing greater burdens than it removes; to protect our health status in the animal, plant and fish sectors; and to ensure that British companies have all the information they need with which to meet the challenge and take full advantage of the opportunities which harmonisation will bring.

Monetary Compensatory Amounts

23. Mr. Cran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received since January from pig farmers concerning abolition of monetary compensatory amounts; and what plans he now has to press for the abolition of the monetary compensatory amount scheme.

Mr. MacGregor: I have received many such representations. As I have told the House, I am pressing for the complete elimination of pigmeat MCAs at the current price-fixing. However, some member states do not want to see the system changed, and the negotiation will be difficult.

Potato Marketing Board

24. Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the chairman of the Potato Marketing Board; and what matters were discussed.

50. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture Fisheries and Food what representations he has made to the European Community on the proposals for the substitution of cereals set-aside with grazing land.

Mr. MacGregor: The Community set-aside scheme allows the option to member states to permit land set aside from arable crops to be grazed by livestock. Mr. Donald Thompson: The prospects for beef graziers are encouraging. The average price of fat cattle in Great Britain in the week ended 21 May is provisionally estimated to have been 110·28p per kg liveweight, 11·4 per cent. up on the price in the corresponding week last year. Throughout the EC as a whole, beef supplies are affected by the reductions in dairy cow numbers and this should help to sustain the current firmer tone of the market.

36. Mr. Burns: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress is being made with attempts to devalue the green pound following the recent meeting of the Agricultural Council.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, South (Mr. Brandon-Bravo.

18. Mr. Harris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy on the issue of beamer licences.

Mr. Gummer: Beam trawlers are subject to the general licensing arrangements operated by fisheries departments for quota species. Because of the pressure on the area VII white fisheries, beam trawler licences for those fisheries are only available—with certain limited exceptions—for a replacement vessel where the length, tonnage and engine power of the replacement do not exceed those of the existing vessels.

Badgers

39. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the Government's policy with regard to the protection of badgers in the light of current research into vaccination; and if he will make a statement.

44. Mr. Darling: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to review the licensing scheme for fishing vessels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: We shall be responding in full to the recommendations contained in the 24th report of the Public Accounts Committee in a Treasury minute to be laid before Parliament.

Mr. MacGregor: At any one time CAP arrangements provide for a number of sales schemes from intervention and from the open market. These tend to follow established patterns, but the following sales to non-EC countries, agreed over the past 12 months, have distinguishing features:

Commodity	Date	Quantity (tonnes)	Destination	Sale Price p/lb

52. Mr. Ingram: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has recently received research reports concerning the effects of pollution on the stocks of fish in the fishing grounds off the west coast of Great Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: This Department has extensive continuing programmes of research into the aquatic environment and fish stocks in British waters. Reports of this work are published on a regular basis by the directorate of fisheries research at Lowestoft. The biennial report of the director of fisheries research and reports in the "Aquatic Environment Monitoring" series are available in the Library of the House. A recent report is aquatic environment monitoring report number 17, "Irish Sea Status Report of the Marine Pollution Monitoring Management Group".

The results of this work do not indicate that pollution has any significant effects on fish stocks in the fishing grounds off the west coast of Great Britain or, indeed, any British waters.

54. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the Government's policy with regard to the genetic improvement of livestock; and if he will make a statement.

Sheepmeat Stabilisers

55. Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement concerning the effect so far of the implementation of sheepmeat stabilisers on premium prices.

Mr. MacGregor: The sheepmeat stabiliser came into operation on the 23 May. For the first week of its operation we would expect the variable slaughter premium to be 7·7p/kg less than it would otherwise have been.

63. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next intends meeting representatives of the Farmers Union of Wales to discuss the effect of the implementation of sheep stabilisers.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales—who has responsibility for agriculture in Wales—maintains regular and close contacts with representatives of the Farmers Union of Wales on sheep matters. Mr. Donald Thompson: New provisions on aflatoxin B came into effect on 6 April which extended the previously existing safeguards to a wider range of feedingstuffs. There will be a further extension of controls in December 1988, when maximum levels will be set for certain substances in specified raw materials that have not previous been restricted in this way.

70. Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will invite the Forestry Commission to review its present guidelines for planting under the farm woodlands scheme.

Mr. MacGregor: The practical guidelines provided by the Forestry Commission in connection with the woodland grant scheme will also apply to planting under the farm woodland scheme when this is introduced. In addition, publications giving detailed advice on establishing and maintaining farm woodlands will be available in good time for the introduction of the scheme in the autumn. In the light of this I do not consider revision of guidelines necessary.

Bovine Somatotropin

71. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further representations he has received concerning the testing of bovine somatotropin in the dairy herd; and if he will make a statement.

74. Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food by what number he estimates the United Kingdom pig population would need to be increased so as to achieve national self-sufficiency in pigmeat; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Latest estimates indicate that the United Kingdom is currently more than self-sufficient in pork but only 40 per cent. self-sufficient in bacon and ham. An increase in the pig population approaching 30 per cent. would be needed to achieve national self-sufficiency in pigmeat, provided that this increase was wholly used for the production of bacon and ham.

Breeding Sows

75. Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has of future numbers of breeding sows in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The future number of breeding sows in the United Kingdom will depend on a range of factors which cannot be predicted with any certainty. I regret that I am unable to provide the figures requested.

Mr. Eggar: No.

2,175,838	1,927,294	2,212,976

Civil accommodation for Government Departments is held in the name of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment and managed by the PSA. The rents of leasehold buildings are determined on a strictly commercial and therefore confidential basis.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Student Unions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will place in the Library details of any representations he has received concerning automatic membership of student unions; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will place in the Library a list of those organisations and individuals who made representations to him concerning automatic membership of student unions; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will place in the Library the information he has on compulsory student union membership; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: Students become members of the student union of their university, polytechnic or college of further or higher education by virtue of their being enrolled at the institution. They are not normally required to pay any subscription as a member and can decide whether or not to take part in the union's activities. As indicated in my right hon. Friend's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Thurrock (Mr. Janman) on 18 April, the Government intend shortly to gather up-to-date factual information on the services available to students from their unions. Since the general election I have met the National Union of Students once to discuss the issue of union membership. The issue has also figured during visits I have made to institutions of higher and further education. In addition, over the period 1 June 1987 to 31 May 1988 we have received some 30 letters from hon. Members and members of the public about membership of local unions and a further 30 letters concerning membership of the National Union of Students. The letters have been evenly divided between those in favour of and those opposed to the present system of membership.

I do not consider it appropriate to deposit this correspondence in the Library.

Mr. H. W. Steggles

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he hopes to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for South Hams dated 23 March, enclosing a letter from Mr. H. W. Steggles of Eastern Hill, Middlecombe, Noss Mayo, Plymouth, dated 15 March.

Mrs. Rumbold: I replied to my hon. Friend on 8 June. I regret the delay in replying.

Schools (Expenditure)

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has about the public spending per head of senior school population in pounds sterling for Germany, France, the United States of America and Italy.

Mr. Dunn: For international returns, data for the senior school population are included with non-advanced further education and therefore cannot be identified separately.

Head Teachers

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what evidence he has about the rate at which head teachers are now seeking early retirement, what comparable information he has on previous years; and to what factors he attributes the trend.

Mrs. Rumbold: For teachers as a whole, premature retirements have in recent years consistently accounted for about 60 per cent. of all retirements. Premature retirement has kept open promotion opportunities for teachers and improved the age structue of the profession. Information about premature retirements of head teachers is available only combined with information on college prinicpals and up to 1986-87. The number of premature retirements in these groups fell by 17 per cent. in 1986-87 compared with 1985-86. Pension is based on the best 12 months' salary over the last three years of service. It is likely that teachers were postponing retirement in 1986-87 in order to improve their pensions by awaiting the effect on pensions of the substantial pay increases of 25 per cent. between March 1986 and October 1987. We would expect premature retirements to rise again by 1988-89 as these increases feed through into pension entitlements.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what difficulties are being experienced in the recruitment of headteachers.

Mrs. Rumbold: Good up-to-date information is not available. The interim advisory committee on teachers' pay found no particular evidence of serious recruitment problems affecting heads and deputies. The Department estimates that at January 1988 approximately 300 headteacher posts were vacant, that is only slightly more than 1 per cent. of headteacher posts.

Driving (Minimum Age)

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is his assessment on the effect on the balance of payments current account of raising the minimum age requirement for the driving of (a) motor cars and (b) all motor vehicles to 18 years.

Mr. Alan Clark: Information on which to base an assessment is not available.

Liquor Taxation (Japan)

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is his assessment of the impact on the United Kingdom balance of payments current account of the Japanese Government's present discriminatory system of liquor taxation.

Mr. Alan Clark: We are currently awaiting the Japanese Government's response to the recommendations of the general agreement on tariffs and trade that the discriminatory element in Japanese taxation of imported wines and spirits should be removed. We expect substantially increased exports of Scotch whisky to Japan following tax reform.

North Peckham Task Force

Ms. Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what are the running costs per year of the North Peckham task force;

(2) how much Daniel Levy, the North Peckham task force leader, is paid per year.

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the current volume of Israeli exports to the United Kingdom; what is the make-up of those exports; and what were the comparable figures for each year from 1966 to 1987.

Mr. Alan Clark: The current value of imports from Israel for the first four months to April 1988 are £167.00 million.

These figures should be treated with more than the usual caution because of major changes to customs procedures introduced in January 1988, details of which were given in a reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Hertfordshire, South-West (Mr. Page) on 7 December 1987, at columns 34-35.

Information on the make up of imports, within acceptable cost limits, is given in the tables:

Computers

Mr. Warren: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) to whom the data are given which are supplied by applicants wishing to sell computers who are required to complete his Department's computer questionnaire; and if he will make a statement;

(2) to whom the data are given which are supplied by applicants wishing to sell computers who are required to complete his Department's export licence application,; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Applications for export licences and supporting data are considered by DTI officials and, in many cases, by officials of other Departments from whom the DTI seeks advice.

In the case of applications to export certain items to the proscribed destinations, COCOM partners are also consulted. For this purpose, brief details, which do not identify the exporter, are provided to COCOM partners.

The circulation of a particular export licence application and its supporting documents will depend upon the level of technology involved and the proposed ultimate destination.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Belfast—Dublin Road, Newry (Parking)

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures are being taken to ensure that private entrances and exits, leading on to and off the main Belfast to Dublin road, in the immediate vicinity of the existing customs station at Newry, are kept clear of parked vehicles.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 7 June 1988]: Prohibition of waiting by vehicles in the vicinity of the existing customs station, Newry, introduced by the Department of the Environment (NI) in 1981 and 1982 remain in force. Police and traffic wardens make every effort to ensure that traffic regulations in operation in the area are enforced.

Chernobyl

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the total staff and administration cost to his Department of the Chernobyl accident.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 7 June 1988]: Precise figures are not available but staff costs incurred, in the main by the Department of Agriculture, Northern Ireland, are estimated at around £300,000. Some £70,000 has been spent on the purchase of produce for testing, live monitoring equipment and paint in connection with the operation of the mark and release scheme. A further £12,900 has been paid in compensation to producers affected by the movement restrictions on sheep.

ENERGY

Gas Disconnections

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make it his policy to monitor the numbers of gas disconnections; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The numbers of gas disconnections are monitored by the Gas Consumers Council and Ofgas, and will continue to be so.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the progress of plans to privatise electricity.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Discussions with the industry are continuing satisfactorily and our aim is to introduce legislation at the earliest opportunity.

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he is considering, in his proposals for electricity privatisation, a system of compensating owners of power stations which are not being run at any given time because they are too expensive.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Arrangements governing the future operation of power stations will be set out in the power supply contracts. These should provide proper incentives to generators to provide supplies as economically as possible.

Magnox Reactors

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy which nuclear power station Magnox reactors are currently out of operation; and when he expects each of them to be back in service.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I understand that the following four of the CEGB's Magnox reactors are out of service: Bradwell R1, Trawsfynydd R1, Berkeley R1 and Dungeness 'A' R2. Bradwell R1 and Trawsfynydd R1 are expected to return to service in June while Berkeley R1 and Dungeness 'A' R2 are expected to return in July.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Cyprus

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the United Kingdom continues to act as guarantor power for Cyprus; what information he has as to how many Turkish and Greek troops there are in Cyprus; how many troops from each of these countries are authorised to be in Cyprus; and what estimate he has as to how many non-Cypriots are resident in the Turkish and Greek sectors of the island.

Mrs. Chalker: The United Kingdom continues to fulfil its obligations under the 1960 treaty of guarantee, by consulting our fellow guarantor powers from time to time.

We estimate that there are between 28,000 and 30,000 Turkish troops and between 2,500 and 3,500 Greek troops stationed in Cyprus. The 1960 treaty of alliance provided for 650 Turkish troops and 950 Greek troops. We estimate that there are about 35,000 non-Cypriot settlers in the north. We have no figures for non-Cypriots resident in the south.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Only two Army camps have been brought into use as temporary prisons and these held no untried prisoners on 1 June.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the establishments, other than youth custody or juvenile remand centres, prisons, police stations, or establishments of the armed forces, which were used to hold people remanded in custody awaiting trial before either magistrates or Crown courts on 1 June.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Police cells at certain magistrates' courts were the only other type of accommodation used for untried prisoners on 1 June.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were involved in the security exercise at Gatwick airport on 7 June; how many vehicles were stopped and searched; on whose authority the exercise was mounted; and what was the total cost involved in the exercise.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The security operation held at Gatwick airport on 7 June by the Sussex police was a routine operation and was approved by the Home Office. Because of the nature of the deployment it would not be appropriate to provide details of the number of police officers involved or the costs of the operation. The operation involved no change in the standard force procedures for stopping and searching vehicles.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

McDonald Wheeler Fund Management Ltd.

Mr. Franks: To ask the Attorney-General what is the current position regarding the inquiry relating to McDonald Wheeler Fund Management Ltd.; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The director of the serious fraud office now has the conduct of the inquiry to which my hon. Friend refers. It is being pursued by a team of police officers, accountants and lawyers, but it is not yet complete.

"Spycatcher"

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Attorney-General what has been the total cost so far in terms of legal and other fees, travelling and expenses, Civil Service time and all other charges relating to the worldwide attempts by Her Majesty's Government to prevent the publication and distribution of the book "Spycatcher", including actions to prevent Mr. Peter Wright from receiving royalties from sales.

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of yesterday to the hon. Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick).

Rowntree

The Attorney-General: A request for information was made on my behalf to the trustees of the Joseph Rowntree charitable trust and the Joseph Rowntree memorial trust in exercise of my responsibilities as protector of charity under the Crown, in the light of a report in The Daily Telegraph on 2 June.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Attorney-General whether he consulted the charity commissioners or any other body before making representations to the trustees of the Joseph Rowntree memorial and charitable trusts regarding their charitable responsibilities to their beneficiaries in the context of the proposed takeover of Rowntree plc.

The Attorney-General: The Treasury Solicitor sought information from officials of the Charity Commission as to the likely identities of the charitable trusts referred to in The Daily Telegraph's report of 2 June and requested copies of the relevant trust documents. No other body was consulted before these inquiries were made on my behalf.

Miss M. Murphy

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Attorney-General when the social security commissioners will be ready to send the submission on the appeal made by Miss M. Murphy, promised within 30 days on 12 April, to Mr. A. McGuiness and Miss Murphy.

The Attorney-General: Part II of the Family Law Reform Act 1987 contains a number of provisions which improve the legal position of unmarried fathers. Other plans and priorities will determine when resources can be made available for the purpose of bringing part II into force, but the Lord Chancellor will keep the matter under close review.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Personal Taxation

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue effect in 1988-89 of (a) abolishing the high rate of income tax, (b) abolishing all personal tax reliefs other than the personal allowances, and (c) the net revenue effect of combining both measures.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The direct cost in income tax revenue for a full year at 1988-89 levels of income of abolishing the higher rate of income tax is estimated at £2·7 billion. The direct cost in capital gains tax revenue on disposals in 1988-89 is estimated at £0·2 billion.

Information on income tax reliefs is available only in respect of mortgage interest, retirement annuity premiums, employees' superannuation contributions and the business expansion scheme. The total direct revenue yield from abolishing these reliefs is estimated at £6·7 billion. The capital gains tax cost would be small.

The net effect of abolishing these reliefs and the higher rate of tax would be a yield of some £3 billion. This estimate includes the consequential effects on revenue from capital gains tax on disposals in 1988-89. The income tax component makes no allowance for possible behavioural effects arising from the changes.

Taxation Changes

Dr. Reid: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to publish at the time of his Budget statement a full study of the redistributive effects of the taxation changes he is introducing.

Mr. Norman Lamont: There are no plans at present to add to the substantial amount of information already published on the effect of Budget proposals.

Incomes

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish figures showing, for families with one to four children, the income break-even levels, in £ sterling per week as a percentage of average male manual earnings, at which child benefit entitlement is the same as income tax liability.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The table sets out the weekly income levels for a married man whose wife is not working at which income tax liability equals child benefit entitlement at 1988-89 levels.

Break-even levels

Number of children	£ per week	As a percentage of average male manual earnings[1]
1	107·75	52·0
2	136·75	65·9
3	165·75	79·9
4	194·75	93·9

[1] Average manual earnings for male aged over 21 working a full week are estimated to be £207·40 per week in 1988-89.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give for 1978-79 and 1988-89 or the most recent year available the total income before and after tax at constant prices for (a) the top 1 per cent., (b) the top 5 per cent. and (c) the top 10 per cent. and each 10 per cent. thereafter down to the bottom 10 per cent., including both working and non-working households in the figures and the percentage of income before and after tax accruing to each group.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 7 June 1988]: Estimates for the years 1978-79, 1981-82 and 1984-85 of shares of income, before and after tax, received by quantile groups are contained in "The distribution of income in the United Kingdom 1984-85", published in the November 1987 edition of Economic Trends.

Income Tax

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the income tax remitted to taxpayers at all levels since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The amount of income tax remitted to taxpayers at all levels since 1979 was:

Year (to 31 October)	Amount (£ thousand)
1979	39,617
1980	45,091
1981	55,020
1982	70,143
1983	93,721
1984	126,905
1985	138,468
1986	187,088

Tax is written off where there is no reasonable prospect of recovery—for example, because the taxpayer is insolvent.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report his estimate of the gain to the revenue in a full year of increasing the rates of corporation tax and advance corporation tax, respectively, to 52 per cent.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The yield from increasing the main rate of corporation tax to 52 per cent. would be about £11 billion at 1987 levels of company profits and dividends. The additional yield from increasing the advance corporation tax rate and small companies rate to 52 per cent. would be about £2 billion. These estimates take no account of possible behavioural effects following such a change.

Inland Revenue (Pre-paid Envelopes)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement concerning the decision of the Inland Revenue to cease the practice of enclosing pre-paid envelopes in correspondence with taxpayers.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 29 January 1988 at column 420 and to the Inland Revenue press release of the same date.

Mortgage Interest

Mr. Soley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total cost of mortgage interest tax relief for the United Kingdom as a whole and for England, also expressed in terms of the cost per mortgagor receiving tax relief and the cost per owner-occupied dwelling, for the financial years 1979-80 to 1987-88; and what is the estimated cost in respect of 1988-89.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Estimates for the United Kingdom for the years 1979-80 to 1988-89 and for England from 1979-80 to 1982-83 are given in the table. Figures for 1983-84 onwards include the cost of relief given to non-taxpayers.

Following the introduction of MIRAS in April 1983, regional information on the cost of mortgage interest relief cannot be extracted from Inland Revenue records. The regional distribution of mortgage interest can be derived from the family expenditure survey (FES), but, as the sample size for the FES is relatively small, it is not possible to provide robust estimates of regional trends for the period after 1982-83. Separate figures for England for 1983-84 to 1988-89 are therefore not available.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the total value of mortgage interest relief forgone as tax income by the Inland Revenue, the total number of recipients of this relief and the average amount of relief received per mortgagor, respectively, in the United Kingdom, in England and in Greater London in each tax year from 1978-79 to 1987-88; and if he will give an estimate for 1988-89.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 7 June 1988]: Estimates for the years 1978-79 to 1982-83 have been derived from the results of the survey of personal incomes and are given in the table.

Following the introduction of MIRAS in April 1983, regional information on the cost of mortgage interest relief cannot be extracted from Inland Revenue records. The regional distribution of mortgage interest can be estimated from the family expenditure survey (FES), but, as the sample size for the FES is relatively small, it is not possible to provide robust estimates of regional trends for the period after 1982-83. Accordingly, the following table shows the relevant figures for 1983-84 to 1988-89 for the United Kingdom only. FES data for 1983 to 1985 suggest that about 88 per cent. of total mortgage interest relief is attributable to England and 14·5 per cent. to London. The corresponding percentages for the number of mortgagors are 88 per cent. for England and 10·6 per cent. for London.

Housing (Expenditure)

Mr. Soley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total cost of identifiable public expenditure; according to the main functions for housing in the years 1980-81 to 1987-88; and what was the expenditure per head of population for each of those years.

Mr. Major: The table shows, in £ million and £ per head of the population, public expenditure on the housing function which can be identified as having been incurred in one of the four countries of the United Kingdom.

Figures prior to 1982-83 are not available on a consistent basis because of changes in definition that have taken place between different public expenditure White Papers. Figures for 1987-88 are not yet available. The figures given above cannot be further disaggregated but a more detailed functional analysis of United Kingdom public expenditure can be found in table 2.7 of "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1988-89 to 1990-91" (Cmnd. 288-I).

Departmental Land and Buildings

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table comparable with that given to the hon. Member for Sedgefield (Mr. Blair) in the Official Report, 27 January 1987, columns 229-30, for sales of land and buildings by Departments, including plans for 1990-91.

Mr. Major: The table shows sales of land and buildings by Department for the years 1979-80 to 1990-91. The figures included sales by local authorities and new towns as well as central Government and are consistent with the figures published in the 1988 public expenditure White Paper (Cm. 288).

House Prices

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the assumption on the rise in house prices in 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91 built into the figures given for receipts from sales of housing in table 3.6 Cm. 288-1.

Mr. Major: It is not Government practice to publish assumptions which may be market sensitive.

Interest Rates

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the assumptions on interest rates for 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91 used in calculating table 2.17 of Cm. 288-1.

Mr. Lilley: It is not the practice to give interest rate assumptions, which are market sensitive.

Chartered Accountants

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many chartered accountants are employed in the Civil Service.

Mr. Brooke: About 275, or around a third of fully qualified accountants in the Civil Service.

National Health Service

Mr. Harry Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the employment effect of (a) reducing the income tax take from higher-rate payers by £2 billion in a full year, (b) reducing the income tax take for standard rate payers by £2 billion in a full year and (c) increasing by £2 billion the resources of the National Health Service.

Mr. Major: It has not been the practice to publish estimates of the economic effects of changes in taxation or public expenditure.

Tourism

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals are being made to the European Commission on taxation on tourists, in the light of the introduction of the European single market; and what representations he has received seeking a tourism or landing tax in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Lilley: The Government have made no proposals to the European Commission on taxation of tourists. My right hon. Friend has received a small number of representations about imposing a tax on arrivals in or departures from the United Kingdom.

Pensioners

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is his estimate of the cost of raising the tax allowance to £3,498, £3,848, £4,233, £4,656, £5,122, £5,634, respectively, for single pensioners aged 65 to 79 years;

(2) what is his estimate of the cost of raising the tax allowance to £3,641, £4,005, £4,406, £4,846, £5,331, and £5,864, respectively, for single pensioners aged 80 years and over;

(3) what is his estimate of the cost of raising the tax allowance to £5,538, £6,093, £6,702, £7,372, £8,109 and £8,920, respectively, for married pensioners aged between 65 and 79 years;

(4) what is his estimate of the cost of raising the tax allowance to £5,726, £6,298, £6,927, £7,621, £8,383 and £9,221, respectively, for pensioners over the age of 80 years.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answers 23 May 1988]: The estimated costs of increasing the age allowances from the levels proposed in the 1988 Budget are shown in the tables. All estimates are based on a projection of the 1985-86 survey of personal incomes and are therefore provisional.

DEFENCE

Staff Losses

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence why there has been a consistent loss of professional and technological staff from his Department over the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: The number of MOD professional and technical officers (P and TOs) fell from 23,400 to 14,700 between 1 April 1983 and 1 January 1988. Most of this reduction is accounted for by the transfer out of MOD employment of P and TOs in the royal dockyards (3,200) and the royal ordnance factories (2,700). The balance is attributable partly to the general reduction in MOD manpower numbers and partly to a shortfall in replacing normal losses.

As stated in paragraphs 518 to 520 of the "Statement on Defence Estimates 1988" the problems of recruitment and retention of civilian staff are being tackled in several ways: for P and TOs especially, by improved pay arrangements, a new recruitment strategy, and building on the progress made by the formation of the defence engineering service.

Jaguar

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of the upgrading of the navigation attack system for the Royal Air Force Jaguar aircraft.

Mr. Sainsbury: The update to the Jaguar navigation attack system is nearing completion at a cost of some £40 million.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of the chaff and flare dispensers for Royal Air Force Jaguar aircraft.

Mr. Sainsbury: My noble Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much longer the Royal Air Force Jaguar aircraft will remain in Royal Air Force service.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The Jaguar is planned to remain in service with the Royal Air Force until it is replaced by the European fighter aircraft, which we hope will enter service in the mid-1990s. This process is expected to be completed around the turn of the century.

Tornado

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Tornado F2/3 aircraft have been delivered to the Royal Air Force to date.

Mr. Sainsbury: By the end of May 1988, a total of 94 aircraft had been delivered.

No. 51 Squadron

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence why there is no mention of No. 51 squadron in the appendix to the current year's "Statement on Defence Estimates".

Mr. Ian Stewart: Annex C of volume 1 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988" is primarily concerned with front-line units. 51 squadron is not classified as a front-line unit.

AWACS

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of the strengthening of runways and taxiways at Royal Air Force Waddington for AWACS aircraft.

Mr. Freeman: The cost of strengthening the runways and taxiways at Royal Air Force Waddington for the Boeing E-3 aircraft, AWACS, is £6·5 million. However, the opportunity has also been taken to carry out simultaneously other routine airfield pavement maintenance work at a further cost of approximately £1 million.

Agusta Helicopters

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Agusta helicopters are in service with British forces.

Mr. Ian Stewart: A small number of Agusta helicopters are in service with British forces. It is not our practice to publish numbers of operational aircraft.

Nuclear Test Veterans

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will ask the National Radiological Protection Board to examine the incidence of (a) cataracts, (b) arthritis, (c) diabetes and (d) deformed children amongst nuclear test veterans.

Mr. Sainsbury: As the right hon. Member is aware, the NRPB has after careful consideration of all the data available to it, made recommendations for relevant follow-up studies in its report. The Government have endorsed these recommendations which do not include the diseases referred to, which in any event are not included in any national register.

HMS Hermione

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 27 May, when he expects the investigation into the loss and subsequent discovery of a document concerning routine refit work on HMS Hermione to be completed.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The investigation has been completed. It is not our normal practice to disclose the results of such investigations. However, I am satisfied that the loss of the document in question was accidental and measures have been taken to try and prevent a recurrence.

Gatwick Airport (Exercise)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many troops were involved in the security exercise at Gatwick airport on 7 June; what was the purpose of the exercise; what equipment was deployed; and if any military personnel searched vehicles.

Mr. Ian Stewart: This was a routine security operation in support of the police. Such operations are conducted regularly for deterrent purposes. It is not the policy to give details of operational matters.

EMPLOYMENT

School Leavers

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment in each of the years 1980-81 to 1987-88 and in projections for each year until 1990-91, how many school leavers aged 15, 16 and 17 years entered the employment market; how many of these gained places on the YTS or its predecessors; how many entered employment; how many were unemployed; of those entering the YTS, how many had employee status; and in the years after the introduction of the two-year YTS, how many second year trainees there were and how many of these had employee status.

Mr. Cope: The information which is available is given in the tables:

Litter and Industrial Waste

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people are employed in (a) the United Kingdom, by region, and (b) Basildon, in the collection and disposal of litter and industrial waste; and if he will express the figures as a percentage of the total local work force.

Mr. Lee: Estimates are not separately available for the industries specified. The latest available figures for the regions of the United Kingdom are for employment in all sanitary services (class 92 of the standard industrial classification 1980) in December 1987. These cover refuse disposal, public cleansing, street cleaning, fumigation, disinfection, pest destroying (including treatment against woodworm and woodrot), sewage disposal and cleaning services (including window cleaning, chimney sweeping and units specialising in cleaning industrial, commercial and Government premises).

The information is as follows. The figures are unadjusted for the effects of seasonal variations.

	Employees in employment in the Sanitary Services Industry	Numbers as a percentage of the (Civilian) (Working Population[1])
South East	170,000	1·8
East Anglia	13,000	1·3
South West	40,000	2·0
West Midlands	37,000	1·4
East Midlands	21,000	1·1
Yorkshire and Humberside	31,000	1·3
North West	27,000	0·9
North	14,000	1·0
Wales	12,000	1·0
Scotland	35,000	1·5
Northern Ireland	4,000	0·6

[1] The Civilian Working Population is the sum of Employees in Employment, the Self Employed, and Unemployed.

The available information for Basildon is from the September 1984 census of employment. There were then 500 employees employed in the sanitary services industry. This represents 1 per cent. of the sum of all employees in employment and the unemployed in the area at that time.

Fatal Accidents

Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish in the Official Report (a) the number of fatal accidents investigated by Her Majesty's factory inspectorate, (b) the number of prosecutions arising from these investigations and (c) the number of these prosecutions taken in the Crown court, in each of the last five years.

Mr. Nicholls: The numbers of fatal accidents investigated by the Health and Safety Executive's factory inspectorate are set out in the table:

Year	Fatal accidents investigated
1983	384
1984	414
1985	412
1986	353
1987	365

The numbers of informations laid relating to prosecutions by the factory inspectorate are set out in the table. Not all these cases arose from accidents at work. The proportion of these that relates to fatal accidents and the number of subsequent prosecutions taken in the Crown court could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Information for 1987-88 is not yet available.

Health and Safety Executive (Inspectors)

Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish in the Official Report the location and the number of inspectors at each grade, and each office address, of each Health and Safety Executive office in each year since 1978.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Early Retirement

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any plans to offer to disabled employees the opportunity for early retirement similar to that existing under the job release scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: No. The job release scheme was closed on 31 January 1988 and its resources redirected to measures which would help longer-term unemployed people (including those with disabilities) more effectively. There are at present no plans to replace it.

Employment Training

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action he plans to take to protect projects which provide services for disabled people when employment training replaces the community programme in September.

Mr. Nicholls: Project-based training will be an important part of employment training with some 194,000 project-based opportunities in the first year, broadly the present level of community programme provision. I hope that most current community programme projects will move forward into employment training, bringing with them the worthwhile services that they currently provide.

Enterprise Allowance

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, if he will make a statement on the recent value-for-money scrutiny of the enterprise allowance scheme.

Mr. Cope: The efficiency unit conducted a scrutiny of the enterprise allowance scheme in 1987 as part of its continuing programme of work. I have now considered the report prepared by the scrutiny team. The scrutiny found the scheme offered good value for money, and no major changes to the operation or rules of the scheme are planned. The report makes recommendations for improving the efficiency of the administration of the scheme, and for improving the success and growth of the businesses established through it. My Department has drawn up an action plan in response to the report and we will be introducing a number of pilot projects to implement the team's recommendations. These involve requiring every applicant to complete a simple business plan as a condition of entry to the scheme and reducing the number of monitoring visits made by officials. We also intend to take steps to make more and better training available to those applying for the scheme. I have arranged for copies of the scrutiny report and my Department's commentary to be placed in the Library.

Single European Market

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what advice his Department is giving to trade unions about the creation of a single European market in 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 9 June 1988]: The Government aim, through their awareness campaign on the single European market, to stimulate everyone connected with business to be aware of the challenge of 1992, and to take action accordingly. The opportunities that the single market offers for boosting growth and so increasing employment are important for all union members. We hope that union members will encourage their employers to anticipate and take full advantage of the opportunities.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Sittings of the House

Mr. Amess: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will publish in the Official Report a consolidated list of the occasions which the House has sat later than 1.30 am since 1958.

Mr. Wakeham: I regret that it has not been possible to provide this information in the time available. I will reply shortly.

Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Lord President of the Council (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the total number of (a) Government Bills and (b) private Members' Bills introduced in each Session since 1958;

Elsie Inglis Maternity Hospital

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received in connection with Lothian health board's proposal to close the Elsie Inglis maternity hospital in Edinburgh.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend has received a total of around 330 letters from MPs, individuals and groups.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he proposes to make his decision on the proposal by Lothian health board to close the Elsie Inglis maternity hospital in Edinburgh; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend has today approved a restructuring of obstetric services in Lothian, which means the closure from 1 August 1988 of the Elsie Inglis memorial maternity hospital. He took particular account of the fact that there has been an oversupply and underuse of obstetric beds in Lothian for a number of years and, without change, this would be even worse from 1 August when a consultant-led obstetric service will be available for the first time at Borders general hospital. He also took account of the fact that the board's proposals have the support of its professional advisory committees and that the resources released will be fully available to permit the board to develop and improve services within its area.

Legal Aid

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has made arrangements to deal with cases where, in terms of section 18 of the Legal Aid (Scotland) Act 1986, the court may not modify the loser's expenses in a civil action in which both parties are assisted persons.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This unintended consequence of section 18 will be remedied by the provisions of schedule 4 to the Legal Aid Bill. I have authorised the Scottish Legal Aid Board to deal by write off with cases which arise before the Bill comes into force. In effect, the expenses of losing assisted persons will be borne by the Scottish legal aid fund exactly as if the court had modified them.

Hospital Patients

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people have spent more than three months in hospital in (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland in each year since 1979.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 27 May 1988]: Detailed information including length of stay is held centrally only for NHS hospitals. Corresponding information is not held for private hospitals. Readily available information relates not to individual patients but to discharges (including deaths) of patients from hospital after separate episodes of care. The same patient may therefore be counted more than once. The information in the table relates to the number of discharges of patients after a stay of more than three months from all NHS hospitals, except maternity hospitals, in eayc country and in each calendar year. It does not include people who spent more than three months in hospital and who were still in hospital at the end of the year because information held centrally is incomplete. Many long-stay patients are therefore excluded.

Electricity Generation

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average cost per kilowatt hour of electricity generation from (a) the North of Scotland Hydro-Electricity Board and (b) the South of Scotland Electricity Board.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 28 March 1988]: The average cost of generation, including electricity derived from interchange and purchases, borne by both Scottish electricity boards under their joint generating agreement in 1986-87 was 1·97p per kilowatt hour. An analysis of the boards' costs is contained in their annual reports for 1986-87, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Means-tested Benefits

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his Department's budget devoted to promoting increased take-up of means-tested benefits.

Mr. Portillo: The Department's planned budget for publicising social security is £14 million for 1988-89.

Slimming Products (Safety)

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services when the report of the advisory committee into the safety of slimming products will be available; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Guar gum and glucomannan are widely used as stabilisers in food and are approved for such use under regulations. It is the level of these substances in certain slimming products which has created some concern.

We are seeking expert advice on the potential risks associated with taking these products and expect to obtain that in July. However, if the advice is to cast doubt on the safety of the products we shall then need to consider what action can be taken to control them, without affecting the proper use of these substances as stabilisers in food.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many ambulance service vehicles in England and Wales are used as emergency ambulances; and what proportion are equipped with cardiac defibrillators.

Mrs. Currie: Information is not available centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mortgage Interest

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the cost of providing supplementary benefit to assist with mortgage interest and/or ground rent; what were the numbers of claimants and the average weekly payments for the years 1979 to 1988; and what is the estimate for the current year for the present system of support.

Mr. Portillo: The available figures are shown in the table. Information specifically on assistance with ground rent is not collected centrally nor, prior to 1981, was information on mortgage interest. No specific estimate has been made of expenditure on these items in the current year.

Disabled Persons

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Caernarfon of 19 May, Official Report, column 559, why no meetings have been held with representatives of local authorities on the implementation of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 since October 1987.

Mr. Scott: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) on 7 June at column 573.

Nurses

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the cost of nurses employed by each district health authority in the Mersey region in each of the last five years, showing what percentage of the cost resulted from the employment of agency nurses in each case.

Mr. Newton: The information requested for the latest available five-year period is shown in the table:

Community Care

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the recent statements of the Health Service Commissioner on the issue of community care for mentally handicapped people.

Mrs. Currie: The Health Service Commissioner has investigated a number of complaints relating to community care for mentally handicapped people. We are studying the published reports of these cases and will be considering whether any advice needs to be given to health authorities in the light of them.

Maternity Payments

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women claimed maternity grants in the last year of availability in Kensington; and how many have received social fund maternity payments in the first years of availability.

Mr. Portillo: A total of 726 claims for non-contributory maternity grants were made from 7 April 1986 to 5 April 1987 in the Kensington DHSS local office area. 202 awards for social fund maternity payments were made from 6 April 1987 to 10 April 1988.

Social Fund

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services when information on the first month's operation of the social fund is to be placed in the Library; if he will list the type of information about the social fund to be placed in the Library monthly; if he intends to issue monthly releases to the media to coincide with the placing of information in the Library; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: As I explained in a letter to the hon. Member on 26 May, data for the first month of operation of the social fund have been delayed due to technical problems. These should be resolved shortly. I have arranged for data for May to be placed in the Library next week, as these have not been affected by the same problems. Details of the monthly publication of data on the operation of the social fund were announced in my reply to the hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) on 6 May at column 656. Press inquiries for data will be met by the Department in the normal way.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the latest figures from the quarterly statistical inquiry showing the number of people in receipt of supplementary benefit and the numbers dependent on supplementary benefit.

Mr. Portillo: In November 1987, the latest date for which information is available, 4·85 million people were in receipt of supplementary benefit; and 8 million were dependent on that benefit.

St. Peter's Hospital, London

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make it his policy to intervene to prevent the closure of national referral centres, with particular reference to St. Peter's hospital, Henrietta street, London WC2; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: When there is a proposal for a closure or substantial change of use of a Health Service building, there is a clear procedure set out in HSC (IS) 207, a copy of which is in the Library. This requires health authorities to consult on any such proposal which may then be referred for a final decision to the Secretary of State if the relevant community health council objects to the proposal, but the proposal is supported by the regional health authority.

The relocation of St. Peter's hospital has been agreed by the community health council concerned and it would not therefore be appropriate for Ministers to intervene formally. We have nevertheless asked Bloomsbury health authority to ensure that the detailed plans for the relocation are feasible and that the future role of the St. Peter's group of hospitals as a national centre of excellence in urology and nephrology is safeguarded.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether proceeds from the proposed sale of St. Peter's hospital, Henrietta street, London WC2, will revert to his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: No. The receipts of such a sale would be received by the relevant health authorities. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of North East Thames regional health authority for further details.

Low Income (Scotland)

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish for Scotland tables for 1985 on low-income families.

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Livingston (Mr. Cook) on 27 May 1988 at columns 413-14.

Health Service Closures

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the number of (a) hospitals, (b) antenatal clinics, (c) casualty wards and (d) geriatric units that have been closed since 1979.

Mrs. Currie: It is important to note that closures may be offset or balanced by openings or reprovision elsewhere. The number of units or facilities approved for closure between 1979 and end 1986 is as follows:

		Number
(a)	hospitals/units—total closure	316
(b)	maternity units	67
(c)	casualty wards	Not known
(d)	geriatric units	89

The number of antenatel clinics within the maternity units at (b) is not known.

We expect figures for the year 1987 to be available in the near future.

Student Support

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the terms of reference of the committee reviewing student support; and what interim proposals he has in relation to the increasing use by students of the social security system.

Mr. Portillo: There are no plans to alter the social security entitlement of students in advance of any changes which may be proposed by the student support review, chaired by the Department of Education and Science, the terms of reference of which are:

"To review the present arrangements for the financial support of students studying at first degree level or equivalent in Great Britain and to consider the future basis for such support, having regard to:

(i) the situation and the maintenance needs of students, and the extent to which it is appropriate that those needs should be supported from public funds;

(ii) other actual and possible sources of support which would allow the removal of students from the social security system—including the case for a system involving loans as well as grants, and the contribution of sponsorship to the needs of students on vocationally orientated courses;

(iii) the Government's stated policies for higher education and access to it; and

(iv) arrangements made in other countries with developed systems for the financial support of students."

Benefit Disqualification

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to review the operation of the current benefit disqualification rules.

Mr. Portillo: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the rules governing disqualification for unemployment benefit for voluntary unemployment. There are no plans to change those rules or their operation.

Baby Milk (Free Samples)

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will implement the recommendation in the COMA report entitled "Present-day Practice in Infant Feeding", that free samples of baby milk should not be allowed in hospitals.

Mrs. Currie: Yes. In 1981 the World Health Organisation issued a code on the marketing of breast milk substitutes (the WHO Code) and the report from the chief medical officer's committee on medical aspects of food policy "Present-day practice in Infant Feeding: Third Report" was published in January 1988. Both recommended that samples of baby milks should not be given to mothers.

I have discussed this with the Infant and Dietetic Foods Association of the Food and Drink Federation, previously known as the Food Manufacturers' Federation. At the Government's request the industry has agreed the time is right to discontinue manufacturers' provision to hospitals of free samples and subsidised supplies of baby milks. This change would fully meet, within the United Kingdom, the World Health Assembly's more recent 1986 resolution that Governments should not allow free and subsidised supplies of breast milk substitutes in maternity wards and hospitals. We expect this change to be implemented fully by the end of 1988.

We also agreed that the two instruments for securing within the United Kingdom the aim and principles of the WHO code, health circular HC(83)13 and the FMF code of practice for the marketing of infant formulae in the United Kingdom (the FMF code) should be revised and reissued to take account of this change and in the light of experience since they came into effect in 1983. The main change in the FMF code will be to reflect the cessation of samples and subsidised supplies. We anticipate that the revised health circular and FMF code should come into effect during the autumn.

We intend these changes to coincide with the launch in October of the breastfeeding organisations' new initiative to promote breast feeding, which we welcome. I warmly congratulate the manufacturers on their helpfulness and in particular on their pledge to assist with the new initiative, to which they generously plan to give financial support.

Benzodiazepines

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list those drug companies which supplied benzodiazepines to the National Health Service during each of the years 1978 to 1986 inclusive; and what was the amount of payments made to each of these companies.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 26 April 1988, c.130]: I regret that the list of companies provided in the previous reply was unfortunately incorrect. The correct list of companies supplying proprietary benzodiazepines to the family practitioner services in 1986 is:

DDSA Pharmaceuticals Ltd.
Farmitalia Ltd.
Fisons plc
Hoechst Pharmaceuticals Ltd.
Norgine Ltd.
Roussel Laboratories Ltd.
Roche Products Ltd.
Schering Chemicals Ltd.
Steinhard Ltd.
Upjohn Ltd.
Wyeth Laboratories Ltd.

TRANSPORT

Allerton Park, Knaresborough

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive the report from the inspectors on the public inquiry held to consider the proposals for ingress to and egress from Allerton park, Knaresborough, from the A1.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The inspector has reported on proposals to improve the adjacent section of the A1. The report is being considered jointly by the Secretaries of State for Transport and for the Environment.

Birmingham International Airport

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many near misses have been reported, in the current year to date, involving aircraft flying to from Birmingham international airport; and how many are still under investigation.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Civil Aviation Authority has said that one such airmiss has been reported this year and is under investigation.

Air Traffic Controllers

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many air traffic controllers are currently under technical suspension as a result of airmisses between aircraft over United Kingdom territory.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This is a matter for the management of the National Air Traffic Services.

Settle Bypass

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the cost of the Settle bypass currently under construction; and when completion will take place.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The land and works for the A65 Settle and Giggleswick bypass are estimated to cost £8·6 million. It is planned for completion by the end of the year.

Civil Aviation

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce legislation to give the Civil Aviation Authority additional powers to alter the structure of civil aviation in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We have no plans at present to seek additional powers. The existing statutory framework has proved sufficiently flexible and adaptable to allow the competitive development of airline services.

Air Traffic Controllers (Industrial Action)

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the level of inconvenience to British air passengers travelling to and from European destinations as a result of industrial action by air traffic controllers in various countries; and if he will initiate discussions with Transport Ministers in other European Community countries with a view to establishing employment agreements which prohibit such industrial action.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is kept informed of serious air traffic delays by the Civil Aviation Authority, and by airlines and others in the industry. Delays occur for a variety of reasons. My right hon. Friend does not believe the initiative proposed by my hon. Friend would be a productive or appropriate one at this juncture.

LRT (Chairman)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a copy of his letter to the chairman of London Regional Transport refusing to accept the latter's resignation after the King's Cross underground fire.

Mr. Channon: I am not prepared to make available correspondence conducted on a personal basis.

Railway Closures

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give a table showing since 1979 how many (a) railway stations have been closed, (b) miles of railway line have been taken out of use, (c) stations have ceased to be served on Sundays and (d) stations are no longer staffed at any time.

Mr. Mitchell: The table lists the number of railway stations and route miles of railway line closed to passengers each year since 1979.

	Station	Routes miles of line closed
1979	—	—
1980	—	—
1981	2	0·75
1982	—	27·25
1983	14	36·75
1984	2	—
1985	8	8·75
1986	5	2·5
1987	1	33·75

This total of 32 stations closed should be seen in the context of 88 stations opened or reopened since 1980 (including 16 in Scotland) to give a net increase in stations opened of 56.

Sunday services and the destaffing of stations are management matters for British Rail.

LRT (Signalling)

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give the number of signal failures on London Regional Transport and the capital expenditure at constant prices by London Regional Transport on signalling equipment for each year since 1979.

Mr. David Mitchell: The incidence of routine signal failure is not reportable to my Department. That and the implications for expenditure on routine maintenance and ongoing renewal are matters for the operator.

ENVIRONMENT

Planning Refusal (Dartford)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment why he turned down a planning application at Dartford to develop 1,000 acres for houses, jobs and leisure; and what representations were received from the local community.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend refused planning permission for this development for the reasons contained in the decision letter dated 24 May. I am today sending my hon. Friend a copy of that letter together with a copy of the inspector's report. The report summarises the representations received both in favour of and in opposition to the proposals.

Housing Land (London)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to make more land available for housing in London, so as to offer Londoners the opportunity to remain in London.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Secretary of State's strategic guidance will include guidance on the provision each borough should make in its unitary development plan to meet London's expected overall requirement for new housing in the 1990s. The guidance will be issued, following consultation, early next year.

In addition, we are appointing consultants to conduct a major study of the potential of five areas of east London for housing, mainly for middle and low-income groups.

We are maintaining the pressure on all public landowners to release their underused land for development. Since the land registers were introduced in 1981, some 4,700 acres of such land in London has been brought back into use, much of it for housing.

European Directives and Regulations

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish the list of directives and regulations with their subject matter relating to his Department that have been agreed by the European Economic Community Council of Ministers.

Mr. Moynihan: A list of over 200 environmental measures, including regulations and directives, is given in "EEC Environmenal Policy and Britain" by Nigel Haigh: The second edition of this useful reference work was commissioned by the Department of the Environment as a contribution to European Year of the Environment. I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Libraries of the House. The measures listed are all of interest to this Department although in a number of cases primary responsibility lies in other Departments. Home Improvement Grants

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the cost of providing home improvement grants and what was the number of dwellings involved, for private owner-occupiers, landlords and housing associations, private tenants and public sector tenants; what were the total costs for private owners and tenants for the years 1980 to 1987; and what is the current estimate for 1988.

Mr. Waldegrave: Following are the estimates of the amount of home improvement grants paid and the numbers of dwellings covered by these grants, with the local authorities' expenditure on administration of home improvement and home insulation grants.

Local Authorities (Subsidies)

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what subsidy has been paid and is estimated to be paid in respect of English local authorities for the financial years 1979-80 to 1988-89 from the Exchequer, both in total and expressed as a subsidy per dwelling for the total number of dwellings in local authority control and in respect of those authorities in receipt of subsidy; and what is the position, expressed in similar terms, for rate fund contributions, for both negative and positive contributions.

Mr. Waldegrave: Housing subsidy up to 1980-81 was paid under a different system, so I am using 1981-82 as the first year. The information requested is shown in the tables. The rate fund contribution figures (RFCs) are net amounts. The 1987-88 and 1988-89 figures are estimates. Only a provisional housing subsidy figure is available for 1988-89 at this stage in the year.

House Building

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about the level of investment in residential construction, expressed as a percentage of gross domestic product, for the European and other major developed nations.

Mr. Trippier: International differences in housebuilding costs, population growth and internal migration affection comparisons of this kind.

The available information given in the table is taken from the "OECD National Accounts" vol II detailed tables 1973-1985.

Abercrombie House, East Kilbride

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy not to enter into any arrangements to sublet any part of Abercrombie house, East Kilbride.

Mr. Chope: No.

Rating Reform

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will take steps to ensure that residential volunteers carers who receive only a nominal subsistence allowance will be exempt from the community charge.

Mr. Howard: I refer the hon. Member to what was said by my noble Friend the Minister of State during the Committee stage of the Local Government Finance Bill in another place on 24 May, at columns 814-15. The matter is currently under consideration.

Homelessness

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the number of homeless households in priority need in England in each year since 1979; and if he will give this information for England as a whole and for each district council and London borough.

Mr. Waldegrave: The estimated numbers of households accepted by local authorities under the homelessness provisions of the housing Acts, are derived from quarterly returns. The figures for England are in the table. I regret that in the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary to the hon. Member for Redcar (Ms. Mowlam) on 18 May at column 481 the acceptance figures quoted for 1979 to 1987 were those for 1978 to 1986.

	Total acceptances	of which priority need
1979	57,200	55,030
1980	62,920	60,390
1981	70,010	65,530
1982	74,800	69,930
1983	78,240	71,590
1984	83,550	76,760
1985	94,530	87,540
1986	105,280	96,490
1987	112,730	102,440

The readily available information on priority need acceptances by individual authorities comes from their housing investment programme returns. The figures appear in column B5 of the "HIP1 all items print" for each of the years 1981-82 to 1983-84, column B6B for 1984-85 and column C1B for 1985-86 and for 1986-87; copies of these documents are in the Library. In some cases, figures in HIP returns may differ slightly from those reported in the quarterly returns.

Landfill Sites

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many landfill sites in current use exist in Warwickshire; and how many have been identified as emitting methane or carbon dioxide.

Mr. Moynihan: I am advised by Warwickshire county council that there are 98 landfill sites currently in use in Warwickshire, of which nine have been identified as emitting landfill gas.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what regulations exist covering the control of landfill sites; and if he has any plans to review their working.

Mr. Moynihan: Landfill sites are licensed by waste disposal authorities under the Control of Pollution Act 1974. Clarification of the types of activity which are and are not subject to licensing is contained in the Licensing of Waste Disposal Regulations 1976 and 1977, which will be superseded by the Collection and Disposal of Waste Regulations 1988 in October next. We expect to announce shortly our conclusions on proposals for legislative changes to improve arrangements for waste disposal.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how often disused landfill sites are inspected and by whom; what record of such visits exists; and if the public are permitted to inspect such records.

Mr. Moynihan: District councils have a duty under the Public Health Act 1936 to inspect their districts from time to time for the detection of statutory nuisance which may be caused by, inter alia, any accumulation or deposit which is prejudicial to health or is a nuisance. In general, Government advice to authorities is that information collected from exercises of this kind should be made available to the public.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many explosions have occurred on or near landfill sites as a result of methane or carbon dioxide gas in each year since 1960.

Mr. Moynihan: This information is not held by my Department.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes he plans to the laws which control special wastes and the arrangements for monitoring breaches in disposal licences.

Mr. Moynihan: We plan to issue a consultation paper with proposals to amend the Control of Pollution (Special Wastes) Regulations 1980 later this year. Responsibility for monitoring that conditions specified in disposal licences are complied with rests with waste disposal authorities. It is for each authority to make suitable arrangements for this.

Palace of Westminster (Water Samples)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list each of the occasions since May 1987 when each of the shower heads, water tanks central heating and all other water tanks and systems at the Palace of Westminster were sampled; if he will publish the results; who carried out the monitoring; and whether any action has been taken.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 7 June 1988]: Routine testing of drinking water supplied direct from the water authority's main is not normally required. But bacteriological and chemical tests have been carried out on four occasions since May 1987 for the reasons shown in the table.

Date	Location	Reason for test	Result
21 May 1987	Palace of Westminster Engineers Control	Warm Water issuing from drinking water tap	Sample was chemically and bacteriologically suitable for drinking. Problem overcome by increasing lagging in adjacent hot water pipe.
4 February 1988	Norman Shaw North	Dirty Water	Samples were chemically and bacteriologically suitable for drinking. Problem probably caused by work on Bridge Street site disturbing the water main.
22 February 1988	Sales Office and PSA Tea Point	Complaint about skin irritation	Water samples would not be expected to cause any skin irritation.
10-13 May 1988	Palace of Westminster Kitchens	Outbreak of illness in House of Lords	Preliminary results shows adequate chlorine levels and no colorform organisms were detected.

Note: The samples were analysed by the laboratory of the Government Chemist.

Water for hot water services is stored at 60°C and kept at 50°C in the distribution system. No water samples have been taken from shower heads. Nor has water quality sampling been carried out on central heating water tanks.

The cooling towers of the air conditioning system in the Palace and the standby generator serving the underground car park are dosed to minimise microbiological contamination. The water quality is tested by an approved specialist contractor, Betz. All the tests carried out since May 1987—August and November 1987 and February and May 1988 were satisfactory. In addition, the water in the air conditioning system and boiler plant is chemically tested every month by the same company. All the results have been satisfactory since May 1987.

Water sampling is undertaken in accordance with a PSA technical instruction (No. 22) which incorporates the standards detailed in an EEC directive and current DHSS guidelines.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 134

SESSION 1987–88

23rd May-10th June 1988

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
